HARVEST FESTIVAL AT ST. THOMAS

Sacred Edifice Beautifully Decorated—The Services Were Largely Attended

Harvest Festival services were held in St. Thomas' Church yesterday, and notwithstanding the inclement weather, were well attended. The interior of the church was appropriately decorated with grain, fruit and flowers. The services throughout were in keeping with the occasion and the discourses by the Rector Rev. Rural Dean Beamish were most appropriate. In the morning after special prayers relating to the harvest had been said, and hymns had been sung, the sermon was given. Before announcing his text, the Rector referred to the evidence in the church of God's goodness in providing the necessaries of life. In God we live, move and have our being. We were objects of His love and by His kind providence we are permitted to use the fruits of the harvest, which should be used for His honor and glory. In these products we see His kindness and goodness towards us.

The Rector chose as his text a portion of the 4th verse of the 10th chapter of Acts: "Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God."

The divine said that Cornelius summed up in his life the moral and divine law. He was a good man and his goodness was recognized by God. Prayers and alms were essential; one was as important as the other. Cornelius realized this in his life and an angel was sent to tell him he had met with divine favor. Prayer and alms should be offered up to God on principle and not on impulse. In referring to the giving of alms the divine said that a regular systematic and proportionate way of giving as God had prospered us should be carried out. In this regard we should make sacrifice. Nothing was plainer than the law of sacrifice. God gave His only Son as a sacrifice for mankind. Christianity means giving from the beginning to the end. Christian giving is a measure of our love to God; and we should give a consecrated offering. Give to God as He has prospered us, and we should teach our children to give the same as we teach them to pray. Let us learn to offer up to God with our prayers of thanksgiving our alms also, and God would speak to our hearts and consciences and bless us.

The music furnished by the choir at both services was of a high order. Mrs. A. P. Allen in the morning took the solo parts in the choral communion service and in the evensong a solo: "A Song of Thanksgiving," by Francis Allister. In the morning a Thanksgiving anthem: "O Clap Your Hands," by Edward Turner, with a quartette, composed of Mrs. Allen, Miss E. Lavoie, Mr. Palls and Mr. M. Lavoie.

TURKISH FLEET'S FATE IS STILL UNCERTAIN

Reports Vary as to Result of Engagement—Italians say Three Battleships were Sunk—Turks Admit Loss of One Cruiser—Fleet Safe in Constantinople—Peace Proposals by Germany

ROME, Oct. 1.—The Admiralty explains that the destruction of a Turkish torpedo boat at Prevesa was due to the fact that it had been learned that Turkish torpedo boats were gathering at that place with the intention of harassing Italian transports and traders at seaports. The Admiralty thereupon took the precaution to order that they be driven away from Prevesa, which port was then bombarded.

The report of the Duke of Abbrazzi, the commander of the torpedo flotilla, on what happened is as follows:—

"I arrived off Prevesa on the morning of September 29 and established a blockade. The commanders of the flotilla at 3 o'clock signaled that two Turkish torpedo boats had left Prevesa in quick succession.

"Our flotilla chased the first which tried to escape to the northward. After a brief exchange of shots the Turkish boat steamed toward the shore, where she was stranded, set afire and placed hors de combat.

"Two destroyers which chased the second Turkish torpedo boat returned immediately to Prevesa, undamaged. I have telegraphed the officers my satisfaction at the way in which they carried out the manoeuvre."

ATHENS, Oct. 1.—The Greek merchant ship Aster reports that as she was leaving Prevesa two Italian destroyers endeavored to intercept two Turkish destroyers that were leaving Prevesa by firing blank shells. The Turks fired twice in reply, whereupon the Italians fired and pierced the hull of one of the Turkish destroyers, which was then run ashore by her men.

The captain of the Aster says that eight of the crew were drowned, and that the commander of the boat was killed. The other Turkish boat reached Prevesa safely.

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 2.—The fate of the Turkish fleet is still uncertain. The Turkish Ministry of Marine admit the loss of only one cruiser, reporting the rest of the fleet to be safe at Constantinople.

From Italian sources comes the report that three Turkish battleships have been sunk and the others captured by the Italian squadron in the Dardenelles.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 2.—The German ambassador is reported to have laid a draft of peace proposals before the Turkish Government in the hope of avoiding a general European war.

AUSTIN, Pa., Oct. 2.—Thirty-six bodies of victims of Saturday's bursting dam catastrophe were recovered to-day. The local authorities have placed the death list at three hundred, but the State officials think it will be nearer a hundred and fifty. It is admitted to-day that the dam was known to be unsafe for years.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

DIVISION COURT SITTING.

Division Court was held here this morning before Judge Fraleck. A number of cases were brought up and disposed of.

HOME WEDDING.

A quiet event occurred at the home of Mrs. Wm. Bennett, when her only daughter, Miss Stroud, was united in marriage to Mr. Herbert Emerson, of Belleville. The bride was dressed in fine navy blue silk. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. Lottee, Baptist minister, of Rochester, N. Y.

MRS. LEACH BURIED.

Mrs. George Leach, who died on Saturday at the family residence on College Hill, is survived by two sons, Dr. W. E., of Calloway, Minn.; and A. J. of St. Catharines and two daughters: Mrs. D. Shafter, of Mayville, N. Y., and Mrs. G. Stewart, at home. The remains were interred this afternoon, services at the house being conducted by the Rev. A. M. Hubly, of the Reformed Episcopal church.

RED PAINT.

I have painted towns and cities in the good oldfashioned way, and I tell you, William Henry, that such painting doesn't pay. I am in the sere and and yellow, and my life's not worth a darn! I am working as the butler of a fourth-rate livery barn; I am everybody's servant, butt for everybody's jeer; even mules reach out and kick me when they see me standing near. I might own this blooming village—this is truth without a taint—if I only had the money I have blown for crimson paint. I might ride in chugchug wagons, I might cut all kinds of dash, if those scarlet decorations could be realized in cash. To us poor old worn out codgers memories are running sores; we are running trifling errands, we are doing childish chores, taking kicks and jeers and curses for the pennies that they yield, just to keep our bones together till we land in Potter's Field, and our thought of youthful folly makes us sick at heart and faint—we might live in peace and honor but for ventures in red paint!

WALT MASON.

FIRE IN A DWELLING.

At 4.30 on Sunday afternoon the fire brigade was called to the residence of Mr. William Donohue on Grove Street, where a fire had broken out. Before the flames were extinguished damage to the extent of $1,000 was done to the building and contents. The house, which is of the Queen Anne style, is new, having been built only a year ago, and was up-to-date in every respect. How the fire originated is not exactly known. Mrs. Donohue was home at the time, being in the front part of the house. Detecting an odor of smoke, she made an investigation and was surprised to find the rear part of the premises on fire. An alarm was sounded and the brigade was soon on the scene and had a stubborn fight for some time. The kitchen and dining room were destroyed and also the portion upstairs over them. Mrs. Donohue had her hair badly singed when she opened the door leading from the dining room to the kitchen, where the fire evidently originated. The loss sustained is partially covered by insurance.

SENT TO HOSPITAL.

The ambulance was called out yesterday afternoon to remove to the hospital an Italian who is sick. He was employed on the sewer construction in the city.

C.N.R. TRENTON LINE APPROVED

The C. N. R. Toronto to Trenton line which was inspected in Saturday by Assistant Chief Engineer Simmons of the Board of Railway Commissioners has been granted the customary certificate of approval, and the line will be opened for business one week from to-day.

PLANT TULIPS NOW.

O. G. St. Frere, secretary of the Toronto Horticultural Society, is sending out word to those who want to beautify Toronto, that now is the time to plant Darwin or May flowering tulips, which bloom in Toronto in June, when there is a scarcity of other flowers. He advises that they be planted in clumps of six or a dozen in a border and the planter will be repaid.

HIS LEG CUT OFF.

Robert Larter, a G.T.R. brakeman living at Belleville, had his right leg cut off below the knee last night in the freight yards at Tecumseth street, Toronto. He was removed in the police ambulance to Grace Hospital. Larter was standing on the tracks behind the caboose of a freight from the east awaiting orders when the train shunted, knocking him down, and the trucks passed over him.

A telegram received this afternoon states that the injured man died this morning.

WAS GIVEN SIX MONTHS.

A young man named William McCaw was this morning before Judge Deroche convicted of theft and also of setting fire to a swale and thereby endangering property. Some time ago the accused, who is but 17 years of age, broke into Mr. Charles Diprose's residence in Madoc Township and stole a razor and also set fire to grass and rubbish in a swale, which was extinguished before it reached Mr. Diprose's barn and outbuildings. McCaw was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison on the charges preferred against him, the sentences to run concurrently. Mr. Anderson, County Attorney for the Crown, the accused being undefended.

REINDEER FOR NORTH.

EDMONTON, Sept. 27—Forty-three reindeer from northern Newfoundland arrived in Edmonton yesterday. They will be taken by rail as far as Stony Creek, sixty miles north of Edmonton and from that point they will be taken overland to Athabasca Landing. Here the reindeer will be placed in scows and floated down the Athabasca river to Fort Smith, which is their destination. They are to be used in place of dogs for carrying purposes in long reaches of the north.

DEAD AT 108

ST. IGNACE, Mich, Sept. 29.—Chief Satago, the last great Sachem of the once powerful Chippewa nation, is dead here at the age of 108 years. Once monarch of vast hunting grounds in the Straits region, the old warrior died in poverty.

The poet Longfellow obtained from Satago much of the material on which was based his epic on Indian life, "Hiawatha."

THOUSANDS INVADE PRAIRIE PROVINCES

Over 95,000 United States Settlers are Coming in Every Summer

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—The extraordinary influx of United States farmers into the Canadian West during the past year has been emphasized in a striking manner by a statistical statement from J. Bruce Walker, chief commissioner of immigration for the Dominion Government, Winnipeg, which was made public last night by the Canadian Northern Railway, having been sent them in response to a recent enquiry. Last year, if Mr. Walker's estimates are correct, a record was made in this rush of American farmers, the number of actual settlers from the western states having considerably surpassed all expectations and the amount of capital brought in by these men being so large as to cause incredulous amazement among the east. The majority of the new citizens, it is said, have settled down to extensive farms along the Canadian Northern lines, bringing mechanical power into play for breaking the virgin prairie and harvesting their crops.

Mr. Walker's statement declares that no fewer than 65,269 United States settlers crossed the border between April and August of last year; divided as follows: April, 20,413; May 14,194; June, 10,943; July, 9,100; August, 10,490. During the same months in 1911 the statment shows an even larger total of 66,974, divided: April, 16,397; May, 15,411; June, 12,035; July, 11,012; August, 12,116. It will, therefore, be noted that, while the flood in April this year was lower by about 3,000, the four later months all show substantial increases over the same months in 1910. Mr. Walker further points out that the total estimated wealth brought in in stock, cash and effects, by American immigrants, April to August, inclusive, 1910, was $65,500,000. This year the total estimated wealth brought in for the same period was $66,700,000. This implies, it will at once be seen, an average wealth of about $1,000.

It is not generally known that this trek of the western United States farmers is causing no little worry to their former country. Several representative journalistic parties have toured the Canadian West this summer to try to find the reason why. One and all they have gone back to their newspapers and magazines impressed with the tremendous possibilities of the new land, and they are coming to realize the futility of attempting to stem the tide. Information coming from Chicago makes it appear that the movement has now attracted the executives of the states of Colorado, Idaho and Wyoming. Governors John Shaforth, James A. Hawley, and J. D. Carey, are said to have held a conference with A. F. Hullit, commissioner-general of the Natoinal Association of Immigration, in Illinois City, and they are stated to have discussed plans for stopping the flood into Canada, and to have expressed willingness to expend a million dollars to advertise the advantages of various sections of the United States for home making purposes.

HARD LUCK OF A YOUNG BRITON

DETROIT, Sept. 29.—Albert Edward Crozier, grandson of the late Archbishop of Canterbury; son of Lieut. Surgeon George Crozier, of the British Army, now stationed at Malta, and nephew of Gen. Sir Frederick Benson, also of the English military service, is at present a truck driver in the employ of a distillery in Walkerville, Ontario, and very sorry he left his easy home life in England to seek fortune in the new world.

Unaccustomed to hard labor and timid, his earnings are small, and he is compelled to reside at McGregor Mission, a charitable institution. His ambition to make his own way has vanished. He has communicated with his parents, and is hoping soon to receive funds to return home. He is 20 years old. He sailed for the United States a little more than two months ago with a capital of $500.

Crozier spent this for board at a New York hotel while trying to find a job in the metropolis. Then he went to Toledo, and worked in a restaurant. He soon tired of that and came to Detroit, crossing the river to Canada. No work there, so he returned to Detroit, and asked aid of a minister. The latter got him a job in an automobile factory, but the work was too hard for his slight physique, so he quit. This week he found a place with the Walker Company. Young Crozier is highly educated.

PARLIAMENT CALLED

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—The Canada Gazette contains notice calling Parliament pro forma for Saturday, November 8. As the proclamation does not state that the House will meet for "despatch of business," the date can be changed to meet the views of the new Government. A new Parliament always meets on a Wednesday, and November 8 or November 15 are regarded as the most likely dates on which the House will meet.

CURRENT COMMENT

Italy is certainly carrying the war into Africa.

In the selection of his cabinet, Mr. R. L. Borden will pick whom he pleases, and, no doubt, please whom he picks.—Telegram.

The Liberals should throw aside the reciprocity plank from their platform, if for no other reason thatn that it has so many "nots" attached to it.—Spectator.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley denies, as was reported, any intention of resigning his seat in Parliament. Many of the Conservative members in the House of Commons will hail this announcement with pleasure.

The taxation of Ireland, far from decreasing, has risen by nearly two millions a year, though the population has fallen 260,000. The cost of home government has risen from £1 4s 6d to £1 15s per head of population.

A telegram from Ottawa says applications for all sorts of places, from High Commissionership and portfolios down, are being showered upon Mr. Borden, and to all of them he is promising "consideration" and saying nothing more.

The Globe's daily foreshadowing of the Borden Ministry reminds us of a reply given to a reporter upon one occasion when, asked what was to be done in a certain case, his reply was that "he did not know, as he had not seen the Globe that morning."

Our Liberal friends are now worrying as to what will happen Hon. Clifford Sifton. They need not worry: he has still a great work to do in striving to ensure the conservation of those natural resources which the Liberal party seemed so anxious to give away to the U. S.—Geulph Herald.

An ardent Grit, discussing the question of annexation to a Liberal more sensible than himself, said, "Oh, you know that that kind of talk is only fit for the back townships." "Yes," replied the gentleman addressed, "and a good many of the front townships too, judging by the votes cast.

"What are the Intelligencer's views as to the composition of Mr. Borden's Cabinet?" asks a correspondent. The Intelligencer offers no opinion on that subject. That is the function of the Grit journals who are forming Cabinets all the time, which, no doubt, will be of great assistance to Mr. Borden.

It was at first heralded to the world that Mr. F. F. Pardee, in West Lambton had been re-elected by hundreds of a majority. The official report only gives him 89, the smallest since this riding was created in 1882, and had the people had another week to consider the reciprocity pact he would have been defeated.

A telegram from Ottawa of Sept. 29th says: "It is counted significant of Ottawa politics that the two successful candidates in the recent elections have an advertisement in the local papers that persons seeking government appointments must apply at an office they have opened at certain hours. They add that 'persons applying at their private residences' will not be considered." These unfortunate members are to be pitied. The curse of politics is patronage.

In the county of Wright, province of Quebec, the Conservative candidate announces his intention of contesting the election on the ground of corruption and stuffing of the ballot boxes. Mr. Cousineau states that in one ward in the city of Hull, a poll returned 14 more ballots than there were names on the voters' lists for that polling sub-division. He alleges that he has secured a large number of witnesses who will swear that money was scattered broadcast throughout the county, by Mr. Devlin's supporters and that unfair means were taken to ensure his defeat in the election.

Very much like a whale. A telegram from Washington of Sept. 29th, says: "It was learned to-day that the American navy expert who has recently been abroad has brought back the details of a remarkable new British torpedo, which is effective at ten thousand yards, or nearly three times the range of the most effective American Whiteheads now in use. The existence of this powerful British weapon has been kept a secret, and only by chance was information obtained. The American officer who obtained information was aboard ship with British experts discussing developments in gunnery. In a moment of inadvertency one of the British officers remarked that their newest torpedoes had a range of ten thousand yards.

"THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE."

Announced for appearance in this city to-morrow evening at Griffin's Opera House is Chas. A. Sellen's Merry Musical Extravaganza, "The Cat and the Fiddle." This is the first of its kind since the Hanlon's Superba and Fantasma, and is being welcomed as a decided relief from the stereotyped musical comedy. Chas. A. Sellen is the first to exploit the rich field of musical extravaganza in late years and he has been meeting with gratifying success in all parts of the country. One not only is entertained with up-to-date music, songs, dances and clever jokes galore, but besides all these good things, countless wonderful tricks, startling illusions, unaccountable appearances and disappearances and beautiful transformations crowd the stage of "The Cat and the Fiddle" during its twenty scenes. Indeed, one feels as if one had been transported to a veritable fairyland and leave the theatre at the close of the piece rubbing their eyes and wondering if it all really happened. Prices 25c., 35c., 50c., 75c., $1.00, $1.50. Plan now open at Doyle's.

SAYS HOT RICE IS ONE CAUSE OF CANCER

Men, Served Before Women, in China, Attacked Oftener Medical Journal Asserts.

The ninth annual report of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund, just made public, contains many items of interest and importance, not the least of which is the assurance that cancer is not increasing. The report embraces the proceedings of the 10th meeting of the General Committee, as well as the report of the eminent Dr. Ernest F. Bashford, General Superintendent of Research.

Commenting on the report, The New York Medical Journal says:

"The increase of death from cancer from 1901 to 1909 is referable to certain anatomical regions and not to others. * * * For the first time, avers the report, it is fully demonstrated that it is wrong to make statements of a disquieting nature on the increase of cancer in general.

"The practice of peculiar customs, involving subjection of particular parts of the body to chronic irritation provokes cancer in organs from which it is absent when these conditions do not obtain; such customs are the use of the kangri (a portable fire basket) in Kashmir, the chewing of betel nut and the use of very hot rice in China.

"It is interesting to note that cancer of the oesophagus is commoner among men in China than among women, and this has been attributed to the fact that men are served first, and the women, receiving their rice only when it has cooled, are not exposed to irritation by the hot food.

"The introduction into civilized communities of these foreign practices would probably cause similar cancers. We are warned, however, that the assumption that irritation is really an important causative factor of cancer is justifiable only for certain forms occurring in particular regions. Further study along these lines is necessary.

"The data show that heredity plays a part in the development of cancer of the breast in mice, but, without wishing to minimize its important influence, it is necessary to warn against needless alarm or the awakening of pessimistic anticipations of the outlook on future efforts to cope with cancer. As to mice, an effort is now being made to obtain by selection a breed of mice with diminished susceptibility to cancer; hereditary predisposition is only one of the factors in play.

"Recent experiment shows that cancer has all the properties which distinguish the normal tissues of one species from those of another species; each tumor is peculiarly and genetically related to the individual in which it arises. The genesis and the growth of cancer are distinct phenomena which must be separately investigated. There is apparent validity in the conclusion that the cancer cell is a biological modification of the normal cell with many inherent properties of the latter.

"It becomes increasingly evident that the treatment of cancer is not to be sought along lines of conferring passive immunity. A considerable number of cases of natural healing of spontaneous malignant new growths have been observed in mice affected with spontaneous cancer.

"The changes leading to natural cure appear to depend on an altered condition of the cell and its contents rather than on an alteration in the general condition or constitution of the affected animal. Means must be devised for elucidating the nature of the change in the cell before curative measures can be discovered."

CANADIAN NORTHERN GUARANTEE SETTLED

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—"The matter of our Federal bond guarantee is now settled," said Sir William Mackenzie, of the Canadian Northern Railway.

In view of the statements that have been made to the effect that the guarantee would have to be approved of by the incoming Government, Mr. Mackenzie's assurance is an important one. His visit here, he stated, was on departmental business. It is understood to be in connection with the inspection of the Toronto-Trenton line by the Railway Commission heads and the Minister of Railways.

FOUGHT IN A GRAVEYARD

Slovaks and Roumanians Mocked at Each Other's Crosses

A sanguinary free-fight between Slovaks and Roumanians occurred in a cemetery in Hungary the other day, on the occasion of the consecration of two crucifixes there. The cause of this extraordinary collision is thus stated: Both the Slovak and Roumanian inhabitants of the village decided to erect a crucifix in the cemetery, but as they could not agree regarding some trifling details, the parties resolved to raise two crucifixes, which were consecrated simultaneously. The Slovaks mocked at the cross of the Roumanians and vice versa, and after [illegible] sermon of the Roumanian Pope a [illegible] fight followed, knives, and later, [illegible], being freely used. When the gendarmes succeeded in separating the hostile parties and restoring order thirteen persons were lying in the cemetery seriously wounded. One of the injured died before he could be removed to a hospital.

TIPS FOR CONDUCTORS

German Passengers Are Liberal with Street Car Fare

A feature that surely must distinguish the street car system of Germany from that of any other country is the practice on the part of a large percentage of passengers of giving the conductor a "tip." The average fare on German street cars, including those of the capital, is two cents; but at a moderate estimate fully one-third of the passengers hand the conductor another cent. This is usually done by ladies, though it is common enough with the men, the idea probably being that of securing the support of the conductor in case of trouble. That the gratuities amount to a considerable sum in the course of a year is shown by a trial in Hamburg, arising out of a dispute between the company and one of its condubtors, in which the court assumed the gratuities to amount to nearly $100 each year. The court wisely deduced that the income from tips must be considerable from the fact that very low wages were paid to the conductors in comparison with the motormen.

THE mere fact that a young man takes porridge for his breakfast is not especially significant.

But when the young man happens to be the future ruler of the British Empire, the fact becomes important.

His diet and exercise are guided and watched over by wise and great physicians. Regularly at breakfast he eats porridge.

FRENCH HISTORIAN ATTACKS MASONRY

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—Before a large audience at the Monument National, under the auspises of Henri Bourassa and Le Devoir, the secrets of Free Masonry were revealed by Gustave Gautherot, a French historian. His address was illustrated by lantern slides showing Masonic Rites with ordeals of Swords and other paraphernalia. Detailed explanation was given of these features and Masonic signs and passwords were given.

Local Free Masons are in a state of wrath over the lecture. They declare that none of the real secrets of the order were revealed and there is talk of some form of public protest.

Professor Gautherot made a fierce arraingment of Free Masonry, declaring it had been the cause of strife from its inception and saying that the Free Masons were behind the French revolution.

WIFE MADE HER HUSBAND PRISONER

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—When Lieut. Miller, of the West 125th St. Police Station, answered a telephone call yesterday afternoon, an excited woman called for a policeman right away at 499 West 135th Street. She said that her husband had gone violently insane and that she feared he might kill her if he succeeded in escaping from his bedroom, where she was holding him prisoner. Lieut. Miller dispatched Patrolman Marron to the Highland Apartments at that address and he returned in about an hour with a strange tale.

"Lieutenant, it was a Mrs. J. Eagle that sent in that call. Her husband wasn't crazy, but he was hopping made, and I don't know as I blame him. When I got there, I found a rope leading through all the rooms. It was tied to the door of the bedroom, wound around a chair, anchored to the stationary bath tubs in the kitchen and noosed around every other fixture in the flat.

"Inside the room was a man, beating on the door. I told him I was a policeman and asked him what he wanted. He said: 'Just let me out. I've been here for twenty-four hours. All I've had to eat is a few scraps she threw over the transom. I went in here to take a nap a day ago, after an argument with her, and she shut me up. I'm a respectable hotel manager, and just got back from Atlantic City ten days ago, after managing a hotel there all season.

"I let him out and he made a bee line to get the first drink of water he said he'd had for a day. He started to pack up, to leave her for good, he said, and she objected, telling me that some of the things were hers. I advised him to take only those things she admitted were his, and he exclaimed, 'I don't think I'll wait to pack up,' and hurried out."

MAKING OF CARPETS.

They Were First Used in Europe to Cover Tables.

The primary use of carpets in Europe was to cover tables. The first of these so-called carpets were embroidered—not woven—fabrics, and were made in French cloisters, about 1,000 years ago. The manufacture of carpets in Europe did not begin until the reign of Henry IV. of France. In England the industry was established about 1750 by a French artisan, who, being at odds with his own country, fled thither.

Carpet-making, as a modern industry, was first developed in France. That country had large factories and a monopoly in Europe of the art of carpet-weaving when a rush-strewn floor was the rule even in the royal palaces of Britain. But the edict of Nantes, that great dispenser of French artisans and artistry, caused many of the carpet craftsmen to cross the channel. They settled at Bristol, Axminster and other places in the southwest of England. From there the secrets of the industry spread to Glasgow, Kidderminster and the towns of Yorkshire. These places are still the great carpet-weaving centres of Great Britain.

An Alternative.

Sweet Girl "Well, I read the other day about a rich man who made his will in favor of the woman who refused him, and then went and hanged himself."

A Trick of the Sun.

Upon a mountain in Andalusia quaint spectral forms are frequently seen. Whenever there is a heavy mist and persons are ascending the mountain they appear in all their ghostly splendor and sometimes so suddenly as to strike dismay into the hearts of those who see them for the first time. Of course it is all a trick played by the sun. When a mist partly shrouds the mountain the sun is naturally obscured, and then he revenges himself by projecting the shadow of any person who is ascending the mountain until it assumes the form of a gigantic spectre.

Roche, also a candidate to succeed Simon, boarded the Caravelle at St. Thomas, Danish West Indies. The German steamer Presidente sailed yesterday for Haiti with thirty Haitien exiles from St. Thomas and Porto Rico.

Found Dying on Railway.

St. Thomas, Aug. 5.—Arthur Armstrong, aged 35, married with a family, was found on the Wabash tracks near New Sarum Thursday night with one hand cut off and his skull fractured. He was brought to the hospital here and died yesterday morning. His home is near New Sarum. He was fined in the police court here Thursday morning for being drunk.

BELGIAN CHILDREN.

Parents share their Pleasures with Offspring.

This delight in the family life is characteristic of all Belgians. One sees in Brussels and Antwerp monsieur promenading in the boulevard or the bois with a cigar in his mouth, madame leaning on his arm and the children, hand in hand, walking sedately under the proud eye of their parents.

One finds children in the restaurants and children in the music halls. The pleasures of father and mother are shared always with the nursery. To go junketing without the children would appear to the Belgian not only selfish but dull. His happiness is the happiness of his children. He sees the circus half with his own eyes and half with theirs. The toyshops and bookshops in Brussels tell of the paramount part played by the child. The happiness of this people is the pleasure of domesticity.

Tit for Tat.

A physician of Fort Dodge, Iowa, had a grave made for a man who was dying; but the man got well, and the doctor was joked about it for many years afterwards.

Once, in consultation with three other physicians, he attended a patient who died. After the death, one of the physicians said:

"Since a quick burial is necessary we might inter the body temporarily. I understand that Dr. X has a vacant grave on hand."

"Yes, I have," said Dr. X, "and I believe I am the only physician present whose graves are not all filled."

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 23.—Nine-year-old Barney Swerling, who confessed to four robberies last week, was arrested yesterday for robbing the Goodyear Shoe Repair Store Thursday night. He will be sent to Mimico Industrial School.

Effective September 18th, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway inaugurated a mixed train service to be operated on the Regina branch between Melville and Regina. This train will run Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, leaving Melville at 10.35 a. m., and arriving at Regina at 7.35 p. m. Leaving Regina Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 7 a. m., arriving at Melville at 4 p. m., and will make stops at the intermediate stations.

Pugsley Should Have Been the Ninth

Seven Cabinet Ministers who sought re-election were defeated, and one who contested two seats secured one, and was defeated in the other, so that we have the unprecedented spectacle of having no less than eight members of a Cabinet defeated, and that, too, upon an attempt to fasten upon the country a material change in our tariff policy which would were it accepted by the people, have made Canada comparatively a vassal of the United States. Others of the Cabinet would have shared the same fate had not the bait of large expenditures of money been thrown upon the political waters of venal constituencies for mercenary voters to bite. Here is a specimen: The St. John, N.B., Telegraph, on the morning of the election, in large black type, presented to the electors of that city offers of bribery with public funds to an almost unlimited extent. Yet, with all these inducements, Pugsley only secured a majority of 65.

Electors, read these offers of bribers, and then ask yourselves if those who made them do not deserve a few years in the lock-up:

> "Electors of St. John city and county! To-day a splendid opportunity confronts you. The Dominion Government completed arrangements to spend upwards of $10,000,000 in Courtenay Bay to provide terminal facilities for the Grand Trunk Pacific. The company has bought the land and a great British firm, which was the lowest tenderer, will soon begin the work on the great project.
>
> "The Government is about to build in St. John a magnificent post office.
>
> "The great new armory is approaching completion.
>
> "The scheme of harbor development on the West Side, embracing many new wharves and the extension of the breakwater to Partridge Island, will go forward as soon as Parliament reassembles.
>
> "These and other far-reaching plans upon which the Liberal Government is engaged will make St. John one of the great seaports of the Atlantic coast.
>
> "Reciprocity will make a prosperous New Brunswick and a prosperous city. It will give new lifeblood to every occupation in which our people are engaged. It will mean more money and more work and greater profits for producer and consumer. It is a policy of the people for the people.
>
> "The Liberal party is fighting the people's battle against the trusts and combines, against the Tory protectionists, who want a tariff 'as high as Haman's gallows.'"

Had it not been for such barefaced offers of public money, Pugsley would now be found with his eight colleagues sitting upon the tombstone of a defeated and discredited Government who were hurled from power on the 21st of September, 1911.

A man in St. John who is close to Mr. Pugsley made the statement that the former Minister of Public Works would return to New Brunswick and retire from politics. This is what might be expected of Pugsley. He has in the past popped up on the winning side when there was anything in sight. Tory or Grit, it was all the same to him. He knows the game he has played in the past is now blocked, he may get out of harm's way and avoid investigations. Blocking of investigations are at an end.

Closure

Commenting on the rejection of reciprocity, The New York Post observes: "There is no closure in the Canadian Parliament, and consequently the Conservatives were able to obstruct the bill and to force a special election upon it. They contended that obstructive tactics were fully justified in the case of a measure embodying a large new policy upon which the people had never voted." The event amply demonstrates, remarks The Toronto News, that in blocking the measure the Opposition represented public opinion. This is surely a powerful argument against the introduction of the closure at Ottawa. Had the Ministers possessed that weapon for gagging Parliament, they would have forced the compact down the throats of an unwilling people, and a whole nation would have been sold out against its own will.

A Lucid Answer

Lord Strathcona arrived in New York on Sept. 27th and was interviewed by a reporter:

"Is there any truth in the rumor that you have consented to spend another year in England as High Commissioner?" he was asked.

His lordship laughed heartily at the question and remarked: "Why, I am going right back on Wednesday next. This is only a flying visit. I hope to get off to Montreal to-night, and get through my business in ample time to get this very boat back."

It is hoped the lucid answer given

Contracts

News from Ottawa says that, while no appointments will be made by the out-going Ministers, it is proposed to award a number of contracts for which tenders were received during the election period. This was done by the Conservative Government in 1873, but as soon as Mackenzie became Premier he cancelled them all. Considering what has been done in the past in awarding tenders, would it not be well to follow the example set by the late Alexander Mackenzie? Contracts let by Pugsley—well, enough said.

LIVER LAZINESS

Those Who Lack Energy and Are Unsuccessful, Should Read this Closely.

"I am only thirty years old, yet for almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night, and in the morning feel so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should soon be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicines and mixtures, Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were very different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged up system. My spirits rose, I felt [illegible] better, the sluggish action of [illegible] system gave way to normal action. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned and have remained. I am like a new man and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. E. Parkhurst, a well-known grocery dealer in Jefferson. Follow his advice, use Dr. Hamilton's Pills for your stomach, kidneys and liver and you'll enjoy long life and robust good health. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills in yellow boxes, 25 cents per box, or from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

THREE-MONTHS BABY WEIGHS 150 POUNDS.

His Name is Flip-Flop and He is a Walrus in a Zoo.

There is in the New York Zoo an interesting specimen of the Atlantic walrus which was caught in Kane Basin. He is yet a baby only six months old, and for homeliness and comical facial expression he is not to be equalled. For every one but his keeper he has nothing but hatred; but for him he will go anywhere and do anything. His affections began to show itself by his flopping in his awkward way after his keeper every time he moved. For this the keeper called him Flip-flop, and this has been shortened to Flip.

The keeper was anxious to weigh him one day. This would have been something of an undertaking under the circumstances as the weighing machine was some distance away But the gate was opened, the keeper went out, saying: "Come on, Flip," and out came the young walrus, and followed him not only to the scales, but on the scales, where, by giving him one or two clams, he was kept long enough to be weighed.

Flip weighed at the time of his capture 150 pounds. Since then he has gained enormously, as he has a huge appetite. He eats over 30 pounds of fish daily — three meals a day — in the shape of clams, codfish and butterfish, from which all the bones are first carefully removed. He always seems to be ravenously hungry and eats greedily, with many growls and flips and sighs

BRITISH OFFICIAL WAS MURDERED

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Details of the treacherous murder last month of Mr. H. P. James, a British District Commissioner in Nigeria, and his party, while travelling among the little-known creeks of the Niger Delta, have been received.

Mr. James, who is described by the Acting Governor of Southern Nigeria, as a most energetic, capable, and promising officer, was only twenty-nine years of age, and on the conclusion of the expedition on which he was murdered had intended returning to England. Mr. James was visiting the southern border of the Forcados district, and Aug. 8, accompanied by three armed police, two native chiefs, an interpreter, and the beach boys, he left Ekeremo for Lalagbene where the party spent the night.

Early next morning Mr. James and his companions started for a town called Kuna, and on arrival at this place, which is on the waterside, asked the headman to accompany him to the next town, Adagbabiri. The headman, without giving any reason refused. Accordingly, in the afternoon, Mr. James, with six boys and two police, started off in a canoe, followed in another boat by the two native chiefs already referred to.

In a few minutes the canoes came alongside Adagbabiri, and a number of armed natives were seen to come out from behind their houses. The interpreter stood up in the canoe signalling the people not to shoot, but without the least warning they opened fire at about twenty-five yards' range. One of the police was first hit, and fell into the canoe, injured, and then one of the beach boys was shot and fell overboard

"The District Commissioner," says the interpreter, in his account, "was next hit in the right ear. He fell on me and I tried to support him, when another shot struck him on the right side and he fell off the canoe into the water. I also fell into the creek and swam under water, and as I came to the surface for breath the natives fired at me. By this time the canoe was empty. I saw the second policeman fall into the water." When the interpreter, after much difficulty reached the bank he saw from his hiding-place among the grass, the people go out in canoes to search for the bodies.

AN ECHO OF THE CRIPPEN CASE

LONDON, Eng. Sept. 30.—Described in the catalogue as "expensive dresses, furs, etc., the wardrobe of a lady," 70 lots of clothing which had belonged to "Belle Elmore," who was murdered by "Dr." Crippen, were sold at the King street auction rooms of Debenham, Storr & Sons.

There were also two framed certificates of thanks from the Mansion House Committee, dated nine years ago, when Belle Elmore and other stage favorites assisted at the dinner given to the city poor through the liberality of King Edward.

The sale room was crowded, but the interest of curio seekers seemed lacking, and the bidding fell mainly to dealers. The principal items were an ermine and lace jacket, which fetched £13 10s; an ermine muff and stole, four guineas; a fox stole and muff, £3 12s.; and a marten muff and stole, £2 10s. Two guineas were given for a satin full length marmot jacket.

A coney seal full length coat with silk lining sold for £2 17s 6d; a satin evening gown, trimmed with sequin and net with a pink sik tea gown, trimmed with lace, for a sovereign and ten shillings were paid for a plum velvet gown, and green and black gown trimmed with lace. There were a dozen coats and jackets offered, also blouses and household linen and theatrical hampers.

GRAND TRUNK CHANGES

Several Officials Are Made Vice-Presidents of Road.

William Wainwright Becomes Senior In Rank and M. M. Reynolds, Howard G. Kelley, J. E. Dalrymple and R.S. Logan Become Heads of Departments—Fitzhugh Is President of Central Vermont Lines.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—Announcement was made yesterday of a complete reorganization of the executive domestic economy of the Grand Trunk Railway. The old offices of vice-presidents have been altered, so that they are no longer first, second and third vice-presidents, but a number of vice-presidents each in charge of a department. The official circles in the Grand Trunk Pacific are also somewhat changed.

For several days there have been rumors that William Wainwright second vice-president of the two roads, intended to retire, having passed 70 years of age, when employes are permitted to retire on a superannuation. But he is not to retire. Instead he is to take a step higher in the general management as a reward of his faithful services since he entered the service in 1862.

CHARLES M. HAYS,
Who Resigns Presidency of Canadian Express Co.

Southern New England Railway Co. and Montreal and Southern Counties Railway. As the headquarters of the Central Vermont are at St. Albans, it is expected that Mr. Fitzhugh will leave Montreal for that town.

The reorganization of the vice-presidents continue.

William Wainwright, formerly second vice-president of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific, becomes senior vice-president of the Grand Trunk and second vice-president of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

M. M. Reynolds, formerly third vice-president of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific, becomes vice-president of the Grand Trunk, in charge of the financial and accounting departments, and third vice-president of the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Howard G. Kelley, formerly chief engineer of the Grand Trunk, becomes vice-president in charge of construction, transportation and maintenance departments.

J. E. Dalrymple, formerly freight traffic manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific, becomes vice-president of the Grand Trunk in charge of traffic, both passenger and freight.

R. S. Logan, formerly assistant to President Hays, becomes vice-president for the Grand Trunk in charge of land, tax, claims, and mail departments.

H. R. Safford, formerly with the Illinois Central at Chicago, becomes chief engineer of the Grand Trunk with headquarters at Montreal.

D. E. Galloway, formerly secretary to President Hays, becomes associate to the president.

Charles M. Hays having been elected chairman of the board of directors of the Canadian Express Co., is succeeded as president of that company by Mr. John Pullen.

J. E. Dalrymple is also appointed fourth vice-president of the Grand Trunk Pacific, in charge of traffic with headquarters in Montreal.

Pullman Etiquette.

That our system of railroad travel is not perfect is alleged by "An Englishman" in a recent article. "When you travel in England you are master of your time and your baggage," writes this author. Here, the baggage travels several hours behind its owner. But "a Pullman car at night is the most uncivilized thing on the American continent, and one of the most indecent. It quite fascinates my blushes. I sit enthralled as the darky porter strews my seat with other people's belongings, holds a pillow-case in his teeth and squeezes the pillow into it, and hurl sheets and mattresses about, and pulls at chains and sliding-doors and levers and curtains. Personally I have never mastered either the art of the etiquette of a Pullman car. I never know where to put my shoes, and I feel I shall never learn how to take off my trousers while sitting in them.

E. R. Knowles Knew His Congregation

A few weeks ago William Jennings Bryan was lecturing in Galt the home of Robt. E. Knowles, the well known preacher and author. Mr. Bryan was entertained at Knox Manse while in Galt. The attendance at the lecture proved disappointingly small, and the discerning lecturer laid this at the door of the rather large admission fee. As is well known, Galt is the Scotchest town in Canada.

After regaining the manse, a few friends being present, Mr. Bryan turned to his host and asked him why, in his opinion, the audience was so small.

"The thing that spoiled it," replied Mr. Knowles, "was the same thing that disorganized the Democratic party."

"What was that?" enquired the statesman.

"It was the silver question," replied the novelist.

BARLEY AND ITS USES

In any examination of the crops of Canada barley is far too important to admit of being overlooked. This cereal has two great uses, the most important being its value as a condensed food for live stock, the other the use to which it is put in the brewing of beer. For from barley is made malt, one of the chief constituents of ale and lager. It was solely for the brewing industry that Canada had in the past exported her barley to the United States prior to the Dingley tariff of 1897. This put a duty of 30 cents per bushel of forty-eight lbs. on barley entering the states and on barley-malt one of 45 cents per bushel of 34 pounds. After the tariff was put on, our export of barley dropped from 1,674,193 bushls in 1896 to 787,787 bushels in 1897, and to-day we are only exporting to the extent of 147,596 bushels. All of these large exports of barley were for the use of the American brewer. Practically none at all was sent into the States for feed purposes. As soon as the duty made the American price of our barley prohibitive, the Americans turned their attention towards the improvement of their own product, which up till 1897 had been much inferior to the quality of the Canadian crop. A regular crusade was started in Iowa under the direction of Prof. Olin and in Wisconsin under Prof. More. So successful have their efforts been, that to-day the middle Western states grow as good a barley as any produced in Canada.

Since the year 1897 the total production of barley in the United States has increased from 66,685,127 bushels to 170,284,000 in 1909. The United States is threfore in a position to supply herself without any importations. A proof of this point is found in the fact that in 1909 the United States exported 6,530,293 bushels of barley. Surely a country able to send a certain product whether natural or manufactured abroad has an ample supply for her own necessities. As before remarked the only use the American has for our barley is for malting in the preparation of beer. It must be remembered that the United States brewer does not make his product from pure malt and hops. Generally he will only use 1-3 malt (made from barley) sometimes less, just enough to reproduce his yeast. He employs corn, grits, rice, or in fact, any cereal containing a large percentage of easily obtainable starch. All the above are successfully grown in the States. On the contrary the Canadian brewer is practically forced by the government regulation to use only malt and hops in the preparation of his beer.

Let us consider the other side of the question. Granting for the sake of argument that a large export to the United States would make a barley bonanza for our farmer, would it be for the best interests of Canada as a whole and tend towards the improvement and conservation of our great natural resources? In the first place, is barley suitable to be a standard crop for a country such as ours? There is no cereal which requires such a careful and thorough preparation for its reception into the soil. It must be carefully planted, the land ploughed at precise seasons of the year and a great deal of trouble and care taken during its preparatory growth. This puts it away behind wheat as a crop for a country with so much new and unbroken land. Secondly, barley does not require as rich a soil as wheat and deteriorates to a considerably greater extent the land on which it is grown. This, in event of our farmers increasing their barley areas, would lead to a rapid exhaustion of our best farm lands. These facts are amply proven by the investigations conducted on the relative merits of barly and wheat as crops, by the Rothamsted Experiment Station, England. After fifty years of careful consideration the following result has been finally rached at. Wheat during fifty years of cultivation declined in its average yield on a given area for the first 18 years, but after that period remained steady, giving 131 bushels per annum to the acre. Barley on the contrary showed a rapid diminution. It returned ten bushels for the last ten years, against a previous annual average of 15 bushels. These experiments were of course conducted on ground which was in no way fertilized. Thus the continued fall of the barley crop from decade to decade would seem to show a progressive exhaustion of the soil without reaching the comparatively stable condition of the continuously unmanured wheat plot. This is one of the strongest arguments against the growing of barley for export trade. It is not alone the present prosperity of the country that must be looked to, but, what is more important, the future.

The advocates of mixed farming may say that it is good for Canada to grow diversified crops and that barley on account of its great yield is an ideal and profitable one. The fallacy of this can easily be seen by a glance at the following figures. They were computed from a series of experiments, during the last five years at the Macdonald Agricultural College:—

Crop.	Lbs. to the acre.
Six-rowed barley	2,744
Two-rowed barley	2,257
Milling Spring wheat	1,783

It therefore appears that six-rowed barley (the highest in protein value and the most suitable for American export) gives a much higher yield to the acre than wheat. However, considering how much more it uses up of the natural elements of the soil, the difference in amount of labor and fertilizer necessary to grow barley successfully, and above all the difference in the selling price between the two (wheat 84.9 cents per bushel in 1909; barley 47.9 cents) it does not bear comparison as a crop with wheat.

There are three kinds of barley which Canada can grow to advantage. Chevalier, duck-bill and six-

SERVANTS IN NORWAY.

A Place Where They Have Solved the Servant Problem.

In Norway they appear to have solved the servant problem to the satisfaction of both mistress and maid.

In such places as Bergen, Christiania and other large cities the municipal government takes entire charge of the matter. There is a central employment bureau under municipal control and twice a year—once in summer and once in winter dissatisfied servants can look out for new masters and mistresses, and dissatisfied employers can seek to improve their service. The mistress who wants a maid can go to it, fill in a form stating her requirements and the wages she is willing to pay and then leave all the rest to the bureau.

Her card is placed on file and the position she offers is posted in a conspicuous place on a blackboard. Men and women servants in want of work examine these cards, and, when they decide upon applying for any position, submit their recommendations to the bureau for examination. If these are satisfactory, the applicant receives a card to the prospective employer, available for one day only.

Should the lady hire the servant, she fills up the card with a list of the duties, wages and forms of service agreed upon and returns it to the bureau, where it is carefully filed for future reference if necessary.

If the applicant does not suit, the card is returned with "not satisfactory," which indicates that other applicants may be sent.

NATURE WILL CURE YOU

Of Kidney Disease, Aided by Father Morriscy's No. 7.

Kidney trouble is one of the most distressing ailments of mankind, and leads to backache and rheumatism. This is because of the importance of the work done by the kidneys,—work which must proceed normally to insure good health.

A very large proportion of civilized people have some form of kidney trouble, sometimes without knowing that their malady is of that nature. Many obscure pains can often be traced to diseased kidneys.

These organs are the filters of the body. Their function is to strain out of the blood and eliminate through the bladder the worn out tissue and other impurities gathered by the blood in its course.

When the kidneys become congested and sluggish, these impurities, including the irritating and poisonous uric acid, are not entirely removed from the blood. The result is that the uric acid is deposited in the joints and tissues, causing the agonies of rheumatism and frequently affecting the liver and other organs.

Father Morriscy, the famous priest-physician of Bartibogue, N.B., after much research compounded a remedy which worked hand in hand with Nature. His doctrine, justified by thousands of cures, was that the need is not a patchwork relief, but a treatment that will enable the forces of Nature, working through the kidneys, to accomplish their intended work.

His famous prescription, No. 7, assists the kidneys to work vigorously and eliminate the harmful uric acid from the whole system. In the form of tablets, No. 7 is easy to take, and will effect cures where other remedies have failed. Do not trifle with kidney disease, but take No. 7 Tablets, the treatment that has proved so successful with other sufferers.

ARE THE MEN THE WEAKER SEX?

Women Gaining Muscular Supremacy.

A college professor expresses the conviction that women are gaining the muscular supremacy over men. He attributes this to their taking a more active interest in outdoor sports, while the men are becoming indolent in that respect and prefer being spectators to participants in athletic exercises. With their admitted superiority in all the arts and graces, including fluency of expression, and to add to this physical predominance, there seems to be little left for mere man but to plod unostentatiously along in the ranks of the producers, and continue to pass up his gross earnings to his mental and physical superior every Saturday.

OPINION IS THAT ITALY MADE MISTAKE

Should Not Have Bombarded Prevesa, Says Powers.

European Governments Are Not Pleased With the Hostilities In Europe and Are Reported to Have Sent a Note of Warning That War Must Be Confined to Africa—Attack Was Too Soon In Any Case.

London, Oct 2.—According to The Daily Telegraph's correspondent in Rome, Germany and Austria have already made unofficial representations to Italy of their displeasure at her procedure, and that if these representations are ignored they will be followed in another shape by "humiliation to Italy."

According to information from diplomatic sources, the landing of the Italians at Prevesa is greatly resented by Austria and Germany, and had much to do with their reported change of attitude towards Italy.

Turkey's internal politics probably account in a large measure for her hesitation in taking the offensive. Said Pasha, the new Grand Vizier, continues his efforts to form a coalition Ministery, but finds the task one of almost insuperable difficulty.

Italy Explaining.

Berlin, Oct. 2.—Italy yesterday sent a circular note to the powers explaining her reasons for the action against Turkey, expressing the hope that the steps taken will be confined to the occupation of Tripoli, that the hostilities will be of short duration and that negotiations to fix the status of Tripoli will be begun soon. Italy, it is stated, will endeavor to localize the hostilities.

The note closes with the assurance that the steps taken are in the interests of humanity and civilization, and that no effort will be spared to protect the subjects of other nations in Tripoli.

Italians Impetuous

Berlin, Oct. 2.—It is reported from Turkish sources that the Italian attack at Prevesa upon the Turkish torpedo boat destroyers was made 90 minutes before expiration of the Italian ultimatum.

Specials from Athens state that the Turks were trying to join four other destroyers at Gumenitza near Prevesa. Cannonading was heard off Gumenitza Friday night, when it was concluded that the Italians had attacked the other torpedo boat destroyers there and blockaded that port.

The damaged destroyer at Prevesa was stripped of her guns.

Troops Via Egypt.

Port Said, Egypt, Oct. 2.—The Turkish transport Kaiser with 493 troops arrived here Saturday.

A Religious War.

Constantinople, Oct. 2.—The newspapers announced Saturday night that the Minister of War, Mahmoud Schefket Pasha, has telegraphed to the Turkish commandant at Tripoli to defend that territory with the utmost energy and to appeal to the religion of the people.

I is probable that Italy's declaration of war and the attack upon the Turkish torpedo boat destroyers at Prevesa has decided the Turkish Government to reverse its decision not to defend Tripoli.

The Ottoman Government clearly is not in a hurry and the most significant news of the day is the decision of the Turkish council again to appeal to the Powers, and in the meantime suspend offensive measures. Late last night the new appeal had not reached the British Government, and there is little to indicate that the attitude of the Powers has undergone any change.

Out of a perfect maze of conflicting rumors and reports, it is utterly impossible at the present stage to sift the grains of truth concerning the opening days of the Turco-Italian war. It appears even doubtful whether there has been any actual occupation of Tripoli, and it is practically certain that there has been no bombardment by the Italian warships.

It seems almost certain that the reported destruction of the Turkish fleet is untrue. In fact, the only result of the first three days' hostilities which can be vouched for, is the destruction of the Turkish destroyers by the Duke of Abruzzi's ships off Prevesa. The Tripoli cable is closely sealed, so that it is impossible for the outside world to know what is going on there.

Rome Denies Invasion.

Rome, Oct. 2.—A semi-official note announces that the statement that the Italian forces landed at Prevesa is absolutely false The nature of the rumor, says the note, is obvious from the circular addressed on Sept. 28 to the Balkan States, which declared that the territorial status quo and consolidation of European Turkey, remain as ever, the base of Italian policy. Consequently all reports of the landing of Italians in Europe that may be circulated are self-evidently untrue. Prevesa, adds the note, is, however, a base of operations for Turkish torpedo boats against the coasts and commerce of Italy.

Bombarded Pervesa.

Constantinople, Oct. 2.—It was officially announced late yesterday that Italian warships Saturday morning attacked two Turkish torpedo boats off the Port of Durazzo on the west coast of Albania.

It is officially confirmed that the Italian squadron has bombarded Prevesa, but the landing of Italian forces there is denied. It is announced from Janina that two Italian warships Saturday bombarded the port of Reschadie, and torpedo boats lying in that harbor, one of which was damaged and landed its crew. The Italian ships entered the port and shelled the town, several houses being struck. After taking soundings they left and later entered Port Musto, taking the captain of the port and three boatmen prisoners.

The Porte has notified the powers of the suspension of the lighthouse services in the Red Sea, the Mediterranean, the Dardanelles, the Aegean and Adriatic. The Italian workmen in the Government factories have been dismissed. The Italians employed on the construction of railways in Asia Minor are abandoning work and leaving the country.

RUSSIAN GRAIN KING.

Was Queer Character, But His Business Integrity Was High.

Of a peculiar stamp was the man of millions, Nicholas Boukhroff, the Russian grain king, who recently died. In his externals he was a mujik merchant. He wore the top boots, the trader's kaftan—coat and overcoat in one, fitting close up to the neck and reaching to the knees—and the embroidered cotton shirt without starched collar, which are the historic garb of the Volga traders, men who carry as much as 50,000 rubles in notes stuck in the leg of a boot and who distrust the documentary machinery of credit. Boukhroff's great fortune compelled him to handle investments and bank paper, but he was in sympathy with the old simple ways. He was in fact an Old Believer and a devout churchgoer who lived his religion.

In his housekeeping he lived on much the same scale as an ordinary hand worker in comfortable employment. He gave away millions of rubles in charity, but was close fisted in personal outlays. The porters at Nijni-Novgorod and elsewhere avoided him when they saw him step from a train. He would never pay them more than 10 cents for carrying his baggage. When he met great personages he "thoued" them, as he did everybody else, keeping to the Old Believer, Quakerlike form of address. His integrity in business was of the highest.

He would lecture men in his employment if they spent five kopeks needlessly. His patriarchial ways had sometimes a welcome side. He exacted unquestioning obedience to his instructions; but every now and then a man who served him well for some years would receive a draft for 25,000 or 50,000 rubles with no further remark than:

"Thou shalt now be a Man, too. I know that thou wilt make good use of the money."

If a net blouse is to be laundered it should be ironed on the wrong side while it is quite damp with a clean and moderately hot iron. This causes the new fabric to stiffen. Lace may be treated in the same way.

"INSOLENCE NICOTINA."

A New League Been Organized To Abate Public Smoking.

The "Non-Smokers' Protective League" has been organized with the avowed purpose of abating public smoking as a nuisance.

Of course the bare announcement of the organization of such a league is the cue for all smokers to break into dirisive laughter. The smoking fraternity simply assumes that smoking is here to stay and that the unfortunate non-smoking public must either learn to smoke or grin and bear the fumes of tobacco.

It is true of course, that the smoking public is considerably in the minority, counting men, women and children, and that the folks who smoke in public places do so because they dare to, not because they have any logical right to, but even when cheerfully admitting these truths, the average smoker will keep the even tenor of his way. "What are you going to do about it?" is his only defense, if indeed he thinks it worth while to offer any defense.

This attitude is a manifestation of a peculiar sort of insolence, that, for want of a better term, may be called "insolence nicotina." All smokers have it. Even the most gentle and considerate of them have it. Even those who still go through the form of prefacing their smoking by asking others if smoke annoys them, assume that no non-smoker will be so ungentlemanly as to tell the truth even if smoke does annoy him dreadfully.

It is this calm assumption that the non-smoker has no right at all in the common air that particularly annoys that individual. Smoke is unpleasant, of course, to many non-smokers, but not so unpleasant that they won't choose to bear it rather than make others uncomfortable and anyway by denying them the indulgence of their little vice But when the smoking world calmly exhales its smoke in his face without giving a thought as to whether he likes it or not, he begins to wonder just where patience ceases to be a virtue.

And we dare say that the Non-Smokers' league will accomplish something if the smoking public doesn't curb this insolence and begin to think once in a while of the comfort of those who don't smoke but live in the same world with folks who do.

CHARACTER IN HAIR.

Red Haired People Considered Smart

Men with fine, light hair are smart, conceited, and, if they do not marry until late in life, are apt to grow cross and selfish. If a girl wishes to select a husband, she should learn to read his disposition by his hair. Men with fine brown hair, light or dark, make the best husbands; they are quick, thoughtful and less apt to be selfish than the very light-haired or very dark-haired brothers. Those whose hair turns gray prematurely are nearly always good fellows; are a little nervous, but brainy, sympathetic, and very honorable. A prematurely gray-haired person is generally very scrupulous in money matters and in friendships, and very tolerant of one's shortcomings. Nearly all red-haired persons are smart, whether the hair is coarse or fine, but the finer the hair the finer the smartness. Pale, blond-haired women, of the colorless, ashen kind, are impulsive, loving, and ficklet; not to be depended upon, but usually good company while they like you. Women with very dark brown hair are loyal, sympathetic, and usually of tireless patience where they love; they are full of sentiment, emotional, enjoy keenly and suffer in like proportion, are easily touched by the woes of others, and are to be trusted. Women with fine black hair, touched with brown, are high-strung, loyal, and brainy. Those with very black hair, if it is coarse, are usually mean and suspicious. All women with very dark hair are quick tempered, and where dark eyes and dark complexions go with the dark hair, they have strong feeling. The dark-haired women are more faithful than the light-haired, and if finely organized, just bubble over with sentiment.

WORKING TO KEEP YOUNG

When a Busy Man Retires He Soon Leaves This Old Earth.

Friends of J. P. Morgan who keep in close touch with him assert that although he goes to Europe primarily for rest he works harder during his absence than the average man works when at his desk. Between his visits to art galleries and connoisseurs, to kings and other rulers, he contrives to attend to a vast amount of business The cables between the house at the corner of Wall and Broad streets and the foreign offices of Morgan & Company are kept busy every day. Not only so, but Mr. Morgan always has a secretary along with him to assist in the transaction of his huge affairs, a position that is by no means a sinecure.

Mr. Morgan, it is said, has no intention of retiring completely from active business life. In this connection it may be interesting to narrate a conversation that took place some time ago. A middle aged friend of Mr. Morgan said to him: "Why don't you retire, Mr. Morgan? You have already done a big life's work."

"Umph, when did your father retire?" came the quick reply.

"In——"

"And when did he die?"

"Oh, he died about a year later."

"Just so ;if he had continued in business he would have been alive still," was the rejoinder that closed the conversation. This is Mr. Morgan's theory.

And there are others who share the old belief that a man is only as old as he feels.

"Judge," said Mrs. Starvem to the Justice who had recently come to board with her, "I am particularly anxious to have you try this chicken soup." "I have tried it," replied the Judge, "and my decision is that the chicken has proved an alibi."

DAIRYING IN ARGENTINA

How the Argentine Republic Is Coming to the Front in the Export of Dairy Products.

The first cream separators or centrifugals were imported into Argentina in 1890-1891 and in the last mentioned year the first Argentine butter, 3,042 pounds, was exported. Previous to that date salted butter in tins had been an article of import. The butter exported (little more than 100 tons in 1892) was 400 tons in 1895 1,500 tons in 1901, 4,000 tons in 1902 and in 1906 more than 8,000 tons.

It is estimated that there are at present, including large and small, more than 200 creameries using centrifugals at work in the Argentine Republic for the most part in the provinces of Buenos Ayres, Santa Fe, Cordoba, and Eutre Reos, and so great is the demand for this class of machinery that the importing houses find it difficult to execute their orders with sufficient expedition. In the matter of machinery it may be said that the Argentine dairy farmers are well up to date.

One of the new Argentine industries, phenomenal in the rapid advance as compared with the progress of the same industry in Australia, deals with milk, and its products. All, it is true, has been prepared by the lavish hand of nature, the pastures varied and abundant, the stocks multiplied and refined, the mild climate; and indeed every element was present but the initiative of capital.

The Argentines were always breeders of cattle and sheep, producers of meat and hides and wool. Only within the last fifteen years did they commence to be agriculturists and they had never paid attention to those secondary industries based on accessory products in the exploitation of which modern methods obtain such lucrative returns. The dairy industry existed in a primitive condition The milk for daily consumption was brought to town in the traditional manner, in tins, on horseback, and the boiling on the journey churned the butter, but the real business of dairy farming as it is carried on in Europe, Australia, and North America was unknown in the country seventeen years ago.

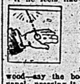
OUR CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

TO-DAY'S TRICK FOR THE SUPPER TABLE.

Here's a bully scheme for "working" dad for some spending money.

Tell him you can make a quarter stick to the wall without using glue or anything else.



If he feels like arguing the matter, ask him if he will give you a quarter if you can make it stick to the wall. When he "bites" take the quarter and slam it flat against a smooth surface of wood—say the bookcase or a door panel—pressing it hard with a downward sliding motion, against the wood. Take your hand away and the coin will stick tightly.

The striking and pressing expel the air between the coin and the wood, forming a vacum which will hold the millionaire's dollar or Johnny's penny just alike.

BOY CAN MAKE.

Some Descriptions of Useful Articles for Camping.

Many boys look forward to going into camp as soon as school is closed, taking for their camping grounds some piece of woods or small island near their homes. It is also good fun to set up a camp in the back yard if one's parents do not wish to have one go away. Boys who are interested in this sort of good time will find it a good plan to start soon to make some of the necessary articles of the camp equipment. A boy reader has sent to this page some descriptions of articles which are useful for campers and which may be made at a very small cost or without any cost at all.

To make a camp lantern take a can and puncture it. A small block of wood may be hollowed out to make a holder for the candle. The block of wood is set inside the pail and the light shines through. This pail may also be used for carrying small fish or bait.

Another lantern is made of a glass jar which has a tin cover. Puncture holes in the cover and make a basket for the candle of wire which is twisted around so as to hold the candle, as shown in the picture. There are two long strands of wire which come up through the lid and form a handle for the lantern.

A camp warmer and cook stove may be made of a pail.

The article to be cooked may be put in a covered pail and then covered with hot coals. To make an oven fill thepail with hot coals. The articles to be roasted may be placed on top of these coals.

X-Rays and Consumption

Every year medical science discovers a new use for the X-Rays. In the early detection of the presence of consumption in the human body and the location of the exact position of the disease the X-Rays are now considered indispensable in the London hospitals. Before the sounds obtained by tapping on the lungs, listening through the stetroscope, and even the wonderful tuberculin test can prove the presence of the tubercule bacillus, the X-Rays, says a London medical authority, can warn the examining physician of the undermining process which is going on deep in the lungs. So accurate have been the results obtained by this method that a careful X-Ray examination of the chest is now the routine treatment for all new lung cases, and in the London hospitals alone over a thousand consumptive patients have been examined by this means. Thus in cases where the disease is only suspected its presence or absence can be readily ascertained, and presumably also this examination will enable the physician to form an opinion as to whether the progress of the disease has been arrested.

They Love Each Other

Booth Tarkington was talking in Indianapolis about the stage. "There were two actresses in an early play of mine," he said, "both very beautiful; but the leading actress was thin. She quarreled one day at rehearsal with the other lady, and she ended the quarrel by saying haughtily: 'Remember, please, that I am the star.' 'Yes, I know you're the star,' the other retorted, eyeing with an amused smile the leading actress's long, slim figure; but you'd look better, my dear, if you were a little meteor.'"

DAM BURSTS; 300 DIE

Terrible Disaster Falls on Town of Austin, Pa.

Pent-Up Waters of the River Break Through Paper Milling Company's Dam and Overwhelms Community of 300 People—Fire Breaks Out and Completes the Ruin—Only Six Injured Are at the Hospital.

Austin, Pa., Oct. 2.—Three hundred or more persons met their death through the bursting of a dam above this town Saturday. Fire followed, and completed the work of destruction.

The curtain of night which was rung down on the flood scarcely before its victims had all been claimed and its surviving spectators fully realized how great a tragedy the elements of water and fire had enacted in the natural ampitheatre of the Allegheny Mountains here, was lifted by dawn yesterday, revealing a ghastly scene of death and devastation.

Austin itself, Saturday, a busy mill town of 3,000 people, many of whom were enjoying a fine autumn afternoon as a Saturday half-holiday, is only a ghost of a town to-day.

Torn to pieces by water and eaten by fire, the wet and charred remnants of its buildings, believed to hold the remains of three hundred or more persons, were strewn along the valley edge, piled in windows where the main street business section was, or swept in scattered masses far down the ravine.

Spectators, many of whom barely escaped being victims of the disaster, and hundreds of people from surrounding towns, looked down from the steep hillsides on Austin and Costello through a veil of fog yesterday morning to see the wreckage here of some four hundred houses, a score of business blocks, three churches and several large lumber mills, and three miles further down the river at Costello the ruins of more than fifty buildings. The flood did not spend its force until it raced for more than ten miles from the reservoir. Wharton, still further on, suffered somewhat, but is practically intact. The loss of life at Costello, where the residents had more warning, is believed to be but three.

The property loss in the valley is estimated at upwards of $6,000,000.

In Austin, out of the hundred directly enveloped in the deluge, hardly a dozen survive. The furious flood let loose when the Bayless Paper & Pulp Co.'s dam crumbled Saturday, picked up a heavy battery of big timbers in the mill yards at the dam and with thousands of planks and logs, rammed its path with terrible havoc.

At the hospital to-day there were but six injured for the care of the small army of physicians and nurses who poured into the devastated town all night and day. The medical supplies remained unused in the cars rushed here by the Buffalo & Susquehanna and the Pennsylvania Railroads, and the only use found for blankets and bedding was for the case of the few recovered dead, which up to a late hour last night numbered but fifteen.

The state constabulary yesterday afternoon took charge of the situation, which seemed too appalling for the local committee, which had worked all night. Immediately orders were issued to the railroads to bring no more sightseers to Austin, and sentinels were placed on the chief roadways with instructions to pass none but workmen. Hundreds of automobiles and carriages were turned back.

During the night searching parties with engine headlights, automobile lamps, pine torches and improvised lanterns of every sort poked their way into every pile of wreckage that was accessible, seeking any who might be alive, but scarcely a body was found in which life was not extinct. The night had been one of hardship and horror filled with experiences which had severely tested the mettle of the men whom circumstances had pressed into first-aid rescuers in the flood-devastated village.

Credit for the quick spreading of the alarm was given to Lena Binckey, a telephone operator. Upon receiving the message from the Cliff House that the dam had broken, she pushed the alarm button connecting with the fire department and the engineer's office of the Goodyear Lumber Mill below the town.

The engineer tied his whistle down and the firebell in the town was sounded continuously. She then rushed to the street screaming the warning cry. "The dam has broken." Then she fled for her life toward the steep hillside at the north end of Main street. Turning toward the valley, she saw the great wall of water descending upon the town.

"From where I stood," she said yesterday, "the wall of water seemed fifty feet high. Above it rose a great cloud of spray in which houses seemed to toss, bumping against one another, spinning and turning as they fell to pieces or were swept out of sight. The noise was appalling.

"When I fled from Main street there were scores of people behind me, many of them children. They did not seem to appreciate the imminence of their danger.

"Some turned into stores as if to make a casual purchase. While I was looking down upon them, utterly helpless to give further warning, the cloud of mist that seemed to precede the flood hid them from view and a moment later the green water buried the houses from my sight."

One of the striking and pathetic features of the day, according to Dr. Thomas H. A. Styltes, chief of the state dispensaries, was the practical absence of children among the survivors. It is thought that when the wreckage has been cleared away, and the bodies of victims recovered—although many have been entirely destroyed—it would be found that a large proportion were those of children.

TRADE HAS INCREASED

Foreign Commerce Shows a Growth of $18,000,000.

August, 1911, Establishes a Record In Dealings With Outside World and the Borden Government Will Have a Plentiful Strong Box to Draw Upon When It Goes Into Power—Revenue Is Growing.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—The election campaign evidently had no bad effect in checking the Dominion's steady growth of business prosperity. During August Canada's trade increased by no less than $18,308,133, or nearly thirty per cent., as compared with August of last year. The total trade for the month was $81,490,654; of which $47,405,591 was in imports, a gain of nine millions. In exports the principal gain was in agricultural products, which totalled $7,238,394, an increase of nearly five millions over the preceding August.

For the first five months of the fiscal year trade has totalled $330,522,426, an increase of $34,705,645, of which $22,629,971 was in imports entered for consumption.

Coin and bullion were imported during the five months to the value of $1,0694,959, as compared with $2,869,965 for the corresponding five months of last year.

Customs revenue for the month just closed indicate that the rapid growth of imports is being maintained. The total customs receipts for the month were $7,710,181, an increase of $1,252,241 over September of last year. For the first half of the fiscal year customs revenue has totalled $41,306,326, an increase of $5,746,784, or nearly one million dollars per month.

The new administration will take office with trade and revenue increasing at the most rapid rate in the history of Canada, and with the way paved for another huge surplus at the close of the fiscal year.

Will Not Oppose Carrick.

Fort William, Oct. 2.—James Conmee has declared that he will not be a candidate for the House of Commons at the deferred election to be held on October 12, and as there is no other candidate to face J. J. Carrick, he will be declared elected by acclamation on Thursday, the 5th. In a letter to the press, Mr. Conmee says: "Owing to the change of government at Ottawa, and having regard to my condition of health, I do not feel disposed to accept the nomination."

Mr. Conmee will at once leave for the south, where he hopes to regain his wonted strength. He has been very feeble since an attack of typhoid, and his physician has ordered a long rest. This district of Rainy River and Thunder Bay will thus be represented by J. J. Carrick.

Death of Brockville Lawyer.

Brockville, Oct. 2.—The death occurred here Saturday night of J. H. Botsford, one of the rising young lawyers of Eastern Ontario, and a member of the firm of Buell & Botsford for the past five years. Deceased had been ill for several months.

Mr. Botsford was 32 years of age, and a native of Brockville. He was prominently identified with the Knights of Columbus, holding at the time of his death the office of secretary of the Ontario council. He leaves a widow and one child. The funeral will be held to-morrow morning.

Claimed To Be Divine.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 2.—"I'm God Almighty, last of the prophets, saviour of sinners, most persecuted of men. I'm telling you the truth. I've been sent to jail because I told the truth," John Schuler explained to Magistrate Fraser Saturday, when arranged on a vagrancy charge. The police learned yesterday that Schuler had conducted systematic begging campaigns throughout the country, representing himself as possessed of the spirit of God. He was given six months in the Central.

Ancient Greek and Automobile.

"How many people owning or driving automobiles realize how much the magneto of to-day owes to the ancient Greeks," said Charles Splitdorf in a recent interview. "The name magnet as we know it in conjunction with the magneto dates back to the 11th century coming from the Greek Shepard Magnes, who tending his sheep on the sides of Mount Ida, often noticed the attraction of his iron staff to certain large stones which we of the 20th century and drivers of automobiles know as lodostones. "Thus from Magnes the Greek and the 11th century comes magnet and magneto, known to every autoist of the 20th century."

Not Up To Date.

Sir Patrick Spens, London surgeon, praised at a dinner in New York the abundant and timely reading matter that American physicians have in their waiting-rooms. "The English physician offers his patients reading matter, but I am afraid it isn't always up to date." Sir Patrick smiled. "One of your American millionaires consulted me in Harley Street last month. He was kept waiting about an hour. When he finally entered my inner office he looked very much bored. 'I see by your papers, doctor,' he said with a yawn, 'that it is rumored that two Dayton men, Orville and Wilbur Wright, can actually fly.'"

Why Not Let Him Grumble!

There is one privilege, which men will cling to long after they have given women the right to vote, and that is their own inalienable, natural born right to grumble. The man who doesn't grumble has something radically wrong with him, observed a careful student of the trousered species. Women are always miserable with their grievances, but men are blissfully contented over them. Give a man a good, sound grievance and a comfortable chair in which to air it, and no one need fear the distinction of clubs or other male loafing places.

RAILROADERS STRIKE.

Harriman Lines and Illinois Central Have 13,000 Out.

Chicago, Oct. 2.—Reports up to Saturday afternoon indicated that the order for a strike by shopmen on the Illinois Central Railroad and Harriman lines had been generally obeyed. With many points not heard from, approximately 13,000 men in the chief cities were known to have left work to enforce demands for recognition of federation of shopmen.

Reports from the Pacific Coast indicated that the men were ready and generally obeyed the order. The number of men reported out in the chief cities was: Chicago 4,000, Omaha 1,000, Denver 425, East St. Louis 500, New Orleans 1,750, Kansas City 100, San Antonia 500, Vicksburg 600, Memphis, 1,300, Houston 1500, Ogden 500, McComb, Miss., 1,000, San Francisco 400, Oakland 500, Los Angeles 1,600.

At no place was the walkout accompanied by any violence.

More Trouble.

Houston Texas, Oct. 2.—New trouble on the Harriman lines in Texas loomed up at noon here on Saturday in the action of conductors and brakemen.

It was understood that these employes had decided to give notice demanding revision of contracts. This involves all the Harriman lines except the Houston and Texas Central, and the Houston, East and West Texas.

Strikers Enjoined.

New Orleans, Oct. 2.—Fifty striking employes of the Illinois Central and Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroads were yesterday permanently enjoined by order of the United States Circuit Court from interfering in any manner with the affairs of the railroads. The injunctions is sweeping and applies to "any person" within the jurisdiction of the court.

Settlers Face Starvation.

Ottawa, Oct. 2.—In a report received at the Northwest Mounted Police department from Corpl. Clay, who is in charge of the Grande Prairie district, in the Peace River country, a warning is given that for the present the food supply on hand is insufficient to properly sustain the rapidly-increasing population.

The report says that the food is practically exhausted, and that it cannot be replenished before December or January. Corpl. Clay suggests that travelers en route for Grande Prairie district should be warned not to go into the country without ample supplies.

Government agents at Peace River Crossing and at Edson will be notified to give the necessary warning to all parties heading for Grande Prairie.

Parson Seeks Notoriety.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 2.—A heresy case in the Presbytery of Halifax promises to become exciting. Rev. Mr. Nicholson of Dartmouth was exonerated by a majority of the members of the presbytery. Rev. W. M. Fraser of Halifax now comes out publicly and asks that his name be struck from the roll because he (Fraser) declines to sit in a presbytery where some of the ministers disregard their ordination vows in their preaching and teaching, and because of what he considers their lessening loyalty to the doctrines of the Presbyterian Church. He says that he "will not extend the hand of fellowship to anyone who, denying the virgin birth, brands his Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, with a foul stigma."

Start on Long Ride.

New Hamburg, Oct. 2.—Mr. E. R. De Bourgneuf and wife, who are on a 2,000 mile trip on horseback to Los Angeles, Cal., from Berlin, Ont., left here yesterday morning at 10.30, to continue their journey. The lady was formerly Miss Mary Cassel, a well-known and popular lady of this place, and was given a good send-off by her many friends here.

Mrs. De Bourgneuf were divided skirts and rode astride on a bay mare, her husband riding a pure white horse. He was dressed in cowboy style. Three valuable hunting dogs accompanied them. They expect to reach their destination in eighty days.

Police Want Time.

Hamilton, Oct. 2.—George Kennough and John Hughes, who were arrested Friday in connection with the robbery at the Canadian Express Co.'s office, appeared in the Police Court yesterday and were remanded for eight days to give the police an opportunity of trying to locate the money.

Kennough, the clerk who was found tied with ropes and who told a story about masked robbers holding him up at the point of the revolver, is charged with the theft of the money, between $8,000 and $9,000. Hughes is held on a vagrancy charge. There may be further arrests, but the police refuse to give out further information.

Killed By Trolley.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—While crossing King street, near the Woodbine, on Saturday afternoon behind a street car, James Barlow, 5 Logan avenue, was struck by a street car coming in the opposite direction and hurled to the pavement. At first his injuries were not considered of a very serious nature, and he was taken in a private ambulance to his home. Later it was discovered that he had received internal injuries, from which he died late in the evening.

The body will be removed to the morgue this morning, and an inquest opened this evening at eight o'clock by Coroner Elliott.

Hains Gets Pardon.

Albany, N.Y., Oct. 2.—Governor Dix Saturday signed a pardon for Captain Peter C. Hains, jr., who killed W. E. Annis at the Bayside, L.I., yacht club house in August 1908.

The pardon was signed after the office of the Secretary of State had closed, but will be filed there Monday. It cannot become effective until so filed.

Emery Wheel Killed Italian.

Toronto, Oct. 2.—Julius Houbona, an Italian, was killed at the Canada Foundry Works Saturday afternoon by the bursting of an emery wheel. His body was removed to the morgue later in the evening, where an inquest will be opened to-night.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Despite firmer cables from abroad and the stimulating effect of the outbreak of hostilities between Italy and Turkey, prices for wheat gradually sagged to-day under a profit-taking movement, and closed lower than last night, losses ranging from ⅛c to ¼c.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 30.—The market opened strong and excited, with prices ¾d to 1¼d higher, with heavy covering by shorts, on Italy's declaration of war and expectations of small Russian shipments this week. Following the opening there was a further advance, with speculators buying. Spot markets were ½d higher, with cargoes lightly offered. During the morning there was week-end profit-taking, and prices receded from the high. Argentine offers are liberal, with Buenos Ayres failing to respond to the outside advance and a quiet demand from the continent. Notwithstanding the recession, the undertone was firm, and traders excited, with heavy covering in Paris, and the opening firmness in Berlin, and at the close prices were ½d to ¾d higher than yesterday.

FORTY YEARS IN BUSINESS LIFE

Mr. A. L. Geen's Career in the Business World—It has Been Long and Honorable

Mr. A. L. Geen, the well-known druggist, is one of the oldest—in a business sense—of Belleville's merchants, he having to-day completed the fortieth year of his life as a business man in this city. He bought Holden's drug store and began business on Oct. 2nd, 1871, 40 years ago. The purchase price was about $35,000. Mr. J. C. Holden had worked up a good business, but Mr. Geen increased it by $20,000 a year. Mr. Geen has been twice burned out, over on the corner in the Cronk Block, and the second time in the Filliter Block. Mr. Geen was forced out of the premises opposite Victoria Avenue and removed to the old Harrison store, which was exceedingly gloomy in appearance, but before many weeks had passed it was spoken of as the brightest store in the city, so completely was it transformed. It is lighted by gas and electric light and heated by hot water, making it one of the most attractive and comfortable stores in the city. Within a few years Mr. Geen has much extended his stationery business and deals largely in books and magazines, supplying nearly all the libraries and larger institutions in these lines in this locality. Here is the wholesale headquarters for many of the leading magazines, both English and American.

Mr. Geen is the senior Past President of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, and has taken an active part in legislating for the retailers interests. He was the leader in probably the largest deputation ever before the Dominion Parliament which brought about the doing away of the trading stamp nuisance. Notwithstanding his busy mercantile life he has taken a very active part in fraternal organization, and done much church work, having been ordained a clergyman on the 7th of June, 1885.

He is receiving a well merited share of patronage, the store generally presenting an appearance of business and the well-dressed windows attracting much attention.

WHERE THE $4 BILLS CAME FROM

Have you a $4 bill in your pocket? There are a great many new $4 bills in circulation just now. These new $4 are an evidence of the unusual prosperity this country is enjoying. The fact of their being in circulation means that business in Canada has expanded to such an extent that the banks have reached the limit of the note circulation allowed them under the Bank Act, and have been forced to buy Government notes to supply the country's demand for currency. The bank note circulation is one of the best barometers of the condition of business in the country. When the note circulation is large the country is in a healthy business condition. The fact that the note circulation has reached its limit and that the government had to be called upon for new currency shows that business in Canada has experienced an enormous expansion this year. It shows business conditions to be in an unusually healthy state.

Messrs. Dr. N. Collie and A. L. Mumm of London, England, have returned to Edmonton after two months spent in the Canadian Rockies on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. These gentlemen have been exploring a hitherto unknown region in the vicinity of Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies, and were accompanied by a train of twenty pack horses, and they state that in some places the forests were so impenetrable, that they had to cut their way through. Several discoveries were made. In one locality they came across two great glaciers, larger than any known in the Rockies, and sighted a towering rock that had the appearance of being even higher than Mount Robson, which is 13,700 feet above the level of the sea. One of the glaciers was forty to fifty miles in length, and 7 to 8 miles in width, and of striking formation.

ECHOES OF THE LATE ELECTION

In Quebec on the 27th of September John Quinn, a plumber, was arrested on the complaint of Mr. Wm. Price, the defeated candidate in Quebec West. There are three charges against Quinn of subornation of personation, namely, by having paid money to three different persons to have them impersonate other persons at the polls. The case of Louis, Letourneau and Lodepeyre, chrged waith having bribed Rene Leduc in Quebec East, has been postponed until the 4th of October; on that day the Quinn case will also be heard.

Wright County, Quebec.—Louis Cousineau, Conservative candidate in Wright County, who was defeated by F. B. Devlin by a majority of over 1,000, to-day stated that he had definitely decided to protest the election. He alleges corruption, and also that in one poll theer were 14 more votes polled than were on the list.

Sherbrooke, Quebec.—Conservatives will petition the court for a recount in connection with the election of Mr. McCrea. In the election it is claimed there are certain discrepancies to be found at one of the polls.

Algoma.—Mr. W. R. Smythe, M. P. for West Algoma, has received evidences of crooked work in one of the polls of his riding. In the revision in that section a number of names were struck off, and the lists printed without them were certified by the judges. At the poll, however, when the list was produced, there was slipped in between the judge's certificate and the printed names a typewritten sheet including twenty additional voters, including those who had been struck off.

Regina.—The Government influence among foreigners and homesteaders was a big factor in the recent election. The Province was overrun with officials of every description coercing voters. Mr. Lake's defeat is bitterly regretted here. The Government spent thousands of dollars to defeat him, and all the machinery of the local government was used against him. The seat will be protested and Mr. Lake will be in Parliament after the first session. Many irregularities are coming to light. There is a strong revulsion of feeling since the Conservative victory.

Queen's, Sunbury, N. B.—William Wade was arrested and charged with corrupt practices at Lincoln poll, where he was one of the agents for Col. McLean, the Liberal candidate in Sunbury and Queen's. One of the features of the proceedings was the reading of the affidavit of Manzer Howland, the elector to whom Wade and Dow Grass, the latter now a fugitive from justice, gave one of the loose ballots marked for McLean, with the promise of $20 if he would go into the booth and deposit the loose ballot and bring out a blank one, thus giving proof that he had "delivered the goods." Howland in his affidavit, also swore that after informing the Conservative agents of what happened he had been promised $50 and later $100 by Grass and Wade if he would return the ballot to them. The latest reports in the Sunbury and Queen's election scandal are to the effect that men high up in the Liberal party will be implicated in the corrupt practices.

RALLY DAY AT BRIDGE STREET

Large Attendance Despite the Rainy Weather—Bright and Cheering Services

The weather yesterday might have been good for ducks, but it was not bad for Sunday School scholars, as evidenced by the large attendance at the Rally Day services in Bridge Street Sunday School yesterday afternoon. Every class was fairly well represented and most of the teachers were also in their places. The purpose of the gathering was made evident by the presence of many who had not been in the school for some time, but who had responded to the rally call of the teachers and superintendent, and who, it is hoped, will continue to attend regularly in the future.

Mr. Wm. Johnson, the veteran superintendent, was at his best, and under his skilful direction the programme went with a swing and a vim that made it thoroughly enjoyable to everyone present.

This year is the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Robert Raikes, the founder of the modern Sunday school. A good picture of this celebrated teacher and leader was printed on the front page of the rally day programme, while another picture, framed, was hung in a most conspicuous place over the platform. Special reference was made to these pictures, and, in fact, the whole programme centered around Robert Raikes.

His Honor, Judge Deroche gave an address, telling the conditions in England at that time, and why Robert Raikes was impelled to start his Sunday School in 1780. This was during the lifetime of John Wesley, the founder of Methodism. Mr. Wesley was combatting with all his great powers the vice and irreligion so prevalent then through England in all sorts and conditions of life, even among the clergy. But his life work was among the adults, and, although the need for work among children was appreciated, he was unable to do it for lack of time.

The time was then ripe for another reformer and leader to combat this vice and irreligion by preventing it in children by means of proper religious religious teaching and culture. Robert Raikes was the man. He started an experimental Sunday school on a plan devised by himself. He was a man of big ideas and great capacity. In three years he had seven or eight schools. He saw the plan was good and described it in the newspapers. It then spread rapidly, and in 1811 crossed the ocean, and the first Sunday school on American soil was started. Canadians are proud of the fact that this first school was in Canada, in what was then Elizabethtown, now Brockville. Robert Smart was the man who started the Sunday School there. The little meeting house in which it was held has since been torn down and replaced by a fine Presbyterian church. The Provincial Convention of the Sunday School Association will be held in this church, Oct. 24-6 in honor of this hundredth anniversary of opening of this school.

Robert Raikes then tried his hand at reforming the prisons, but the work was too large for him to handle in addition to his Sunday schools. So another reformer was raised up, the great philanthropist, Howard, who effected the reforms in the prison system of all England, which have made his name famous.

In connection with the Grand Trunk Exhibit at the Festival of Empire, Crystal Palace, London, England, further advices dated September 12th, have been received from London, regarding the awards that were given to the Grand Trunk, and the Grand Trunk Pacific, and it is gratifying to know that these companies have received four "Grand Prix" for their splendid display instead of the two that were announced in the cable received on September 1st.

Those awards have been made under the following:—"Arts and Crafts"; "Engineering, Lighting and Transportation"; "Building Trades"; and "Advertising." This is considered by the companies named as a great honor, as other railways exhibiting at the Exhibition have only received one award.

The official report from the Grand Trunk representative at this Exhibition, for week ending September 9th, shows that the number of persons visiting the Grand Trunk Pavilion was 21,186, bringing the attendance up to September 9th to 279,912 people.

BRIEF ITEMS FROM BRITAIN

Strike of Doctors---The King Presents a Lion to Dublin Zoo

A Manchester shopkeeper, whose premises were recently damaged by a motor-car, has revenged himself by posting the following in his window: "Notice to motorists. No thoroughfare."

Fifty Years a Vicar

Canon T. B. Dickins, LL.D., who has resigned the rural deanery of Warwick, has completed fifty years as Vicar of Emscote. His church was built in 1861, and he has been its only incumbent.

Trackless Trams

The trackless tramcar system, as tried in Bradford since June, has proved so great a success that the Bradford Corporation Tramway Committee decided to extend it by some eleven miles.

English Cup Cot

Bradford City Football Club, winners of the English Cup, are considering a project to endow a cot at the Bradford Royal Infirmary in honor of their victory. The club has raised about $3,000 for charities.

Veteran Sportsman's Death

The death has occurred at Beechgrove, Moffat, of Mr. William Carruthers, a notable veteran curler and bowler. Mr. Carruthers, who was in his eighty-fourth year, was a native of Dumfriesshire.

Doctors Strike

The ambulance training has been omitted from the continuation classes of the Old Kilpatrick School Board, because the doctors of the district have come to an agreement that none of them would accept a class under a guinea per night, which the Board could not afford.

Fifteen Workhouse Centenarians

The annual report of the Local Government Board for Ireland states that during the year fifteen centenarians, one of whom was stated to be 110 and another 108 years of age, died in Irish workhouses.

Cashbox in Stocking

The King's Lion

One of the interesting additions to the Dublin Zoo is the African lion, a present from the King. Being a wild-caught animal it is much fiercer than those reared in the gardens, and is relegated to one of the open-air cages of the Roberts House.

Fatal Tasting

A housekeeper named Mary Jane McCrory, of Lower Urney Street, Belfast, has died as the result of a piece of meat lodging in her throat. While engaged cooking some meat she put a piece in her mouth to see if it were properly cooked. Death was due to suffocation.

A Medical Veteran

Much regret has been expressed at Dungannon at the death of Dr. William Twigg, a member of an old Tyrone family, and whose personal connection with the town of Dungannon extended to upwards of half a century. He acted as medical officer of Dungannon Union since 1864.

FOOD PRICES RISE

Many Complaints Being Made by All Classes of People

The increasingly high prices of provisions is a cause of grave alarm in Berlin. Complaints are heard from every part of the empire, not merely from the poorer classes, but from the population generally. In many sections of the country crops have been severely damaged by the long drought. The markets are poorly supplied with vegetables. Housewives are bitterly lamenting the almost two-fold increase of the usual price of vegetables, potatoes in particular costing now from $1.25 to $2.50 per cwt., or just double what they cost last year. Moreover, the prices are expected to rise still higher.

400,000 PILGRIMS SEEK HEALING

Many Bavarians Throng to the Alt-Otting Shrine

The fame of the wonder-working Loudes, although it attracts thousands of German Catholics who are in a position to afford the outlay necessary to reach the supposedly miraculous healing waters, has not reached the poorer inhabitants of the Bavarian highlands. These people, however, have a holy shrine at Alt-Otting, which for them has no equal as a source of health, and whither they make a pilgrimage every year, accompanied by their halt, lame, and sick, in the hope that a wonder may be worked for them. This year the pilgrims have numbered no fewer than 400,000, and among them, although perhaps not in search of miracles, were several princes and princesses of the Bavarian Royal family. The place has been a resort of pilgrims since the sixteenth century, when the picture of the Holy Virgin, which is said to possess the power of miracle, was brought there from the Orient.

Facts for Weak Women

Nine-tenths of all the sickness of women is due to some derangement or disease of the organs distinctly feminine. Such sickness can be cured—is cured every day by

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

It Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general restorative tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

We shall not particularize here as to the symptoms of those peculiar affections incident to women, but those wanting full information as to their symptoms and means of positive cure are referred to the People's Common Sense Medical Adviser—1008 pages, newly revised and up-to-date Edition, sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only; or, in cloth binding for 50 stamps.

WORTHY CITIZEN OF KINGSTON DEAD

One of Kingston's most respected and highly esteemed residents passed away on Friday night when Mr. Chas. T. Dickson, Collector of Inland Revenue, died suddenly, shortly before eleven o'clock. The deceased had been about his duties during the day and apparently was in his usual health. In the evening he had attended the opera house and after the performance had walked down to his office on Market street. He was walking along Clarence street when he collapsed.

He entered the department of Inland Revenue 42 years ago, receiving his appointment from Sir John Macdonald and working from the lowest grade to his present position which he filled with credit to himself and the government and with eminent satisfaction to all with whom he did business.

THE WHITE MAN'S DOOM

Well Known Professor Argues That He Must Inevitably Give Way Before Dark Races.

Much has been written at one time and another regarding the ability of the white man to live in the tropics and to retain his bodily and mental vigour. The consensus of opinion has been that he cannot do so, but that after a time he will surely deteriorate physically and mentally. Furthermore, white natives whose ancestors have lived three or more generations in the tropics are not, with rare exceptions, the peers either in body or mind of their relatives living in the temperate zone.

Professor Lionel W. Lyde has recently spoken most pessimistically on the subject. Not only does he hold that the white man cannot live in health in torpical countries, but professes to believe that the white man is doomed to vanish from the face of the earth, giving way to the coloured races. The professor bases his belief on the theory that the original colour of the human skin was dark brown, the variations of that colour being the results of the weakening or strengthening of the pigment under different climatic conditions. The rays of sunlight in the tropics on an individual unprotected by a dark skin have the effect of producing nervous shock, amounting sometimes to total prostration.

Taking ordinary precautions, it may be possible for the white man, after two years of acclimatisation, to live in the tropics even more immune from tropical diseases than the blacks. But this period of immunity lasts for only about seven years, after which the deteriorating effects of the strong solar light and heat begin to show themselves on the white skin, and render the possessor thereof peculiarly susceptible to tropical diseases. In consequence, the permanent settlement of the tropics by white men is impossible.

But while the pigment with which the coloured races are provided is indispensable for life in the tropics, it is a source of no danger in the temperate or frigid zones; therefore the dark or yellow man can intrude into the domain of the man of fair skin with little or no danger. Added to this may be placed the comparatively greater fertility of the dark races, and, in the opinion of Professor Lyde, the doom of the white man is inevitably suggested. His part it is, therefore, in the scheme of the world to train the dark-skinned races in all the arts and sciences, including the art of government, and then himself to get off the earth.

Free Fare, Little Salary.

In some foreign countries a liberal allowance in the way of travelling expenses makes a meagre salary a respectable one. In Italy, for instance, the journalist, with barely one or two exceptions, works for a salary which we pampered ones in Canada would laugh at. But he has his compensations. He—and not only himself, but his wife and family, too—travels free on all the railways, whether the journey is on business or not. If he wishes to go to the theatre, and to take his friends, he has only to ask, and the requisite box or stalls are at his disposal—and that, however humble his professional rank may be. On the whole, the Canadian journalist prefers not to be paid in this kind.

A DOUBTFUL CASE

WIARTON, Ont., Oct. 3.—Traces of paris green have found in the clothing of James McCartney, whose mysterious death is puzzling the authorities. Although the case may be suicide, the theory of murder is not disproved.

KILLED BY A CAR

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 3.—Charles Abbott, a Royal Artillery pensioner, was fatally injured by a street car here this morning.

MUST PROBE INTO THE TRANSCONTINENTAL

MONTREAL, Oct. 1.—Mr. Bourassa and his group are calling loudly for an investigation into the construction of the Transcontinental Railway.

It must be complete, says Le Devoir adding: It is absolutely necessary, and this investigation is the most important which at the present time imposes itself on the consideration of the new government. If the Laurier government has declined during these five years to make this investigation the Borden administration must get to work at the start.

The veil must be raised for behind the veil the contractors have built the road with the public money. No one has the right to oppose this investigationfi which must be carried on with justice and precaution, yet investigation there must be, as the present and future members of the commission are equally interested. The new government does not wish to be held responsible equally with the old regime, so let there be an inquiry.

DEATH'S CALL

JAMES TURNER.

Mr. James Turner, an aged resident of the city, died yesterday after being ill for some time. Deceased, who was 81 years of age, was born in Prince Edward County and all his life was spent in this vicinity. Mr. Turner was by profession a carpenter. He was a man who was well and favorably known in the city and surrounding country. Of late years he had been identified with the Salvation Army, in which he took considerable interest. Mrs. Turner preceded him to the tomb some years ago. Of a family surviving Mrs. J. H. Anderson, of this city, is a daughter. The remains were interred this afternoon, services being held at the Salvation Army barracks.

Happy the man who discovers that his last winter's overcoat will do another season.

THE LATEST NEWS OF THE WAR IN EAST

Italian Fleet Bombarding Tripoli—Turks Have Withdrawn to the Interior—Turkey Still Seeking Peace

ROME, Italy, Oct. 3.—Official announcement has been made that the Italian fleet are bombarding the city of Tripoli to-day. This seems to bear out the statement that the bombardment was delayed in the hope that Turkey would come to terms. The Turks will suffer little, as they have withdrawn to the interior.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 3.—Turkey to-day issued a third appeal to the powers for intervention, declaring that it has postponed retaliatory measures in the hope that the war would be ended in justice and equity.

TOULON, France, Oct. 3.—The victims of the battleship Liberte explosion were buried here to-day. A hundred and eighty-five coffins were borne through the streets on gun carriages.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

NO CASES FOR TRIAL.

The non-jury sittings of Hastings County Court were to have been held here to-day before Judge Deroche, but there were no cases to be tried. The court was formally opened and adjourned.

YESTERDAY'S FIRE.

The fire yesterday afternoon at Mr. J. E. Parks' house on Church street did but slight damage. It originated in a clothes closet upstairs, and was extinguished before the fire brigade arrived upon the scene.

PREPARING TO MOVE.

It is expected that the police will be in their new quarters within the next two days. The furnishings of the city building were to-day removed to the new quarters on Pinnacle street. The change will be a great improvement over the present quarters.

CASE IN PROGRESS.

The attention of the Police Magistrate to-day was occupied in hearing charges preferred against Fred Renfrew and his wife and Emma Brown for keeping a disorderly house. The case was in progress this afternoon. Mr. Anderson was prosecuting counsel and Mr. Carnew appeared for the accused.

BURIED AT PLAINFIELD.

The funeral of the late Miss Elizabeth Shepherd took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence Plainfield, and was largely attended. Services at the house were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Ward, Methodist minister on that circuit. Interment took place at the Plainfield cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. W. N. Gould, S. Hall, W. Garrison, R. Gibson, Wm. and S. Hall.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

Mr. Charles A. Young, residing on Albert Street, was the victim of a peculiar accident on Sunday evening, and one which might have resulted fatally. It appears that Mr. Young went to a window to investigate some noise outside and in doing so pushed his head through a pane of glass. He sustained a rather severe cut about the neck, which was in close proximity to the jugular vein. His injuries were attended to by a physician, and the unfortunate man is doing well.

PLEASED WITH NEW ROAD.

Mr. W. H. Grant, Manager of Construction on the Canadian Northern Railway, who accompanied Engineer Simmons of the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners in his trip of inspection over the new Toronto-Trenton line last Saturday, told The Globe yesterday that the Government engineer was highly pleased with the construction of the road, and told Mr. Grant that he did not expect to see such a long distance of new road in such good condition. Everything is in readiness for traffic, and the passenger and freight schedules will be put into effect next Monday. It is expected that a number of C. N. R. officials will travel on the first eastbound passenger train from Toronto to Trenton next Monday.

LODGE SEMI-CENTENNIAL.

Brethren from Belleville, Stirling, Wellington and Ameliasburg, co-operated with the Frankford Masons last night in celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the old Franck Lodge, named after the late J. C. Franck of Belleville, and in honoring R. W. Bro. Diamond. Interesting extracts were read from 50 years of the minutes of the craft by the Worshipful Master, Bro. Howell, manager of the Molson's Bank at Frankford. An historical portrait was presented by R. W. Bro. McGinnis. The banquet was both dainty and sumptuous and the decorations were beautiful. R. W. Bro. Pringle responded to "The Craft," R. W. Bro. Ponton for "Our Country." R. W. Bro. Diamond represented the Grand Master, and the new D.D.G.M. is to be congratulated upon the success of this, his first official visit. R. W. Bros. Post and O'Flynn responded for the District and W. Bros. Walker, Potts, Barragar, Clarke, and Carnew voiced the sentiments of the visitors, all appreciative of the splendid hospitality of the Frankford brethren.

CITY FATHERS' RESUMED WORK AFTER HOLIDAYS

Their Last Night's Session was Long and Harmonious—A Lot of Miscellaneous Business Transacted—Judge Deroche Submits his Report on Tax Lot Investigation

The city fathers met last night, being the first session since the holidays. During the meeting, which lasted until 12.30, many matters were attended to. City Assessor Kerr asked for an increase of salary, and the request was granted, his annual stipend being fixed at $1,000. It was decided that certain furnishings taken out of the isolation hospital should be given to the W.C.A. for use in the new wing of the City Hospital. A satisfactory report of the inspection of the city water works system was presented. A communication was read from Messrs. Wills & Wright re the C.N.O.R. bridge over the river and giving notice that the Springer Lock Manufacturing Company would hold the Company liable if it suffered any loss by reason of the obstruction in the river alleged by the improper construction of the piers. The report of Judge Deroche re tax lot investigation was read and referred to the Executive Committee. Many other matters were attended to.

The members present were: Mayor Ackerman, Ald. Vermilyea, Caldwell, Thompson, McGie, Chown, St Charles, Sills, Bleecker, Adams, Riggs Clarke, Bogle, Canning, Woodley, Marshall, Gibson, Anderson, Panter, Parks and Flagler.

After the reading and confirming of the minutes of the last meeting the Council went into Committee of the whole on reports, communications, etc., Ald. St. Charles in the chair.

The reports of the various committees were considered and the accounts passed, also the following recommendations:

That a cement walk be laid on the south side of Market Square as a continuation of the present walk, and that the board platform from the sidewalk to the weigh house be removed and replaced with cement; that the platform and steps on the east end of the market building be replaced with cement steps and platform at a cost of $250, to be included in local improvement debentures and chargeable to market and city property department;

That the bond of F. D. Diamond, city tax collector, be accepted.

Purchase of Hose.

A recommendation from the Fire Committee to purchase 500 feet of Keystone hose was presented.

Ald. Clarke asked if tenders for fire hose had been asked for.

Ald. Canning said tenders had not been asked for because the prices were the same and the Keystone brand was recognized to be the best hose, so Chief Campbell reported.

It was decided to purchase 500 feet of Keystone hose.

The following accounts were passed:

Bell Telephone Co.	$6.80

F. D. Ford	4.75
J. Gibson	68.75
W. W. Chown Co.	.40

Mr. L. McGowan wrote to the Council that he had been assessed for 76 feet frontage for a sewer on Dundas Street, whereas he had but 46 feet frontage.

The Street Surveyor said the matter had been looked into, and it was ascertained that 30 feet charged to Mr. McGowan belonged to Rev. Mr. Peake and it was a portion of a vacant lot.

On motion the communication was referred to the Executive Committee.

A communication was read from Mr. F. S. Wallbridge stating that the city had been encroaching upon certain property belonging to Mrs. Col. Campbell and stone taken away by the city. Compensation was asked for.

Ald. Panter said he could not say as to whether the particulars were

CONTRACT FOR CASTINGS

T. B. Angrove, of Place D'Armes has received a contract to supply car castings for the Canadian Northern Railway. He will give the necessary supply for 175 cars, and this will mean quite a big job. Additional men will be put at work, and it will also mean an extension of his shop. The cars are built by the Rathbun Company, of Deseronto. It is likely that Mr. Angrove will receive a further order to supply castings for about 125 more cars.—Kingston Whig.

E. GUSS PORTER.
His business is to make his majorities Bigger.

The Toronto News says:—

Once upon a time E. Guss Porter, now M.P. for West Hastings, was a law student. Some chose business law, some corporation law, some unwritten law, but Guss Porter headed his ship of intention towards criminal law. He hasn't blamed his compass a single instant since his first decision. Belleville, where Mr. Porter gets his living and his majority, is a Conservative community on the shores of the Bay of Quinte. There are two chief occasions when Guss Porter is called in; to wit, when a citizen gets into trouble with the law or when a Government gets into trouble with the country. On both occasions he is at the front gate, dressed for the journey. A famous trial first brought Mr. Porter into the limelight as a power in criminal procedure. His client faced a serious charge—and Mr. Porter faced the jury of twelve men. "Not guilty," said the jury. And at once the public forgot the case and remembered Porter. He has, since that day, defended a regiment of men and women, generally managing to impress the jury that there is only one side to the case and modesty forbids him to mention that side.

Biographically speaking he was born on May 28, 1859, at Consecon, Prince Edward County, which leaves him just 52 years of age. He began his career at six years of age, it is intimated, by lining up twelve tin soldiers, with a big soldier sitting on a block, to whom he would address himself: "My Lord, and gentlemen of the jury." This fact is not mentioned, however, in the parliamentary guide.

When the call of the municipality came to him, he became a councillor and stayed at it for five years, at the end of which time, in consideration of the long evenings sacrificed at the aldermanic board, the town made him mayor. He was first returned to the House of Commons January 15, 1901, at a bye election, when his majority was 501. And now notice! The quickness of the hand deceives the eye.

In 1904 he had 868 votes more than the man who lost; in 1908 he had 1161 to the good, and now in 1911 no less than 1771. It will surprise no one if in 1915 the returning officer presents him with a slip marked "Majority 3000." Politics or law—he has a knack of winning decisions.

LORD STRATHCONA RETAINS HIS OFFICE

OTTAWA, Oct. 1.—Lord Strathcona will remain Canadian High Commissioner in London for some time yet. That can be definitely stated as a result of his Lordship's flying visit to Ottawa on Saturday afternoon, during which time he conferred with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Borden. Both the outgoing and incoming Premier asked Lord Strathcona to continue at his post for the present at least.

The High Commissioner arrived in the capital from Montreal shortly after 1 o'clock and was met at the station by Mr. Borden, Sir William Mackenzie, Sir Sandford Fleming, and a few personal friends. He went directly to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's office, and a little later dined with the Premier at the Rideau Club. An hour later he met Mr. Borden and discussed with him for some time matters relating to the High Commissionership. It is understood that Mr. Borden asked Lord Strathcona to continue at London his services to Canada for the present, and that his Lordship consented. It is believed here that he will continue to represent Canada in Great Britain as long as his health will permit.

Lord Strathcona's resignation has been in the hands of the Premier for two years past, but at the latter's request his Lordship has continued to hold his office. Sir Wilfrid naturally expressed the desire yesterday that no further action in the matter be taken by Lord Strathcona just now in view of the pending change of Administration, and as Mr. Borden expressed the same wish the veteran High Commissioner will leave for London this week to resume the official duties he has discharged so well for the past fifteen years.

Turkey is said to have no friends, but she has a mighty army. They are stubborn fighters, as has been proved on many occasions, notably at Kars and Plevna, and Italy will find the Ottomans a hard nut to crack.

CURRENT COMMENT

Canada consumes more paper per head of population than any other country in the world.

Italy has plunged into war, doubtless to get something to read about besides the Camorrist trial.—Ottawa Journal.

October 30 is the day fixed for Thanksgiving Day. Well, the Liberals ought to be able in a month to attune their minds to a mood favorable to the giving of thanks.—Hamilton Herald.

"It takes defeat to show Sir Wilfrid Laurier how many loyal friends and followers he has." So says the St. Thams Journal. A few weeks hence all will be better informed as to the facts.

James Conmee, ex-M. P., has wisely taken to the tall timbers or the prairie grass—same thing in this connection—and will not again face his former constituents. Good-bye, James; or rather, farewell!

Cheese is higher in Canada than it is in the U. S. markets by nine-sixteenths of a cent per pound. Our duty of 3 cents per pound prevents the invasion of the Canadian dairyman's market by the cheaper product from across the lines.

Belgium, which is said to have formed more co-operative agricultural associations in recent years than any other country in Europe, has a population of 7,000,000 people, an average of about 614 to the square mile.

The practice of the Grit party during election contests has long been to appeal to the stomachs of the electors. Some years ago the appeal was by means of pigs' feet and beer. Now, according to the Unity, Saskatchewan, Courier, it is Dutch suppers.

They are beginning to appreciate Laurier in England. A London despatch of Sept. 29th, says: The Globe describes the speeches at the Canadian Club banquet at Ottawa as the rising sun banishing the mists of Laurierism and reciprocity. There was no talk of loosening the bonds such as delights home radicals.

A sensational discovery has been made at the government fire-arms factory at Saint Etienne. France's secret war appliances have been stolen from the shops in the last few months by the carload. One carload, which was seized just after leaving the factory, contained cartridges and Lebel rifles.

The saddest people in Canada just now are in those communities which the 21st of September were persuaded to vote for Government candidates on the promise of securing something substantial in the way of public expenditures, and offices, senatorships, etc., from corrupt ministers. Occasionally in politics the punishment is made to fit the crime, and this is one of them.

Whether the globe on which we live is gradually drying up or not is a question that has been much debated. Recent discoveries in Central Asia have been regarded by some as favoring an affirmative answer, but others have replied that the observed phenomena are simply periodic changes. Dr. Walser, of Zurich, champions the affirmative view on the ground that a number of European lakes have certainly disappeared within the last two hundred and fifty years. The Canton of Zurich, for example, had one hundred and forty-nine lakes a quarter of a century ago, and only seventy-six to-day. He believes that a similar tendency to disappearance has affected the lakes of Germany and Russia.

CONFIDENCE SWINDLERS

How They Got $1,000 from an Unsuspecting London Visitor

Confidence trick swindlers are busy among visitors to London, and one of the victims, an Anglo-Indian tea planter, lost $1,000 in bank-notes. He became acquainted, at the Shepherd's Bush Exhibition, with a well-dressed stranger who posed as an Australian, and on the following day they set out together to do some sight-seeing. In Oxford Street the inevitable confederate turned up. Just in front of the two men he dropped a little green velvet case, which the victim restored to him. The stranger was effusive in his thanks, did not know what he should have done had he lost the case which was full of valuable gems, and insisted on the finder taking wine with him. In a wine bar near Portland Place the latest arrival told the familiar story of the trouble he had in distributing some $100,000 in charity in accordance with the will of his late father. Would they help him? The Australian, "as a proof of his confidence" in their newly-made acquaintance, handed over a bundle of alleged bank-notes and suggested that his newly-found Anglo-Indian companion should show similar confidence. The planter went to his agents—a well-known firm of bankers in Pall Mall—drew $1,000 in two Bank of England notes and entrusted them to the care of this wealthy dispenser of charity.

It was not long before the latter, carrying with him the victim's camera, left in company with the "Australian," to bring from his bank some of the funds for distribution. An hour later it dawned on the waiting victim what had really happened.

MATRIMONIAL SWINDLER

His Latest Exploit Was to Steal $4,500 From a Woman

Another dangerous matrimonial swindler, named David Gorenstein, has been arrested at Frankfurt-on-Main. This man, who is 22 years old and who has lived under several names, has supported himself in luxury for nearly ten years by swindling ladies anxious to enter the state of matrimony. As Dr. Henster, from Boston, he seems to have done great work in Berlin, and as a wealthy South American rancher named Dori Resting, has been lately distinguishing himself in Russia. His latest exploit was stealing $4,500 from a too confiding Swiss governess, who was returning home from Russia with her savings. Dori Resting made the lady's acquaintance in a train, and, promising her marriage, induced her to stay at the same hotel with him in Berlin. When the lady was asleep the "rancher" robbed her of every penny she possessed. The police have evidence that in several cases he used ether or chloroform to render his victims senseless before robbing them.

LAMP FOR MINERS

A Colliery Proprietor's Donation for an Electric Burner

A sum of $5,000 has been placed by a colliery proprietor at the disposal of the Home Secretary as a prize for the best electric lamp suitable for the use of miners. The conditions, according to an official announcement issued by the Home Secretary, require that the lamp shall be of simple construction a[illegible] easy to maintain in good order, and sufficiently strong to withstand rough usage. It must be so constructed as to render impossible the ignition of inflammable gas either inside or outside the lamp, and the battery should be so constructed that any liquid it may contain cannot be spilled while the lamp is in use. The lamp must be capable of giving a light of not less than two candle-power continuously for at least ten hours, and should be so locked that it cannot be opened without detection. In making the award regard will be paid to the first cost of the lamp, cost of maintenance, convenience in handling, and weight, when charged and ready for use.

REVIVAL OF MUSIC

Mr. Balfour Says Britain is Becoming a Great Creative Musical Community

Before an audience of eminent musicians, Mr. Balfour spoke with pride of English music of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, but admitted that after Purcell's death musical England came to a period of comparative barrenness hard to explain. Mr. Balfour suggested that this was due in part to Handel's "overbearing personality." In the cathedral, however, a school of composers, not of profound originality, but of great merit never ceased to flourish. He was convinced that the barren years have now come to an end. Within his own life men of original creative powers have year by year come to the front. "We can now look our Continental friends in the face and say that Britain at last is in process of taking her place among the great creative musical communities." Of all the arts, he was convinced that music had the greatest future among the masses of all nations.

INMATE OF WORKHOUSE HUSBAND OF COUNTESS

Martin Townsend is Said to Have Been Married to a Titled Lady

After making their customary round of the Newport Workhouse some time ago, the Visiting Committee made the following entry concerning an inmate named Townsend: "An actor, stated to be married to a countess." Townsend chivalrously declines to divulge his wife's name as he is anxious not to hurt her feelings, but he himself claims that she is a countess.

The romance appears to date from July, 1896, when a marriage took place in the Registry Office in Charles Street, Cardiff, the bridegroom being Martin Edward Townsend, who described himself as a professional and a bachelor, and gave his age as 32. The bride, who was fashionably attired, described herself as a widow, and her age was also entered as 32. The name she then gave has a rich aristocratic flavor. Apparently the romance was short-lived, for the couple soon separated. Townsend is said to be an excellent companion, and his conversation shows him to be well read and a man of considerable culture.

SALE OF RELICS

Comprising Autograph Letters of Lady Hamilton and Scabbard Worn by Wellington

One of the most interesting sales of relics, curios, and works of art of recent years will be held at Manor House, near Dorchester, when the Bridge collection will be put up to auction by Messrs. Waring and Gillow.

The collection was formed by Mr. John Bridge, who died in 1831, and his son, John Gawler Bridge, who survived him for eighteen years. They were both members of the firm of Rundell, Bridge and Rundell, who were jewellers to four monarchs—George III., George IV., William IV., and Victoria.

Nelson and Wellington are both represented in the collection. There is a pathetic relic of the great Admiral—an autograph letter written by Lady Hamilton to the then Prince of Wales enclosing a lock of Lord Nelson's hair and thanking the Prince for his kindness in calling on her in the hour of her bereavement. The lock of hair and the original wrapper of the letter, with the black seal, are intact.

The Iron Duke is represented by the original scabbard of the sword worn by him during the Peninsular War, bearing the dent of the bullet that nearly cut short his life. The Duke appears to have attached no value to the scabbard, for he instructed Messrs. Rundell, Bridge and Rundell to make a new one in place of it, and gave them the old scabbard in exchange. This is shown by a document which, with the scabbard, is mounted in the frame of an oil painting of the Duke by Andrew Moreton. Perhaps the gem of the collection is an antique jewelled pendant consisting of a large emerald in a circle formed of brilliants and emeralds set in beautifully enamelled gold, from which depends a diamond-shaped drop. This pendant is believed to have been the property of Queen Elizabeth, and is inscribed with her name and the royal crown.

The collection also contains wonderful silver and pewter, an ivory medallion ascribed to Benvenuto Cellini, statuettes and bronzes by famous masters, Chippendale and Hepplewhite furniture, rare books, china, and the wrought iron railings and scroll lamp-bracket which formerly surrounded the tomb of Mary Queen of Scots in Peterborough Cathedral.

BODY IN MOUNTAIN GLACIER

A Fall of Ice Reveals the Body of a Man

A guide recently came into Kandersteg, from the Loetschenthal, Switzerland, and brought the news that a fall of ice from the Loetschen Glacier had revealed the body of a mountaineer and a hat supposed to belong to another man. The guide believed he had solved the mystery of the two Englishmen, Messrs. Cohen and Benecke, who were lost on the glacier in 1895, when they were surprised by a snowstorm and fell into a crevasse. A later report, however, states that the body is that of a Swiss who disappeared in 1899. The discovery was due to the abnormal melting of the ice owing to the great heat. The discovery of the body came about as follows: A guide went with a lady over the Loetschen Pass towards Kandersteg. Instead of the usual way over the Loetschen Glacier the lady expressed a strong inclination to take another path, and they came across a very little used track, on which they found the body.

ANGLICANS AT KHARTUM

Great Crowds Will Attend the Consecration of the Cathedral

Plans for the consecration ceremonies of the new Anglican Cathedral at Khartum on January 26 next are now completed, and invitations to witness the event are already being issued. As a large number of English Churchmen and their families are expected to go from London to Khartum for the occasion, the committee has arranged for special reduced-rate excursions for parties of fifty or more, which will include stops at Alexandria and Cairo, a voyage by steamer up the most picturesque part of the Nile, and short trips to Omdurman and other points in the Soudan where historic associations and characteristic native life appeal to the imagination and interest of the traveller. In addition to the English pilgrimage to the consecration of the cathedral, it is expected that Khartum will be filled with visitors from Cairo and the north, for at that season of the year there is usually a considerable exodus, due to the inclement weather of Egypt, to the warmth and sunshine of the Soudan.

The Haunted Chamber

CHAPTER I.

The sun has "dropped down," and the "day is dead." The silence and calm of coming night are over everything. The shadowy twilight lies softly on sleeping flowers and swaying boughs, on quiet fountains—the marble basins of which gleam snow-white in the uncertain light—on the glimpse of the distant ocean through the giant elms. A floating mist hangs in the still, warm air, making heaven and earth mingle in one sweet confusion.

The creeping ivy up the ancient walls of the castle is rustling and whispering as the evening breeze sweeps over it. High up the tendrils climb, past mullioned windows and quaint devices, until they reach even to the old tower, and twine lovingly around it, and push through the long aperture in the masonry of the walls of the haunted chamber.

It is here that the shadows cast their heaviest gloom. All this corner of the tower is wrapped in darkness, as though to obscure the scene of terrible crimes of past centuries.

Ghosts of dead and gone lords and ladies seem to peer out mysteriously from the openings in this quaint chamber, wherein no servant, male or female, of the castle has ever yet been known to set foot. It is full of dire horrors to them, and replete with legends of by-gone days and grewsome sights ghastly enough to make the stoutest heart quail.

In the days of the Stuarts an old earl hanged himself in that room, rather than face the world with dishonor attached to his name; and earlier still a beauteous dame, fair but frail, had been incarcerated there and slowly starved to death by her relentless lord. There was even in the last century a baronet—the earldom had been lost to the Dynecourts during the Commonwealth—who, having quarrelled with his friend over a reigning belle, had smitten him across his cheek with his glove, and then challenged him to mortal combat. The duel had been fought in the luckless chamber, and had only ended with the death of both combatants. the blood stains upon the floor were large and deep, and to this day the boards bear silent witness to the sanguinary character of that secret fight.

Just now, standing outside the castle in the warmth and softness of the dying daylight, one can hardly think of bygone horrors, or aught that is sad and sinful.

There is an air of bustle and expectancy within the doors that betokens coming guests; the servants are moving to and fro noiselessly but busily, and now and then the stately housekeeper passes from room to room uttering commands and injunctions to the maids as she goes. No less occupied and anxious is the butler, as he surveys the work of the footmen. It is so long since the old place has had a resident master, and so much longer still since guests have been invited to it, that the household are more than ordinarily excited at the change now about to take place.

Sir Adrian Dynecourt, after a prolonged tour on the Continent and lingering visits to the East, has at last come home with the avowed intention of becoming a staid country gentleman, and of settling down to the cultivation of turnips, the breeding of prize oxen, and the determination to be the M. F. H. when old Lord Dartee shall have fulfilled his declared intention of retiring in his favor. He is a tall young man, lithe and active. His skin, though naturally fair, is bronzed by foreign travel. His hair is a light brown, cut very close to his head. His eyes are large, clear, and honest, and of a peculiarly dark violet; they are beautiful eyes, winning, sweet, and steady in their glance. His mouth, shaded by a drooping fair mustache, is large and firm, yet very prone to laughter.

It is quite the end of the London season, and Sir Adrian has hurried down from town to give direction for the reception of some people whom he has invited to stay with him during the slaughter of the partridges.

Now all is complete, and the last train from London being due half an hour ago, Sir Adrian is standing on the steps of his hall-door anxiously awaiting some of his guests.

There is even a touch of genuine impatience in his manner, which could hardly be attributed to the ordinary longing of a young man to see a few of his friends. Sir Adrian's anxiety is open and undisguised, and there is a little frown upon his brow. Presently his face brightens as he hears the roll of carriage wheels. When the carriage turns the corner of the drive, and the horses are pulled up at the hall door, Sir Adrian sees a fair face at the window that puts to flight all the fears he has been harboring for the last half hour.

"You have come?" he says, delightedly, running down the steps and opening the carriage door himself. "I am so glad! I began to think the train had run away with you, or that the horses had bolted."

"Such a journey as it has been!" exclaims a voice not belonging to the face that had looked from the carriage at Sir Adrian. "It has been tiresome to the last degree. I really don't know when I felt so fatigued."

A little woman, small and fair, steps languidly to the ground as she says this, and glances pathetically at her host. She is beautifuly "got up" both in dress and complexion, and at first glance appears almost girlish. Laying her hand in Sir Adrian's, she lets it rest there, as though glad to be at her journey's end, conveying at the same time by a gentle pressure of her taper fingers the fact that she is even more glad that the end of her journey had brought her to him. She looks up at him with her red lips drooping as if tired, and with a bewildered expression in her pretty blue eyes that adds to the charm of her face.

"It's an awful distance from town," says Sir Adrian, as if apologizing for the spot on which his grand old castle has been built. "And it was more than good of you to come to me. I can only try to make up to you for the discomfrt you have experienced to-day by throwing all possible chances of amusement in your way whilst you stay here."

By this time she had withdrawn her hand, and so he is free to go up to his other guest and bid her welcome. He says nothing to her. strange to say, but it is his hand that seeks ot retain hers this time, and it is his eyes that look longingly into the face before him.

"You are tired too,?" he says at length. "Come into the house and rest awhile before dinner. You will like to go to your rooms at once, perhaps?" he adds, turning to his two visitors.

"Thank you—yes. If you will have our tea sent upstairs," replies Mrs. Talbot plaintively, "it will be such a comfort!" she always speaks in a somewhat pouting tone, and with heavyy emphasis.

"Tea—nonsense!" responds Sir Adrian. "There's nothing like champagne as a pick-me-up. I'll send you tea also, but take my advice and try the champagne."

"Oh, thank you, I shall so much prefer my tea!" Mrs. Talbot declares, with a graceful little shrug of her shoulders, at which her friend, Miss Delmaine laughs aloud.

"I accept your advice, Sir Adrian," she says, casting a mischievous glance at him under her long lashes. "And—yes, Dora will take champagne too—when it comes."

"Naughty girl!" exclaims Mrs. Talbot, with a little flickering smile. Dora Talbot seldom smiles, having learned by experience that her delicate face looks prettier in repose. "Come, then, Sir Adrian," let us enter your enchanted castle."

The servants by this time have taken in all their luggage—that is, as much as they have been able to bring in the carriage; and now the two ladies walk up the steps and enter the hall, their host beside them.

Mrs. Talbot, who has recovered her spirits a little, is chattering gayly whilst Miss Delmaine is strangely silent, and seems lost in a kind of pleased wonder as she gazes upon all her charming surroundings.

The last rays of light are streaming in through the stained-glass windows, rendering the old hall full of mysterious beauty. The grim warriors in their coats of mail seem, to the entranced gaze of Florence Delmaine, to be making ready to spring from the niches which hold them.

Waking from her dream as she reaches the foot of the stone staircase, she says abruptly, but with a lovely smile playing around her mouth:

"Surely, Sir Adrian, you have a ghost in this beautiful old place, or a secret starcase, or at least a bogey of some sort? Do not spoil the romantic look of it by telling me you have no tale of terror to impart, no history of a ghostly visitant who walks these halls at the dead of night."

"We have no ghost here, I am sorry to say," answers Sir Adrian, laughing. "For the first time I feel distressed and ashamed that it should be so. We can only boast a haunted chamber; but there are certain legends about it that I am proud to say the bare narration of which would make even the stoutest heart quail."

THEY INJURE CHILDREN

Cathartics and Pills and Harsh Physics May Cause Distressing Complaints.

You cannot be over-careful in the selection of medicine for children. Only the very gentlest bowel medicine should ever be given. Ordinary pills, cathartics, and purgatives are too apt to do more harm than good. They sometimes cause griping, nausea, and distressing after-effects, and may actually injure the health, thus establishing a life-lasting annoyance.

We personally recommend and guarantee Rexall Orderlies as a safe and dependable remedy for constipation and associate bowel disorders. We have such faith in the virtues of this remedy that we sell it on our guarantee of money back in every instance where it fails to give entire satisfaction, and we urge all in need of such medicine to try it at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies not only relieve constipation, but help to remove the cause of this ailment. They also frequently overcome the necessity of taking laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition.

There is really, in our opinion, no similar medicine so good as Rexall Orderlies for the purpose to which it is directed, especially for children, aged and delicate persons. They are prepared in tablet form and in two sizes of packages; 12 tablets 10c., 36 tablets, 25c., and 80 tablets, 50c. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

MONTREAL, Oct. 2.—There was some business worked in No. 2 northern Manitoba spring wheat for nearby shipment to London; but the prices bid for future shipment were all out of line. MONTREAL, Oct. 2.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 30, were 2600 cattle, 2640 sheep and lambs, 2575 hogs, and 525 calves. The supply on the market for sale consisted of 800 cattle, 1875 sheep and lambs, 1290 hogs and 400 calves.

There were only four loads of Manitoba domestic cattle on the market, some of which sold at $5.35 per cwt., for mixed steers and heifers, which averaged about 1075 pounds per head. Choice Ontario steers, weighing 1200 pounds each, sold at 6½c; good, at 6c to 6¼c; fairly good, at 5½c to 5¾c; fair, at 5c to 5¼c, and common, at 4½c to 4¾c per lb., and packers paid three cents per lb. for bulls for canning.

There continues to be an easy feeling in the market for hogs and prices since this day week show a further decline of 5c to 10c per cwt., on account of the more liberal supplies coming forward. The demand was fairly good and sales of selected lots were made at $6.95 to $7 per cwt., weighed off the cars, and heavy hogs and sows sold for $1 per cwt. less than the above figures.

A good trade was done in sheep and lambs, and as the offerings were not in excess of the requirements a firm feeling prevailed in the market and prices showed no change. Lambs sold at 5½c to 6c, and sheep, at 3¾c to 4c per lb. The demand for calves was good at prices ranging from $3 to $10, according to size and quality.

Italy and Turkey

Despite the most earnest efforts of the best men of all the civilized nations, the time has not yet arrived when there shall be universal peace—when swords will be beaten into ploughshares and spears into pruning hooks. Reference to international tribunals of matters of serious difference between nations and negotiation of treaties for the peaceful settlement of difficulties have done much toward restraining and keeping in leash the dogs of war, but despite all such worthy agencies, aggressive wars, in which one of the parties concerned will not submit their cause to arbitration or mediation will at times occur. Such is the case in the war which Italy is at present waging against Turkey. The prize which is being battled for is Tripoli, the site of Carthage, which ages ago battled with Rome and was finally conquered 146 before Christ.

One has to go back to the Middle Ages for a parallel to the action of Italy in declaring war on Turkey. It resembles the course of Henry V. of England in signalizing his succession to the throne by promptly sending to France a demand for an immediate surrender of all the territory which had once been ruled by the Plantagenets and following it promptly by moving an army across the Channel. Or it might be compared with the Fourth Crusade, conducted by the Doge Enrico Dandolo of Venice, when 84 years old, in order to make his reign illustrious.

This war is, in fact, a modern crusade, though it lacks the religious inspiration of the early crusaders. It is a crusade dictated by the less noble spirit of commercialism. The real motive of it may be found in the fact that at the time of the treaty of Berlin in 1878, Italy was given to understand that, when the dissolution of the Ottoman Empire should occur, she should have Tripoli. Italy has been waiting and hoping. But the Ottoman Empire has not been broken up. And lately it has made a pronounced step toward civilization. It has become a constitutional monarchy, with a free parliament, has begun to imitate other European nations, has placed orders for modern war ships and has employed English officers to build up its navy. As matters were going, it had begun to look as if the Ottoman Empire never would be broken up. If Italy ever were to get Tripoli, she must move at once. A few years more of delay and it would be too late. The Moroccan affair furnished the merest shadow of an excuse for acting, but it had to serve for lack of a better. And Italy framed her demands in such a way as to make war unavoidable by any concession short of the complete political control of Tripoli.

It is small wonder that Turkish wrath is at the boiling point, but Italy's great naval superiority makes Turkey almost helpless. If Italy should attempt a landing in European or Asiatic Turkey, the Turks would give her a warm reception, for Turkey has a fine army. But Turkish ports can be blockaded or bombarded and the outlying province of Tripoli can be invaded without much interference from the few torpedo boats, cruisers and ancient battleships that fly the Turkish flag. The Arab and Berber tribesmen in Tripoli furnished with the modern guns which Turkey has managed to send them, may make a lot of trouble for the expeditionary force, but they can hardly do more than wage guerrilla war.

The outbreak of this war is not only an offence against the morality of the nations, but it is one that there is no knowing the end of. Such an outbreak may be the precursor to the European war we have so long heard of. Britain, especially, has reason to be fearful, and it is not without reason that the Imperial Ministry has made strenuous efforts to settle the dispute without a resort to arms. King George rules over more Mohammedans than does the Sultan of Turkey. But the Turkish Sultan, as the descendant of the Prophet, is regarded throughout the Mohammedan world as the official head of Islam; and this unprovoked attack by Italy will not improbably be looked upon by Mohammedans as a holy war—as a struggle between the cross and the crescent. In such an event, if Britain should bar the way in Egypt against the passage of Turkish forces on their way to defend Turkish territory, her action might arouse the savage resentment not only of the millions of Mussulmans in Egypt, but the many more millions of the King's Mussulman subjects in India. We must hope that this unfortunate event will not materialize, but certain it is that Italy has started a war the end whereof is hard to estimate. Islamism is stained with the blood of wantonly murdered people, but it cannot show many worse violations of the ordinary laws of civilization than this baseless appeal to arms on the part of Italy.

The Tax Lot Investigation

Judge Deroche has made his report and given his finding. The evidence, as soon as received, will be published in full, when it may require some attention. In the meantime we give the Judge's opinion of the evidence, which may also require, when time permits, a passing notice. The Judge says:

It seems clear, from the whole evidence, that there was no conspiracy between the members of the committee; that the sales to relatives brought as fair a price as sales to strangers; that no stranger made an offer for any of these lots before they were sold to relatives; that the same procedure was followed in selling to relatives as in selling to strangers; that no part of the purchase money in any case belonged to any member of the committee, and no member of the committee profited personally by the sale.

I have only two suggestions to make as to an outcome of this investigation:

1st.—The advisability of the Council considering whether the policy which has been followed since the passing of By-law 1141 should be continued: that is, to dispose of the lots at their cost to the city, or a little better, at the earliest opportunity in order to get the property in the hands of taxpayers who might improve it, and thus increase the assessment and tax revenue; or whether, as some citizens seem to think, the lots should be considered more from the standpoint of an investment and held to be sold at a higher price in a possible rising market; or whether, as suggested by some of the citizens, the sales should be by public auction instead of private sales as at present.

2nd.—Whether there should not be a resolution of the Council prohibiting the Property Committee from selling to any relative of any member of the committee without first having the sale approved by the Council itself.

Railway Rates

The Montreal Gazette calls attention to the report for the [illegible] of the New York, New Haven & [illegible]ford railway which shows a deficit of $1,267,000. The result of increases in working expenses coupled with the refusal of the Interstate Commerce Commission to permit the road to make a corresponding increase in traffic charges is alleged as the cause of the unsatisfactory showing. And then adds, "If there are many cases of this kind recorded railway building and improvement may get a setback that will discourage more than transportation investments."

Not only will it discourage investment, but stop the running of trains. Investors are not likely to continue the operation of railways at a continued loss in the running of them. Labor organizations are constantly ordering strikes to compel the payment of higher wages, which necessitates the increase of freight rates, and the sooner this fact is recognized the better.

Facts About Motherhood

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at the time of child-birth, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when the strain is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

It isn't as though the experience came upon them unawares. They have ample time in which to prepare, but they, for the most part, trust to chance and pay the penalty.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy, and strong.

Any woman who would like special advice in regard to this matter is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. Her letter will be held in strict confidence.

NEW LONDON MUSEUM WITH ROYAL ROBES

Many Interesting Exhibits Will Be Shown, Including a Chamber of Horrors

In the room in Kensington Palace in which Queen Anne died and beneath the windows of which is the tiny playground of Queen Victoria's childhood, Mr. Guy Laking, the King's Armorer, is busily classifying the exhibits of the new London Museum. Considerable time must elapse before they can be placed on public view, for already they number nearly 8,000, and to catalogue a collection which is drawn from every period of London's history is no light task.

The Coronation robes of five sovereigns—Queen Victoria's, Queen Alexandra's, and Queen Mary's, together with King Edward's and King George's, also some of the early costumes of Queen Victoria and the dresses Queen Mary wore at her marriage, at King Edward's Coronation, and beneath her robes at her own crowning—will be on exhibition. Another exhibit will be the christening clothes and shoes of King Edward. All these will form part of the costume history of London, towards which have already been added the magnificent Semour Lucas collection. The series comprises three or four hundred costumes, ranging from the fourteenth century to the present day. In the Elizabethan and Jacobean periods it is especially fine, and there are some beautiful silver-embroidered leather coats of the Commonwealth. There will also be a Chamber of Horrors, showing the executional axe, found in the Thames, by the Tower; fetters worn by Tom King, the highwayman; some more fetters (sixteenth century), fished up from a well at Newgate; a basin from the condemned cell, as well as some fascinating thumbscrews and hand-crushers.

THINK IT MAY MAY PROVE A BLOODLESS WAR

Turco-Italian Conflict May End Any Moment Now.

Diplomats Are of the Opinion That With Germany as a Peacemaker the Trouble Will Be Stopped Before Fighting Occurs — Negative News Continues to Arrive and Capture of Small Vessels Is Chief Activity.

London, Oct 3.—From present appearances the Turco-Italian war promises to be the shortest and most bloodless war in history. Thus far its distinguishing characteristic has been the absence of fighting, and with Germany acting as peacemaker, it may be ended before fighting occurs.

It is concluded that no mediation will be accepted by Italy until she has accomplished the military occupation of the Tripolitan coast.

After that negotiations will be much easier and are likely to be successful, if Turkey will accept a money indemnity for allowing Italy to establish herself in Tripoli, as Great Britain did in Egypt.

The news filtering in from various points continues to be of a negative kind. Evidently Tripoli has not been bombarded, and is not likely to be, if the Turks do not oppose the Italian landing.

The warlike operations are confined to a blockade and the capture on either side of a few small vessels.

It is now admitted from the Turkish side that Prevesa, in European Turkey, is not occupied. Italy's announcement that she has no intention to carry the war into European Turkey, will do much to allay apprehension over the Balkan or other complications.

Turkey's ministerial difficulties have not been solved, but generally the situation looks more hopeful.

No Bombarding Before To-day.

Rome, Oct. 3.—A despatch to The Tribuna from Malta, says that a steamer, which arrived here at six o'clock yesterday evening, brought the news that the Turkish transport Derna had been shelled and sunk in the harbor of Tripoli. It confirmed the other advices that the bombardment would not begin until Tuesday—this in order to give the population time to withdraw to a place of safety.

Keep Hands Off Balkan Peninsula.

London, Oct. 3.—A despatch received here by a news agency from Vienna, says that Count Von Aehrenthal, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, has informed the Italian ambassador that any further action by the Italians on the Albanian coast will make it necessary for Austria to despatch warships thither.

Count Von Aehrenthal asked the ambassador how he reconciled Italy's naval movements in the vicinity of Albania with her declarations that she was keeping her hands off the Balkan Peninsula.

RAILWAYS AND DOGS.

Alike In One Respect In Sardinia, That Both Are Perils.

Sardinia is an island of many perils. One of them, we gather from the experience of Mr. Crawford Flitch, the author of "Mediterranean Moods," is the railways. "The engine," he says, "is continually making frantic dashes for the scenery. On the line to Tortoli I made four journeys and had three accidents. On one occasion, after a car had been wrecked, the various employees gathered round the wreckage and spent the remainder of a sultry afternoon in bitterly disputing the proper apportionment of blame for the accident. As it was impossible to proceed that evening I spent the night at the railway station and enjoyed a comfort that I found nowhere else in the island."

Another peril is the dogs, who do not hesitate to attack a stranger, even when he is walking peaceably upon the highroad. "The breed is particularly ferocious, and it is said that the peasants have a way of stimulating their ferocity by tying a bladder filled with blood to the neck of a dummy man and encouraging the animal to spring at the neck and tear open the bladder."

If the eyes are the mirrors of the soul, of course they should be looked into at once.

Bourassa

On the 22nd of September Mr. Bourassa wrote a letter to the Toronto News, in which, among other things, he says:

"All true Canadians rejoice at the defeat of a CORRUPT and UNPRINCIPLED Government.

"The Nationalists feel especially proud at the reply given by Ontario to the ODIOUS campaign of SLANDER by The Toronto Globe, to its appeals to RACIAL HATRED and its hypocritical exploitation of fake loyalty."

There are not many electors in Canada who have kept abreast of Government transactions and the ravings of The Globe but will exclaim "Right you are, Bourassa!"

Ne Temere

A great agitation against the Ne Temere decree is promised in Ontario. As the decree, under the law is not held to be effective in Ontario, so far as the civil courts are concerned, and as outside discussion may hardly be expected to cause the ecclesiastical courts to change their holdings, the outcome of the business is likely to be more motion than progress. This, however, pleases some people, and doubtless we will have it.—Montreal Gazette.

All this may be true, so far as "ecclesiastical courts" are concerned, in Ontario, but no ecclesiastical court should be permitted in a free country to declare marriages, legally consummated by a clergyman, no matter of what denomination, illegal, thereby bastardizing the children of such marriages. Let the Roman Catholic Church fulminate such rules as they like, governing their own people, but no further should they be permitted to go.

correct or not. If the city was encroaching on Mrs. Campbell's property a settlement should be made. He moved that a competent engineer, Mr. H. Carre, be secured to run a line on the said property.

The motion prevailed.

The inspection of the city water works made by an inspector of the Underwriters' Association was read which was of a satisfactory nature.—Ordered to be filed.

A resolution, passed by the W. C. A., asked the Council for certain furnishings taken out of the isolation hospital, to be used in the new wing of the General Hospital.

Ald. McGie moved that the request of the W.C.A. be granted.

Ald. Clarke was of the opinion that within six months there would be an agitation for another islation hospital, and the city should, in his opinion, retain these furnishings. In this case the furnishings might be loaned to the hospital. He moved an amendment to this effect.

Ald. Vermilyea said that if another isolation hospital was built, he did not think that it would be for some time.

Upon a vote being taken the motion of Ald. McGie was adopted.

The following letter from Messrs. Wills & Wright was read:

Belleville, Aug. 19, 1911.
The Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Company, Toronto, Ont.
(Re Moira River Bridge.)

Dear Sirs,—We are instructed by the Springer Lock Manufacturing Company, Limited, in this city, whose premises are on the west side of Coleman Street, south of Bridge Street, and a short distance from your bridge across the Moira River in the city of Belleville, to notify you that the said company will claim damages against your company for any injury to their premises, plant or stock or interference with their manufacturing which may arise in consequence of the obstruction of the flow of the water in the river Moira by the improper construction of the piers now erected by your company, at the base of which piers there is now a large amount of debris filling up the bed of the river. If it is necessary to take proceedings at any future time on behalf of our clients against you, this letter will be read as a notice.

Yours truly,
Wills & Wright.

Ald. Panter thought that this matter should be referred to the Harbor Commissioners to deal with.

The City Clerk thought that the city in this matter was not at all liable, as the city had not given consent to the erection of piers, etc. The Railway Commission gave them permission to put in the piers.

Mayor Ackerman said the Harbor Commissioners had had the matter before them, but had taken no action, some contending it was not a matter under their jurisdiction.

A motion prevailed to send the matter to the Harbor Commissioners.

Public Library.

A report was presented from Messrs. J. D. Clarke and T. Thomson, auditors, of the report of the receipts and expenditures of the Public Library for the past year. The receipts from all sources were $2,322.52 and the expenditures $2,224.66, leaving a balance of $97.86.

On motion the report was referred to the Executive Committee.

A request was made for a light on Patterson Street at the junction of Pinnacle Street.—Referred to the Light and Park Committee.

Increase of Salary.

Mr. John A. Kerr, Assessor, asked the Council to increase his salary, making it $1,000 per annum. This, he claimed, was a much lower salary than was paid in other cities.

Mr. Kerr addressed the Council, stating that after paying expenses he had about $100 left for himself out of the salary paid him. The salary, he claimed, was altogether too low. He had endeavored to do his duty in the matter of assessment.

Ald. Parks spoke in support of an increase in salary being given to Mr. Kerr.

Ald. Canning stated that a salary of $1,000 was paid to Mr. Kerr's predecessor. He moved that the request of Mr. Kerr be granted.

Ald. Clarke wanted the matter referred to the Executive Committee, where it could be carefully considered, and report to the Council their recommendation.

Ald. McGie thought the salary of $600 paid to Mr. Kerr was too small and especially when he had to employ a person to do clerical work. He was prepared to grant the request of Mr. Kerr.

Ald. Adams said Mr. Kerr had done his work satisfactorily and he should be paid the same salary as his predecessor.

Upon a vote being taken the request of Mr. Kerr was granted.

The report of Judge Deroche re tax lot investigation, a lengthy document, was read. His fee for the tax lot investigation was $146.30.

A summary of the report of Judge Deroche will be found in another column of this issue.

It was decided, without any discussion, to refer the report to the special committee appointed by the Council in this matter.

After some discussion two tenders submitted to the Council in reference to water works extension were, on motion, referred to the Water Works Committee to report to the Council.

Considerable discussion took place in reference to what Mr. Wm. Donohue should pay as compensation of making four connections to a sewer on Pine Street.

The matter was referred to the Public Works Committee.

The committee rose and reported.

On motion to adopt the report, Ald. Clarke moved, seconded by Ald. Bogle, that it be not adopted, but that portion referring to the Assessor's salary be refered to the Executive Committee.

The motion was lost, only the mover and seconder voting for it. The report was then adopted.

Inquiries.

Under this head a large number of inquiries were made, nearly every member present having one or more to make. They referred to repairing of certain streets and sidewalks and sewers.

Ald. Woodley asked if the city sewers constructed were in compliance with the Provincial Board of Health Act passed at the last session of the Legislature.

The City Solicitor, in reply, said we claim we were acting under prior legislation as the majority of the sewers were constructed or commenced before the last Act came into force.

Ald. Clarke asked if it was the intention to still allow sewage to empty near the lower bridge.

Ald. Panter—No; it will be sent down the Front Street trunk sewer.

Introduction of By-Laws.

Ald. Vermilyea introduced three by-laws, namely a by-law to authorize and raise by way of loan $35,000 for the erection and completion of two public schools; a by-law relating to the collection of taxes; a debenture by-law re construction of the Dundas Street sewer.

These by-laws were passed through their various stages and numbered respectively 1677, 1678 and 1679.

Ald. Woodley was in the chair of the Committee of the Whole on By-Laws.

Motions.

Moved by Ald. Panter, seconded by Ald. St. Charles, that the Council authorize the building of a concrete walk in the grounds of the Belleville Hospital upon the same terms as other walks built in the city.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Panter, seconded by Ald. Vermilyea, that the Railway Committee, together with the Mayor, Ald. Panter and Ald. Vermilyea, confer with proper officials of the C. N. O. R. re diversion of Dundas Street, with power to act.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Vermilyea, seconded by Ald. Panter, that the City Treasurer furnish the Council at the next meeting a full account of the disbursements so far made re the investigation of sale of city lots before His Honor Judge Deroche.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Vermilyea, seconded by Ald. Panter, that the City Solicitor be authorized to advertise for two auditors for the city of Belleville at $200 each.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Parks, seconded by Ald. Clarke, that the chairman of the Market and City Property Committee be authorized to employ a surveyor to make a survey of the land west of the bridge road occupied by the C.N.O.R., and if it is found that any of said land is the city's that a plan and description of such land be obtained.

Council adjourned.

Won the Bet.

They were sitting in the smoking room of the hotel, and the conversation was about endurance as shown by men of the past and present. During a lull in the conversation a young commercial traveller said:—

"Any man, if he has the will-power, can endure pain or fatigue; I know I can."

There was silence for a moment, and an older man replied:—

"I'll wager a dinner you can't hold your foot — boot on — in a bucket of hot water as long as I can."

The offer was taken, and two buckets of hot water were brought in, as well as a kettle of boiling water to raise the temperature to the point of endurance. In went a foot of each contestant. Soon the young man's face began to pale, but the other called for more boiling water.

"What on earth is your leg made of, sir?" said the former, suddenly taking his foot from the bucket.

"Cork, sir — cork!" was the cool answer, and the other left that he had indeed lost.

LA PRESSE SAYS LAURIER HAS FINISHED WORK

MONTREAL, Oct. 1.—It looks as if La Presse, the newspaper which so violently combatted Mr. Borden during the campaign, was about at the parting of the ways, as the proprietor of the paper said to-day that La Presse was prepared to give the premier-elect fair play. In fact, he said he considered Mr. Borden to be a man of broad views, too broad, in fact, for some of his Ontario friends, who he thought wanted a man more to their own liking.

In reply to a statement as to the truth of Mr. Jules Fournier's statement to the effect that Mackenzie & Mann still owned La Presse, Mr. Berthiaume said: "There is nothing in the story, as it comes from people like the Star, The Devoir and others who are trying to ruin me. I shall therefore be obliged if you state that the $700,000 of common stock of La Presse, and the $500,000 preferred belong to me personally, consequently I have the absolute ownership and control of the paper."

"Do not Mackenzie & Mann hold a large bond issue?" "They did, but I presume they parted with a good deal of their holdings. In any case, I own and control La Presse."

"Don't you think that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is finished as a factor in Canadian politics?"

"Absolutely finished. He is done, and can never be revived again as a successful party leader."

In a letter received by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway from Mr. Arthur O. Wheeler, the well-known mountain climber and topographer, who is at present in the Canadian Rockies making observation for the purpose of mapping out the district, he says.

"We have a great amount of splendid material for publicaton and a collection of photographs that cannot be surpassed. We have just completed what is very nearly a 100 mile circuit around Mt. Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies. The peaks and valleys, lakes and waterfalls on all sides of it, and the glaciesr are very fine. The region is immense, and there is work for years to come, exploring, mapping and depicting. There is a fine bunch of high peaks and large snowfields and glaciers southwest of Tete Jaune Cache. There are also great peaks up the Athabaska and Fraser headwaters, tributary to your line. The most showy part of Mt. Robson is the Robson Pass and Glacier, and Berg Lake."

In addition to the above Mr. Wheeler reports that his party have collected over 600 specimens of animal and bird life, and a good botanical collection as well. The expedition which was organized by the Grand Trunk Pacific, has been a most successful one, and when its results are published will be of great value. The facts now known bear out the general impression that the territory contiguous to the mountain division of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway will surpass in scenic beauty that which can be seen on any other of the North American transcontinental lines.

FRANCE LEADS IN AVIATION

Other Nations Still Far Behind

That the other nations are still much behind France in aviation is the conclusion generally drawn from the results of the German Aviation Circuit race. Although prizes aggregating more than $100,000 were offered, only 14 out of the 25 flyers entered took part in the contest, and none were able to complete the entire circuit of 1,164 miles. The winner, Benno Koenig, dropped out of two of the thirteen stages of the flight.

Only three of the aviators crossed the finish line at Johannisthal. Lindpainter, who for three-quarters of the race looked like a certain winner, had to give up at the last, his nerves completely shattered by the strain of 30 days of flying, and nerve, rather than machine defects or accidents, was responsible for the failure of most of the other competitors.

Minor accidents and thrilling incidents were reported in plenty, however, the most dangerous experience being that of Hoffmann, who started out at nightfall on the most difficult stage of the whole circuit, the flight across the precipitous mountain mass

A Famous Buddhist Priest.

The Ceylon papers give much space to the death of the Buddhist high priest, Sri Sumangala, at the age of eighty-four. He was the leading Oriental scholar in Ceylon, and was in constant communication with Orientalists in the United Kingdom and on the Continent. His death is described by the Ceylon 'Observer' as not only a loss to the Buddhist community, but to the entire Oriental world. Among his friends and correspondents were Sir Monier Williams, Sir Edwin Arnold, Professors Max Muller, Rhys Davids, and Lanman, of Harvard University. He was in friendly touch with pastors and missionaries of the different Christian churches, and took a leading part in the agitation against the opium traffic in the island. His Sinhalese Grammar is used as a text-book at the London University. The remains of the aged priest were cremated in the presence of a great assembly. The Colonial Office was represented.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Pastor Russell's discourse at the Brooklyn Academy of Music to-day was heard by a crowded house. He had closest attention to his discussion on the question, "Which is the True Church?" The vast audience appeared satisfied that the true church had been located properly. The audience, so far as could be ascertained was composed of truth-hungry people of all denominations. Undoubtedly the question discussed has been a vital one for centuries. Some claim that never before had an answer been given satisfactory to Christians of all denominations. His text was, "The Church of the Firstborns, whose names are written in Heaven,"—Hebrews xii:23.

Numerous scriptures were cited in proof of the speaker's contention that the Lord Jesus and the apostles never organized any but the one church, and the histories of the various denominations were referred to as proving that nearly all present-day Christian denominations were non-existent a thousand years ago and hence none of these denominations could have been the one referred to by the apostle and His Apostles founded was a

For a time, said the speaker, each of the various denominations in turn protested against other teachings and claimed to be the one Church of Christ which had been for centuries lost sight of. At times these various denominations fought each other, persecuted each other even unto death, each claiming that the other was a fake church and that itself was the true one. More recently, however, the Christian mind has broadened until now we see clearly that God has saintly people in practically every denomination.

Find me to-day the Presbyterian or Methodist who would denounce a Baptist brother and his teaching as being of the devil or find me to-day the Baptist brother who would declare that the fellow-Christians of other creeds are surely bound for eternal torture because not buried in water baptism; find me to-day the Protestant who claims that all Catholics are children of Gehenna, or the Catholic who makes such claims against saintly Protestants! If there be such narrow bigots to-day, they for shame hide their identity; much to the relief of their neighbors.

Pastor Russell freely admitted that the Roman Catholic church could prove her existence long before her sister and daughter organizations, but he disputed; nevertheless that the Church of Rome could prove her identity with the apostolic church of the first century. On the contrary, many of the teachings of the Church of Rome differ radically from those of the Church of Jerusalem, represented by the Apostles and their New Testament writings. And as for the ceremonials, usages, customs, etc., no one at all familiar with the two could suppose them to have even a close relationship. Nevertheless, as already stated, we must look for the true church of Christ somewhere. And we do find in the Catholic church some good saintly characters which marks them as members of the true church. Indeed, we find some such in all the denominations professing Christ.

The only conclusion we reach consistent with the above facts is this: That the original church which Jesus and His Apostles founded was a catholic one—that is to say, a general or a universal one, and not a Church of Rome, a Church of England, a Church of Sweden, a Church of Germany nor a Greek Church, but a universal church—a catholic or a general church. Protestants in general recognise this, and in their confessions generally claim to be The Holy Catholic (universal) Church.

The fact is, however, that none of these churches, (Roman, English, Baptist, Presbyterian, etc.,) are catholic or general, because none of them include all of God's people. To admit that any one of these bodies is the catholic or general Church of Christ would be to admit that it includes all persons recognized by the Lord as being members of His church. We cannot therefore admit that the term, catholic belongs to any of these denominations, nor even the Roman Catholic. The Catholic Church of Christ—the one which includes all who are truly His—is not a human organization, and its rolo or rostra is not kept on earth. To it alone the apostle's words—"The Church of the Firstborns, whose names are written in heaven."

This family of God, begotten of the Holy Spirit, are one with Him in Spirit, in purpose, in intenton. They have the "faith once delivered to the saints"—faith in the Father, faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as His Son, man's Redeemer; faith in the Holy Spirit of begetting, faith in the exceeding precious promises of glorious things to come, and they have the one baptism into the Body of Christ, which is the church. Some of them may have seen and may have obeyed the proper symbol of this one baptism while others may not. But all these recognise the true baptism and all participated therein — baptism into Christ's death, Romans vi:3.

My friends, said the speaker, cannot we all agree that there is but the general or catholic church of Christ—that it is not an earthly organization bound by creeds and confessions—that it is a heavenly organization effected through consecration to the Lord and divine acceptance through the Holy Spirit—that the human institutions called churches, however well meant, are not any of them, the church—that the members of the church are scattered in all denominations and that the Lord alone knows those who are His and that He will ultimately separate them as wheat from tares in the harvest of this age, preparatory to their resurrection 'change' and inauguration as the heavenly Kingdom of Messiah, ordained for the blessing of humanity in general during the thousand years of Messiah's glorious reign of righteousness. If we see let us strive to attain membership in the true church. The steps are:

(1) Faith.

(2) Obedience to the invitation of self-sacrifice.

(3) The carrying out of that sacrifice day by day, faithfully unto death.

(4) A share in the resurrection "change" to glory, honor and immortality.

Greatest Invention of Age For Hoarseness, Weak Throat

Nothing so far Discovered is so Beneficial to Public Speakers, Ministers, Singers and Teachers as Catarrhozone.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. Catarrhozone keeps the mucous surfaces in perfect condition, and its regular use absolutely prevents colds and throat irritation, thereby removing the singer's anxiety—unfitness of voice. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

Singer Recommends Catarrhozone.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease, known as Catarrh.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the 'Progress' a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N. S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering with throat weakness or catarrh.

Complete outfit, consisting of a beautifully polished hard rubber inhaler, and sufficient liquid for recharging to last two months, costs one dollar. Sold by all druggists, or sent safely to your address by mail if price is forwarded to the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., or Kingston

THE WHITE MAN'S DOOM

Well Known Professor Argues That He Must Inevitably Give Way Before Dark Races.

Much has been written at one time and another regarding the ability of the white man to live in the tropics and to retain his bodily and mental vigour. The consensus of opinion has been that he cannot do so, but that after a time he will surely deteriorate, physically and mentally. Furthermore, white natives whose ancestors have lived three or more generations in the tropics are not, with rare exceptions, the peers either in body or mind of their relatives living in the temperate zone.

Professor Lionel W. Lyde has recently spoken most pessimistically on the subject. Not only does he hold that the white man cannot live in health in torpical countries, but professes to believe that the white man is doomed to vanish from the face of the earth, giving way to the coloured races. The professor bases his belief on the theory that the original colour of the human skin was dark brown, the variations of that colour being the results of the weakening or strengthening of the pigment under different climatic conditions. The rays of sunlight in the tropics on an individual unprotected by a dark skin have the effect of producing nervous shock, amounting sometimes to total prostration.

Taking ordinary precautions, it may be possible for the white man, after two years of acclimatisation, to live in the tropics even more immune from tropical diseases than the black. But this period of immunity lasts for only about seven years, after which the deteriorating effects of the strong solar light and heat begin to show themselves on the white skin, and render the possessor thereof peculiarly susceptible to tropical diseases. In consequence, the permanent settlement of the tropics by white men is impossible.

But while the pigment with which the coloured races are provided is indispensable for life in the tropics, it is a source of no danger in the temperate or frigid zones; therefore the dark or yellow man can intrude into the domain of the man of fair skin with little or no danger. Added to this may be placed the comparatively greater fertility of the dark races, and, in the opinion of Professor Lyde, the doom of the white man is inevitably suggested. His part it is, therefore, in the scheme of the world to train the dark-skinned races in all the arts and sciences, including the art of government, and then himself to get off the earth.

Speaking of money, Canada is to have its own gold pieces, made in Canada.

FOOD PRICES RISE

Many Complaints Being Made by All Classes of People

The increasingly high prices of provisions is a cause of grave alarm in Berlin. Complaints are heard from every part of the empire, not merely from the poorer classes, but from the population generally. In many sections of the country crops have been severely damaged by the long drought. The markets are poorly supplied with vegetables. Housewives are bitterly lamenting the almost two-fold increase of the usual price of vegetables, potatoes in particular costing now from $1.25 to $2.50 per cwt., or just double what they cost last year. Moreover, the prices are expected to rise still higher.

400,000 PILGRIMS SEEK HEALING

Many Bavarians Throng to the Alt Otting Shrine

The fame of the wonder-working Loudes, although it attracts thousands of German Catholics who are in a position to afford the outlay necessary to reach the supposedly miraculous healing waters, has not reached the poorest inhabitants of the Bavarian highlands. These people, however, have a holy shrine at Alt-Otting, which for them has no equal as a source of health, and whither they make a pilgrimage every year, accompanied by their halt, lame, and sick, in the hope that a wonder may be worked for them. This year the pilgrims have numbered no fewer than 400,000, and among them, although perhaps not in search of miracles, were several princes and princesses of the Bavarian Royal family. The place has been a resort of pilgrims since the sixteenth century, when the picture of the Holy Virgin, which is said to possess the power of miracle, was brought there from the Orient.

ASK FOR THEIR DEAD

Austin Faces Difficulty of Reclaiming the Bodies.

Total List of Fatalities Is Said Now Not to Have Exceeded 150 Persons, Of Which Twenty-Four Are Known—Thousands of Tons of Debris With Human Remains Inextricably Interminigled Chokes the Valley.

Austin, Pa., Oct. 3.—Twenty-four known dead, eighty-six missing and believed to be buried beneath the debris, is the official census last night of Austin's loss of life in the flood of Saturday. It is conceded, however, that several, if not indeed many, visitors and strangers were in town that day, and undoubtedly perished. Including them and allowing for inevitable errors in compilation, the total of the dead will probably reach 150. Twenty-one of the bodies recovered from the ruins have been identified and of the missing hope is entertained that some may yet be accounted for.

The problem of the hour in Austin last night is to recover her dead from the thousands of tons of debris choking the narrow valley. To do so before it becomes necessary to burn the ruins and save the living from an epidemic an army of laborers must reach the town within the next 36 hours, officials say. Otherwise the torch may transform the wreckage into a pyre of most of these who have perished.

The single line of wire swinging between Austin and the outside world carried an urgent plea for workmen to the mayors of Buffalo, Pittsburg and Philadelphia. Samuel C. Dixon, state commissioner of health, supreme in command at Austin, voiced the appeal.

Encouraging responses are hoped for.

"Give us our dead," is Austin's cry, voiced by State Senator F. E. Baldwin, who lost father, mother, sister and other relatives. Only the body of his father, John E. Baldwin, had been recovered up to this morning. The others are locked in the ruins.

The nine-mile line of railroad leading here from Keating's Summit was given over yesterday to the cause of rescue and relief. Locked cars pulled out of the Summit for the scene of the disaster. When they reached the terminus here, the workers detrained; the drones, kept aboard, were sent back.

Every man on Austin's streets except the newspaper men were conscripted in the service, but despite the vigilance of the authorities only 350 were working at sunset.

Smouldering flames in the debris burst forth anew in the lower end of the wreckage yesterday afternoon, but it is not believed that the timbers shielded any of the dead.

Austin stands to a man against the suggestion that it may be necessary to put a torch to her ruins. Feeling runs high and should the authorities be forced to, there is no forecasting the result. The iron grip of the Pennsylvania State Constabulary holds the town in its grasp, however, and the troopers will remain here until Commissioner Dixon gives the word to go.

Eight men charged with looting the ruins were arraigned last night before Magistrate Johnson and committed to the Coudersport Jail for grand jury action. One man, a boarding-house-keeper, complained yesterday that his home had been robbed of $2,800; another, a storekeeper, declared that thieves had smashed his cash registers and stolen $300. A little girl entered a wrecked building and left with jewelry valued at several hundred dollars. She was stopped and relieved by the state police of her loot.

Ship Under Arrest.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—The case of the six seamen of the steamship Melville, who were arrested for desertion, entered upon a new phase yesterday when all six consolidated their claims for wages against the owners of the ship, and, headed by a man called Gragan, visited the Admiralty Court swore out a warrant and had the ship put under arrest.

Their claims for wages amount to about $350. The case will come up in the civil courts.

Charge Now Manslaughter.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—O. Lefebvre may be charged with manslaughter as the result of a fight in which he took part a couple of weeks ago, when, it is alleged, he knocked Patrick O'Hanley down on Clarence street, causing him to break his leg. He has been in Water Street Hospital ever since, and last Saturday died as a result of his injuries. The prisoner was yesterday morning remanded for a week.

Man Dies of Glanders.

Dr. Kelly undoubtedly became infected through attending a horse afflicted with the disease.

Huntingdon, Ind., Oct. 3.—Caught in a sudden gust of wind, C. P. Rodgers' aeroplane dived to earth just after he had started from this city toward Chicago yesterd[illegible] The machine was wrecked and [illegible]ers painfully injured.

Assassins Must Wait Trial.

El Paso, Texas, Oct. 3.—The case of Daniel Devilliers and W. L. Dunn of San Antonio, Texas, charged with conspiracy to assassinate Francisco I. Madero, who was elected president of Mexico on Sunday, was postponed until Nov. 1. The reason was the absence of B. J. Viljoen, the state's chief witness.

FAMINE IN DUBLIN.

Hospitals Compelled to Bake Their Own Bread.

Dublin, Oct. 3.—The strike of the bakers here is causing starvation. The situation is aggravated by the closing of the small branch bakery shops in the poverty-stricken areas.

On Saturday afternoon a small army of men and women marched up and down the streets in front of some bakers' shops shouting. "We want bread, and we'll have it!" Later a bread van was attacked and broken, its contents scattered in the street and picked up by hungry women, who carried the bread off.

A hospital surgeon said in an interview:

"I am told by women visitors that children they visit are sometimes so ravenous that when food is brought to them they tear the loaf to pieces before the visitors' eyes. In many houses, I am assured, there is hardly a stick of furniture or any bedclothing. Everything has been sold with the object of sustaining life during this terrible time of strikes."

The Master of the Rotunda Hospital said:

"To-morrow we shall have no bread for either the patients or the staff."

The Maternity Hospital, after a bad day without supplies, got its own ovens to work and baked bread.

At the Mercers' Hospital, too, bread was baked by the nurses and sisters. The superintendent of Butler's Hospital said that on Sunday the bread supply at the hospital was completely cut off.

Hopes to Unseat Verville.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—The announcement was made yesterday by Mr. E. W. Villeneuve, the defeated candidate in Maissoneuve, that the recount which is to be made was only the preliminary to a contestation, by means of which he hopes to unseat Mr. Verville. He also charges that the ballot boxes have been left open since last Tuesday; that the returning officers have been opening envelopes containing the register of voters, and that they have been filling in omissions made before voting.

Returning Officer Gingras declared yesterday that these charges were groundless; not one envelope containing the ballots had been opened and proper care had been taken of the boxes ever since the elections.

'Twas Case of Suicide.

Hamilton, Oct. 3.—What at first appeared to be another mysterious murder, but which investigation proved to be a clear case of suicide, was the drowning in Hamilton Bay Sunday night of Thomas Graham, a cab driver, 21 years of age, who lived with his widowed mother at 63 Napier street.

Blood on Graham's coat and a large lump on the back of his head suggested foul play, but after tracing the man's movement Sunday night, the police and Coroner Dickson reached the conclusion that the wound on the head was the result of Graham's own actions and that he had deliberately committed suicide. No inquest will be held in the matter.

Boasted of Burglary.

Prince Rupert, B.C., Oct. 3.—A man using the names of Alexander Johnson and William Wheeler was arrested here yesterday as a suspect in the New Westminster bank robbery. He had attracted attention from the police by displaying large sums of money at various amusement resorts. He at first boasted that the money was part of the $250,000 stolen from the bank. Later he said the money was received from the sale of a Montana ranch. When searched by the police, $900 in United States bank notes was found in his possession. He is also said to have deposited $10,000 in banks since arriving here.

Not a Wall Street Game.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 3.—The Men and Religions Forward Movement, which is to be country-wide, was inaugurated here Sunday by the opening of an eight-day campaign, to serve as a pattern for those to be conducted in seventy-five of the largest cities in Canada and the United States.

Thirty meetings were addressed by specialists in boys' work, Bible study, missions, social service, evangelism and community extension.

It was vigorously denied that the movement is financed by Wall street capitalists for the purpose of quieting labor.

Electrocuted at His Work.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—An electric shock while he was at work in the pipe mill of the Montreal Steel Works at St. Henri on Saturday afternoon is supposed to have caused the death of George Burdon, an electrician, whose dead body was found in the mill at noon Sunday.

Burdon had only started to work in the mill on Friday as an oiler. The body was found stretched out on the bridge, close to the motor, an oil can beside him. He had evidently been killed while oiling the machinery of the crane.

Child Burned to Death.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—Aime Forger, aged 4 1-2 years, living in St. Henri, was burned to death at eight o'clock yesterday morning. The little boy's mother had left him playing in the kitchen when she heard him crying, and rushing to the room, found him enveloped in flames.

Suing Railway For $50,000.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—An action for $50,000 damages has been entered against the Montreal Street Railway by the widow of the late Mr. William Arthur Stewart, who was killed in a street car collision at the corner of St. Catherine street and Lasalle avenue on Aug. 10 last.

How to Reduce Tax Rate.

Hamilton, Oct 3—Mayor Lees will ask the City Council here to adopt a unit system of civic accounting similar to many cities in the United States, and believes it will result in economy that will permit of a big cut in the tax rate.

TAIT FOR COMMISSION

He Is Mentioned as Possibility For N.T.R. Board.

Chairmanship Will Be Turned Over to Him According to Most Recent Rumors—Borden Cabinet Cannot Be Sworn In Until Thursday or Friday Now, Because of Governor-General's Banquet at Montreal.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—The resignation of the Laurier Government, which was to have taken place on Wednesday, goes over for another day.

The reason is that the Governor-General will be in Montreal on Wednesday saying good-bye to the Mount Royal Club.

The delay means that the Borden Ministry will not be sworn into office till Thursday or Friday. In the meantime, every day produces new Cabinet possibilities.

It is stated to-day that Dr. Roche's chances for a western portfolio have slumped and that on the other hand George H. Perley, chief Conservative whip, has signified his desire to be left out of the new Government.

One of the most interesting reports circulated yesterday was that the chairmanship of the National Transcontinental Railway Commission would be turned over to Sir Thomas Tait, formerly of the C.P.R., and more recently of the Australian Government railways.

Yesterday's arrivals included A. E. Kemp, Major Currie, Major Sam Sharpe, and H. B. Ames. Mr. Borden had a lengthy conference with the Governor-General last night.

The only Laurier Minister who survived in Ontario is in danger of losing his seat. The election of Hon. Charles Murphy in Russell is likely to be protested. A meeting of 200 workers was held yesterday and charges of corruption in the election are plentiful.

Another protracted Cabinet council was held last night. The big item under consideration is said to have been the letting of the contract for the extensive harbor works at St. John, N.B. The right of the defeated Government to let these contracts is denied.

There is some talk of the Borden Cabinet journeying to Quebec to be sworn in by Lord Grey on Oct. 12. This would be His Excellency's last official act.

Graham For Glengarry?

Montreal, Oct. 3.—It is stated in Liberal circles that Mr. McMullin, the Liberal member-elect for Glengarry, who carried the county by over two hundred majority, will soon resign his seat, and the Opposition will bring forward the Hon. George Graham, defeated in Brockville on the 21st. It is understood that if the ex-Minister of Railways will accept the nomination; Mr. Duncan McMarvin, who was the Conservative candidate, will not run again.

Never Again, Says Berthiaume.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—Hon. T. Berthiaume, proprietor of La Presse, in a statement, denied that he had in an interview stated that Sir Wilfrid could never be resuscitated as a successful leader.

He claims that he was misinterpreted and states that he was asked what effect he considered the recent election would have on Sir Wilfrid's future; to which query he replied that Canada could not expect to see another French-Canadian again at the head of the Government.

These words were interpreted, he states, as having particular references to Sir Wilfrid.

Baron Dies In Poverty.

New York, Oct. 3.—Leon Le Metayer Masselin, Baron De Guichainville, died Sunday night at Bellevue Hospital of injuries received when he was run down by a trolley car. The baron, who was 81 years of age, lived with a blind daughter and a son, in the basement of an apartment house on West Seventeenth street.

The French Consul-General will take charge of the old nobleman's body, for he died in poverty, after having eked out a living for years by odd jobs for coin dealers. When he came to America, soon after the close of the Franco-Prussian war, De Guichainville was a man of wealth, and established a newspaper in Montreal.

Want "Rush" Abolished.

Montreal, Oct. 3.—The abolishment of the McGill "rush," a species of "free fight," between sophomores and freshmen, which for years past has been a regular incident of the university opening, is being agitated by members of the science faculty and others. The college authorities are opposed to the present "rush" and will exert all efforts to have it abolished. Every year there has been increased opposition owing to the injuries sustained by participants.

Stiff Breeze Grounds Schooner.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Oct. 3.—A stiff northeasterly gale yesterday compelled the Bangor schooner Anne Lord to put into this harbor, where she was grounded.

What Makes a Bee Hum!

You have never heard a bee hum when it was crawling. This tells us what we might have guessed, that the bee's humming is made by the movement of its wings when it flies. The noise is not made by its voicebox, as when you sing, for the bee has not a voicebox. But its wings move very quickly — a bird would "hum" when flying if its wings moved quickly enough — and as they move to and fro they set the air moving, and, as you know, we would not be able to hear anything but for the vibration, or waves, in the air.

If the waves are too slow, as when you wave a stick in the air, or when a bird flaps its wings, we hear nothing. But the vibrations in the air made by the bee's wings are of a rate that is within the range of our hearing — if the bee is near enough — and so we hear a humming.

It is the intention to provide similar fall meets each year so it remains only for every would-be athlete of Belleville to do his best The events are numerous and novel as well. The track events include the usual sprints up to 440 yards and a one mile foot race, while the field events are high jump, pole vault, and 12 lb. shot-put. RISING IN PORTUGAL: HUNDREDS ARRESTED

Royalist Plot to Capture Oporto Revealed and Rebels Surrounded

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A despatch to The London Daily Mail from Oporto, on Sunday says that the Royalist plot to seize Oporto has been defeated and that more than 300 persons have been taken prisoners. The attempt was begun at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, when 200 men were smuggled into the grounds of the Crystal Palace pleasure resort close to the barracks of the 6th Infantry, which regiment is believed to be staunch to the Royalist cause. The captain of that regiment who, it is alleged, had been approached by the Royalists to poison his commander, gave information to the Republican Carbonaire secret society. A large force of troops formed around the Crystal Palace and began to fire at the Royalists hidden in the grounds. Quick-firing guns were placed in the roads leading to the Crystal Palace, and the Monarchists were summoned to surrender. Most of the Royalists gave themselves up without the slightest struggle, and the arrests already number more than 300, and the prisoners include clergy, civilian and shopkeepers. The authorities are continuing the search for suspects, and further arrests are being made. The prisoners are being conveyed to Lisbon in the cruisers Adamastor and San Gabriel.

Serious rioting took place last night at the headquarters of the Catholic Association, when the building was burned to the ground. As the flames shot out the mob shouted: "Death to the Jesuits!" The cavalry suddenly came from a side street and charged the mob, while the soldiers with fixed bayonets stood at the end of the street, leaving a space through which the people were alowed to pass. The mob demolished the book-seller's shop because the proprietors had exhibited a photograph of King Manuel with the words: "The good son shall return to his home." Telegrams from several northern towns state there have been Monarchist risings, the Royalist flag being greeted with shouts of joy. Thousands of peasants armed with scythes came out at the sound of the tocsin, but troops are being hurried to the affected districts. Oporto is tranquil to-day, and strong forces of troops are patrolling the streets. Precautions are being taken to prevent the smuggling of arms.

COPENHAGEN'S FRESH FISH

Brought to One's Door Swimming About in Tanks of Water.

When a person buys fresh fish in Copenhagen he really gets it. More than that he gets uncontaminated fish. The sewers used to empty into the sea at the nearest convenient points. Now the sewage is collerted into a main trunk line and carried two kilometers out to sea before it is released.

Thus there is longer any contamination of the harbor or the sea front. They not noly puts an end to the nuisances that used to arise, says the Lancet,' but enables boats full of live fish to come close to shore and right to the town by means of the salt water canals.

In the manner at least the smaller fish are kept alive until the moment they are sold. Any number of wooden boats are pierced with holes and filled with fish; these boats just float on the surface of the water, and the living fish is taken out of them when wanted.

But as every one cannot go to the water's edge to buy fish there are water tanks on wheels and the live fish are brought to the doors of the people's houses. The principal fish market was built by the municipality and is let to a wholesale fish salesman.

It is delight to see how clean and bright these premises are kept. There is no spreading the fish on slabs so that dust and dirt may settle on them. Very pretty tessallated tanks are filled with running water, and here the smaller fish swim about. The larger fish such as cod or halibut, are too cumbersome to keep alive, and are therefore placed in the cold storage rooms.

Not only are the fish fresh, but they are generally very well, sometimes even artistically cooked. At Copenhagen the domestic servants' trade unionists instituted a school where members of the union are taught how to be clean and neat, how to sew, to wash and starch, and above all how to cook. A little restaurant is attached to this school where any one can have a cheap meal, thus giving the pupils an opportunity of exercising their art.

The trade union, while insisting that a good servant shall earn from 25 to 30 kromer (a kromer equals 1s. 2d.) a month and pay half a kromer subscription to the union, does at the same time endeavor to render her fully competent to accomplish her work. Also by providing sleeping accommodation it helps to pervent servant girls falling into bad company or suffering undue hardships when out of employment.

In the same way there is an old frigate moored in a canal close to the most fashionable centre of the town. Here there is a school for ships' cooks. On board a ship with the limited space such as prevails at sea young folks try their 'prentice hands at making dishes such as are served to passengers on sea voyages. There is an awning on the deck, tables are laid out, and numerous inhabitants of Copenhagen take their meals there; for they are both varied and inexpensive. Thus fully qualified cooks are being prepared for the sea.

Floods In Martinique.

Fort de France, Martinique, Sept. 27.—The flooding of the Madame River has inundated the nearby portion of the city, causing considerable losses. Several houses have been washed from their foundations and stores have been invaded by the waters. The river embankments are crumbling.

RAILWAYS HAVE PARTED COMPANY

TORONTO, Oct. 2.—The Grand Trunk and Canadian Northern have parted company in the housing of locomotives. Since the advent of the C.N.R. to this city their passenger engines have been cared for by the G.T.R. at the Toronto engine house, but never no more.

This morning when the C.N.R. express train arrived at the Union Station the engine was cut off as usual and the engine started for the engine house, but was switched to a side line. After waiting some time the engineer approached the yardmaster and asked what the trouble was and he was informed that he could not use the G.T.R. property any longer.

The Grand Trunk officials say they have no room for the C.N.R. engines.

Superintendent Hill of the C.N.R. stated that the opening of their new line between Toronto and Trenton required an extra engine and this proved the last straw.

"Where will you house your engines?" the C.N.R. was asked.

"For the present we will take care of them at Cherry street."

"Will that be a permanent place for them?"

"I don't think so but we have not yet decided at what point our terminals will be located."

BELGIAN CHILDREN.

Parents share their Pleasures with Offspring.

This delight in the family life is characteristic of all Belgians. One sees in Brussels and Antwerp monsieur promenading in the boulevard or the bois with a cigar in his mouth, madame leaning on his arm and the children, hand in hand, walking sedately under the proud eye of their parents.

One finds children in the restaurants and children in the music halls. The pleasures of father and mother are shared always with the nursery. To go junketing without the children would appear to the Belgian not only selfish but dull. His happiness is the happiness of his children. He sees the circus half with his own eyes and half with theirs. The toyshops and bookshops in Brussels tell of th paramount part played by the child. The happiness of this people is the pleasure of domesticity.

The Only Way

Mayor Crump at a banquet at Memphis said of a political turncoat—

"He is as inconsistent in politics as man is in love.

"Man's inconsistency in love is, you know, proverbial. The average man, as soon as he wins a woman, tires of her. The advice I'd give to every girl is this—

"There is only one way to keep a man's love, and that is never to return it.' "

AMUSEMENTS

"THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE." A BIG HIT IN PETERBORO.

"The Cat and the Fiddle," the merry, spectacular, musical jingle appeared at the Grand last night. The production added to the laurels it won there last season and last night's big audience found it entirely to their liking if the rain of applause which fell heavily thoughout the performance can be accepted as a criterion. Last year's splendid cast is almost intact, and the whole show goes with a snap and a swing that is refreshing. The principals are capable, the chorus comely, and with more than the average vocal ability and the scenic effects are lavish in the extreme. The story of the action is too well known to need any reference here—it is sufficient to say that the production is even better than last year. Harry Watson in the role of "Happy," had the house with him from the start, and his clever comedy methods kept the audience convulsed. He is one of the brightest and best low comedians who visit Peterborough, and his part in this production fits him like the proverbial glove. He is surrounded by clever support, and the whole company seem to take an interest in their work, with the result that the action never drags for a moment. Nellie Waters made a charming soubrette, and the other feminine roles were in good hands. The musical number that won the greatest favor was the hit of last season, the dainty little song, "My Maid in the Moon," which had to be repeated half a dozen times. The comedy trio, "You'll Find it in the Almanac," and "Happy's" topical song, "Oh, What a Lovely Dream," were enthusiastically received.

PIT WORKERS ARE CARELESS

Many Mining Disasters are Caused by Neglect Which is Simply Astounding

In spite of the fact that it was fitted with every modern contrivance for ensuring safe and efficient working, the Pretoria Pit, near Bolton, Lancashire, proved the grave of 340 miners. "I should have thought," said the managing-director, after the terrible catastrophe, "that this was one of the safest collieries in the country, and one of the last for an explosion to take place in. There seems no explanation," he continued, "beyond the suggestion that it arose from a defective lamp or the striking of a match."

The latter may or may not have been the cause of the explosion which sent these 340 men to an untimely death, but it is a fact, fully recognized by mining experts, that, although coal-miners carry their lives in their hands, they sometimes act, in spite of the strict rules and regulations which govern the working of big mines, with carelessness which is astounding.

Error of Judgment

The president of the Staffordshire, Warwickshire, and Worcestershire Colliery Managers' Association stated recently, for instance, that "a little more carefulness on the part of the miners and closer supervision and stricter discipline on the part of the management would do incalculably more good than all the rescue apparatus yet invented."

It is generally admitted that the terrible calamity at Hamstead, near Birmingham, in 1908, when twenty-five men lost their lives, and the Maypole disaster in the same year, resulting in seventy-six men being killed, were due almost entirely to some form of carelessness. The Maypole disaster was due to an ignition of fire-damp and coal dust caused by the firing of too heavy a charge of explosive. This was, to say the least, a grave error of judgment, but experts describe it as carelessness.

These twin evils of carelessness and slack officials are shown up in all their ugliness by comments made by the Chief Inspector of Mines—Professor Redmayne—when, in reporting on the Hampstead disaster, he clearly stated that it was primarily caused by workmen separating bundles of candles by burning the wicks or string instead of cutting them.

From personal experience in the Welsh and Midland coal-fields the writer has found that much of the carelessness is due to an excess of self-confidence. A veteran miner described it as "the working out of the old adage, 'Familiarity breeds contempt.'"

Fatal December

With the exception of the explosion at Oaks Colliery, near Barnsley, in December, 1866, when over 380 persons were killed, the disaster at Pretoria Pit is the heaviest in the mining history of the kingdom, and certainly the worst in Lancashire. The nearest approach to these disasters in the last fifty years were the Ebbw Vale disaster in 1878, when 268 lives were lost, and the disaster at the Albion Colliery in Glamorganshire in 1894, which resulted in the death of 286 persons. Over 200 lives were lost in the Hartley Colliery disaster of 1862, as well as in the High Blantyre disaster of 1877. We have had no disaster in this country, however, which has had such appalling results as that which occurred at Lens, in France, in 1906, when no fewer than 1,230 miners perished. It is a curious fact that December is a very bad month for pit disasters. Within the last forty years six disasters have occurred in Lancashire, and altogether, since 1860 there have been twenty colliery disasters in different parts of the country in the month of December, resulting in a total death-roll of 1,500 miners.

DOUKHOBOUR SETTLERS

Ten Thousand Acres From Them in British Columbia

Some two thousand Doukhobour settlers belonging to the Russian collectivist community residing at present in the province of Saskatchewan are proceeding to Southern British Columbia, where ten thousand acres of fruit lands have been purchased for their accommodation at a point about 30 miles from Nelson in the Kootenay district. These people, who originally came from the Caucasus, are expert horticulturists, and their experience renders them suitable for the conditions that obtain in the valleys of the province in question. A thousand acres are already under cultivation and planted with extensive orchards of apples and pears, cherries and plums, peaches and apricots. A system of irrigation canals to utilize the water from the mountain streams will be carried out, which, when completed, will permit the whole area to be brought under cultivation. Fruit preserving and canning factories will be built. Unlimited markets for both fresh and preserved fruits are available in the prairie district.

HOUSING OF WORKMEN

The first step in an important scheme of housing has been taken in South London. A large island block of old-fashioned houses facing on Elsted Street, in the Rodney Road district, Walworth, has been acquired by the trustees of a fund for the better housing of the working classes, and within a year some 200 of these houses will be replaced by nine huge blocks of modern dwellings, capable of accommodating more than 600 persons. The ground acquired consists of 60,000 square feet.

The blackberry harvest in Surrey, England, this year is believed to be the biggest for thirty years.

AIR FLYERS BUSY

Outlook Not Promising, However, for the "Lighter-Than-Air" Department

Preparatory to the departure of the Army Air Battalion for Amesbury, the expert military flyers that England possesses, have been practising daily at Farnborough. The general public has seen little of these trials, for most of them have been made at daybreak, not from any motive of secrecy, but because of the high winds which rage almost continually from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. While the army aeroplanes are giving general satisfaction and the military Bleriot monoplanes are surpassing all expectations, the outlook is not very pleasant in the "lighter-than-air" department, though without doubt present defects will be speedily remedied. In the dirigible department the English-built balloon Beta, occasionally flies in the direction wanted, even if only at a snail's pace, the Gamma has refused to fly for several months, and the much-advertised Lebaudy airship is proving something of a white elephant. The reason for the continued effectiveness of the Beta is found in her envelope of goldbeater's skin through which the escape of gas is almost, if not quite, imperceptible. But the case is quite otherwise with the gas bags of the Gamma and the Lebaudy. The leaking capacity of the larger dirigible is told in that fact that in ten days she lost a ton of lifting power. The serious side of this leakage, even in time of peace, is the cost of inflation, which is something like $3,500, to say nothing of the expenditure of labor in dismantling and re-erecting the internal framework.

REFORMING CRIMINALS

Help Them to Earn Money by Work and Give Them Good Wives

Gehemirath Krohne, Germany's leading criminologist and director of the famous open-air reformatory on the island of Hela, declared to the International Criminological Congress that there are two ways of making criminals decent members of society again. "If they are not married," he said, "we must give them good wives." He assured his audience that that had succeeded in their colony in hundreds of instances. The other method, he declared, was to enable them to earn money by work; if they drank one day's earnings they got nothing the next.

Dating from the Stuart period, the George Inn at Hammersmith Broadway, is now in the hands of the housebreakers. The thoroughfare is being widened.

BROKE WIFE'S ARM TO CRIPPLE HER

A Russian Judge Punished a Tartar For Cruelty to His Wife Dionora

A remarkable light has been thrown upon Tartar marriage customs by a case which has been disposed of by the St. Petersburg courts. Abul Schabal had lived in St. Petersburg five years when his father called him home for the purpose of marrying him to a neighbor's daughter. This neighbor, a Tartar, named Mullah, had two daughters—Mariaka, who was very pretty, and Dionoro, who was not noted for her good looks. Abul Schabal bargained with Mullah. The latter wanted three hundred roubles for Mariaka and one hundred for Dionoro. Finally a bargain was struck. Abul Schabal would be permitted to marry Mariaka for one hundred and fifty roubles. Now a Tartar never sees his bride until after the wedding. Abdul had seen the Mullah girls when they were children, and knew that one was pretty and the other plain. After the wedding he discovered that he had been tricked. He had been married to the plain Dionoro instead of to the pretty Mariaka. He ordered his bride to go back to her father, but she refused to go. It was only when he used the knout as an argument that she consented. But her father would not receive her back, and she returned. In order to secure a separation the Tartar beat his wife until her body was black and blue. Still Mullah would not take his daughter back. As a last resort, the Tartar resolved to cripple his wife. It is a belief among the Tartars that when a wife becomes a cripple her husband can receive another woman in the house. Abdul Schabal therefore broke his wife's arm. But he found that this custom of crippling wives was not recognized by Russian judges. His wife took an action against him for having made here a cripple, claiming 150 roubles damage. Abdul Schabal was sentenced to three months' imprisonment and ordered to pay the damages claimed.

ROMANTIC OLD LADY

Mrs. Betts, Even at the Age of Ninety, Would Not Yield to Misfortune

A romantic personality is removed from North-East London by the death, at the age of ninety-five, of Mrs. Charles Fitzgerald Betts, of Lauriston Road, who was at the same time a retailer of cat's meat and claimant to the title and estates of the Knight of Glin, of Glin Castle, County Limerick. Mrs. Betts, who was the daughter of Thomas Fitzgerald, M.D., of Glin Castle and Trinity College, Dublin, contracted a marriage which her relations did not approve, and her little savings were lost in the Liberator crash. The spirit of the warlike Geraldines, one of whose numerous Irish titles she claimed, possessed Mrs. Betts, for she declined to bend her head before misfortune. She went into business as a purveyor of cat's meat and dog's meat, and for years her aristocratic voice might be heard calling her wares in the streets of North-East London. Even when health was failing her, Mrs. Fitzgerald Betts did not yield. She refused to seek an old-age pension, pursued her calling in a bath-chair pushed by an old family retainer, and, withal, maintained the family dignity despite all attempts by either customers or fellow-traders at familiarity. It is understood that the "Lady of Glin" has disposed in a will of the property she did not possess, one of the clauses providing a soup kitchen for the poor of South Hackney. Mrs. Betts was associated in her early days with Florence Nightingale, and in the East End the part she played during the smallpox epidemic of 1864 is still remembered.

The total rateable value of property in England and Wales is $1,085,900,920.

No man can hope to be happily married unless he is a good listener.

CONSTRUCTION AND OTHER NOTES OF THE C. N. R.

Construction work on the line of the C.N.R. through the city is progressing in a most satisfactory manner. Track laying is completed to a point just east of the rolling mills. Daily train loads of material such as ties, rails, etc., are brought in for construction purposes, and a large gang of men are at present employed.

In the vicinity of the station between Church and south John streets two lines have been laid for a considerable distance. Yesterday a steam riveting machine was brought here and is at work completing the wock of riveting the bridge across the river.

The work of constructing the station which will be an up-to-date structure is progressing satisfactorily. Timber and other material for the erection of the freight shed on the company's property, immediately south of the station, is upon the ground and work upon it will be commenced in the near future.

Superintendent Hill of the C. N. R. reports that all is in readiness for the opening of the new line between Toronto and Trenton next Monday. The first passenger train will leave Union Station, Toronto, at 9.30 a. m. The train will be made up of a new equipment, that is, a new engine, baggage car and two first-class coaches.

Montreal, Oct. 4.—Left two days in a room without food, an infant six weeks old died yesterday morning at St. Justin Hospital from the effects of starvation.

The circumstances show a man and woman, who were probably the parents of the child, went to a house on Sanquinet street two or three days ago and hired a room for a month. The occupant of the house did not notice that they had a baby with them. They occupied the room for an hour or so and then went out.

At the end of two days, as they had not returned, the landlord went to the door of the room to see if it was locked, when he was astounded to hear a faint cry inside. He entered and found the baby, dying from hunger. It was taken at once to the hospital, but its life could not be saved.

CLARKE-DUFFIN WEDDING.

A quiet wedding was celebrated in St. Andrew's church, Brampton, on Wednesday, September, 27th, 1911, at high noon, when Miss Emma M. Duffin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Duffin, Brampton, was married to Mr. W. S. Clarke, of Wainwright, Alta., son of Mr. P. P. Clark, ex-Warden of Hastings county. The Rev. N. A. McEachren, pastor of the church, officiated. The bride was attended by Miss M. Pearl Goldrick, of Toronto, and Mr. D. A. McColl, also of Toronto, supported the groom. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was partaken of at the residence of the bride's parents, English street. Mr. and Mrs. Clarke left by the evening train for an extended trip east, before moving to their new home in Wainwright, Alta. The bride was the recipient of many costly and useful presents.—Brampton Conservator,

PENNOCK-CADWALLADER NUPTIALS.

Wednesday morning, Sept. 6th, at eight o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Cadwallader, of East State street, Larksville, their daughter, Miss Alice, was united in marriage, to Gilbert Pennock, of Wilkes-Barre, by Rev. A. C. Frick, pastor of the Church of Christ, of Westmoor. They were unattended. The bride looked charming in a beautiful gown of white and carried a bouquet of white asters. After the wedding breakfast the young couple left on an extended honeymoon. The bride is numbered among the most popular young ladies of Larksville. The groom is a native of Belleville, Canada, but has been making his home in Wilkes-Barre for the past few years where he is employed in the spring department of the Sheldon Axle Works. The couple have a host of friends and start on their matrimonial voyage with their best wishes. Upon their return they will go to housekeeping in a neatly furnished house in Wilkes-Barre, Pa

STAR SOCIAL.

The Junior Epworth League of the Tabernacle Church had a star social last evening, which gathered together a large number of the juniors to about the extent of fifty. After the evening had been partly spent in songs and stories, a quartette was rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Waddell, Miss Lottie Watson and Mr. Harry Moorman. After the children had enjoyed themselves refreshments were served, after which, prayer brought the meeting to a close. Much credit is due to the officers and to their worthy superintendent, Miss Lottie Watson, for the grand work that is being manifested amongst the Juniors.

MUNSON GAINED EIGHT.

When the official declaration was made of the votes cast at the recent election in West Northumberland, Mr. C. A. Munson, the Conservative candidate, was declared elected by a majority of 4 votes over his opponent, Mr. J. B. McColl. A recount was asked for and was commenced at Cobourg yesterday and continued today. At the hour of adjournment yesterday Mr. Munson had gained 8 votes. Mr. E. G. Porter, K.C., M.P., of this city, is looking after the interests of Mr. Munson in the matter.

WEDDED AT ST. MICHAEL'S. ✓

At eight o'clock this morning a wedding took place at St. Michael's Church, at which the Rev. Father Spratt officiated. The bride was Miss Rosa Domenico and the groom Mr. Leonard Fardella, both of whom reside in the city, and are from sunny Italy. Mrs. Mario Morrell, sister of the bride was bridesmaid and Mr. Tony Morrell supported the groom. A large number of Italians who are residents of the city, were present at the ceremony. After the marriage had been performed the wedding party repaired a restaurant where a wedding breakfast was partaken of. The couple will reside in the city.

FAREWELL BANQUET. ✓

Last evening at the Queen's Hotel a farewell banquet was tendered to Mr. Jesse Cobb, of this city, who is leaving here for the West. A goodly number were present and a most enjoyable evening was spent by all present. Ex-Mayor Marsh presided over the gathering. After due justice had been done to the good things provided by mine host, T. P. J. Power, a programme of songs, recitations and short addresses were carried out. Sprague's concert orchestra was present and rendered a number of selections. An additional feature of the evening's entertainment was the presence of the entire company which played "The Cat and the Fiddle" at the Opera House. After the performance, were invited to partake of the banquet before leaving for the east. They contrbiuted one or two numbers which added greatly to the programme. "Wee" Jimmie Clark also gave selections on the bagpipe. The evening's entertainment closed by singing the National Anthem.

COUNTY JUDGE'S REPORT ON TAX LOT INVESTIGATION

A Lengthy Review of the Evidence Given at the Various Sittings—When and to Whom Lots Were Sold in 1910—Also to Whom and When the Purchasers Resold The Lots—The Conclusions to Which the Judge has Come—Also His Recommendations

In the matter of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1903, Section 324 and of an inquiry directed under the same by the Municipal Council of the City of Belleville, to be made by the Judge of the County Court of the County of Hastings by resolution dated April 10th, 1911, and amendment thereto dated April 18th, 1911.

Having undertaken this inquiry, I beg to report as follows:

Sittings were held on the 15th and 20th of April, two sittings each on the 22nd and 27th of April; on the 4th 13th, 20th, and 27th of May, the 10th 19th and 27th of June, and on the 13th of July. In all some seventy persons were examined.

Mr. Mikel, K.C., represented the Municipal Council, Mr. O'Flynn represented City Treasurer Price, Mr Morden, K.C., represented ex-Mayor Marsh, and although there was no authority by statute to do so, I permitted Mr. Butler to represent Mr Burrell, and M[illegible]rnew to represent The Intelligence[illegible]ompany.

I had brought [illegible]re me for examination every person whose names were suggested by either of the counsel as being likely to furnish any light whatever on the matter, and the widest possible liberty was allowed counsel in examination of witnesses, even beyond the ordinary rules of evidence, in order that a thorough investigation might be had.

Of the seventy persons called only about thirty-five had any real personal knowledge of the matter in question, but even that evidence in full makes a pretty bulky document, which. I enclose herewith.

I think I should say at the outset that whatever view the Municipal Council may take of these particular transactions, the evidence clearly establishes that aside from these, at any rate, Mr. Price, as City Treasurer having very full powers under the city By-law, has exercised those powers carefully, keeping a clear, concise memorandum of each offer and sale and apparently being very much alive in his desire to dispose of city lots in the city's interest. I suppose the same might be said of ex-Mayor Marsh and Mr. Ackerman as chairman of the Executive Committee so far as it goes, but they had apparently little to do with these sales in comparison with Mr. Price.

I may add that I have been greatly assisted in this investigation by the willing spirit of all the several witnesses to tell all they knew and by the courtesy shown toward the witnesses and myself by all the lawyers engaged in the matter.

Another cause of gratification is the fact that with the exception of one or two cases there is no contradictory evidence whatever, and those isolated cases are not attempts to twist the truth on the part of anyone, but an honest difference of memory of certain conversations.

A summary of the facts is as follows:

On February 22nd, 1904, the City Council passed a By-law, No. 1141, providing, among other things, that

GROWTH OF THE WEST SEEN IN CABINET

OTTAWA, Oct. 3—The long predicted shifting of the representation from the east to the west will begin with the Borden regime. The new Conservative ministry will be made up of one less representative from Ontario and one less from Quebec, although Quebec province is likely to lose only the solicitor-generalship, which, strictly speaking, is not a cabinet office. The increase will go to the western provinces. Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia will each be represented in the Borden cabinet, and after the coming redistribution, Alberta may have a Minister. The Manitoba man is apparently Dr. Roche, while Hon. Robert Rogers goes into Saskatchewan, likely taking the Prince Albert seat. The indications are that Premier McBride will be the British Columbia Minister.

Hon. Franh Cochrane, it is said, tonight, may run in Victoria and Haliburton, Col. Sam Hughes taking a high permanent position under the Government.

The Maritime provinces delegation has been all but settled, with Premier Hazen, of New Brunswick and Hector McInnes, K. C., of Halifax, as the choice.

It is also said that one of the Ontario seats may go to Richard Blain.

GOVT. APPOINTMENT CAUSES PROTEST

ST. CATHARINES, Oct 3.—Postoffice Inspector Sutherland and Assistant-inspector were here yesterday ofternoon, and formally installed Mr Stanley Smith as postmaster. This is to fill the vacancy caused by postmaster Lovelace resigning to run against A. E. Lancaster, in the Liberal interests.

This surprising move of the dead Liberal Government has caused a storm of protest among Conservatives here. Mr. Smith has held the positoin of deputy postmaster for a year.

Mr. Bernard Shaw is said to be travelling incognito in Switzerland. Maybe he is disguised as a mere man.

Many a young man is said to have got thrown over for stealing a kiss from another girl.

CURRENT COMMENT

The cartoonists ought now to depict Laurier with his hair trimmed short.

The Globe and some of its contemporaries are ding good work for the Conservative party, trying to drive all protectionists from the Liberal party into the Conservative ranks.

The Pope approves of the occupation of Tripoli by Italy. He is convinced that it will benefit civilization and missionary work in that country, and will put an end to slave trading. He exhorts the faithful to pray for Italy's success.

Cassier's magazine sees in the airship a probable agent for evil. It thinks that it may enable criminals to go through the air from point to point, leaving no trace behind. The criminals, however, would have to take at least the risk of aviation and that does not appear to be a small one, remarks the Hamilton Times.

Our neighbors are not pining for reciprocity's sake in regard to any other country. Their whole reciprocity affectoin seems to have been centered on Canada. If it is merely for closer trade relations with Canada they are seeking, and not political influence, why do they not at once make such tariff reductions as will satisfy their kindly impulses towards us?—Mail & Empire.

Succession duties returns last month assured the Treasury Department officials that the coveted million mark will be reached this year. The total for September was $58,705.80, which brought the amount to date to $956,000.17. The Provincial financial year closes on October 31, and the necessary $50,000 to make the million total will be easily made up. Hon A. J. Matheson's estimate for the current year was $700,000, which means that returns have exceeded expectations by $300,000.

The Victoria, B. C., Province, in noting the defeat of William Lyon Mackenzie King, says: "The boy statesman passed to his oblivion in the full vigor of his young manhood." "Not by a jugful," retorts the Ottawa Free Press. Further, it says, "that a young man who can conduct such an election campaign as that which be put up in western Ontario against great odds must have British stuff in him." No doubt of it. He lost his own constituency, and nearly every other constituency he visited. That's not "British stuff." British stuff generally wins.

One of Belleville's most pressing requirements is houses that can be rented for not to exceed $12 per month. At present many poor families are huddled together in old, unsanitary shacks which ought to be torn down and replaced by more modern and suitable dwellings. It is to be hoped that before another year passes, this necessity will be obviated. The erection of small houses or terraces of small dwellings would be a good speculation, as Belleville, with the impetus imparted by the operation of the Canadian Northern Railway, the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and the increasing prosperity of her manufacturing industries must continue to grow rapidly.

A few days after the landslide the Grit newspapers announced a decline in the price of live hogs on this side of the line as evidence that the Canadian farmers had been losers by defeating reciprocity. But they forgot to state that there had been a greater decline in the United States. The top price for hogs in Detroit at the end of last week was $6.60 per cwt., while $7.50 was the Toronto quotation In Toronto on election day, Sept. 21, the top quotation was $7.25, and the 25 cent drop since represents nothing but normal market changes. It was advocated that under reciprocity the United States packer would buy our hogs at higher than local prices, and return the meat products below the prices of Canadian dealers. This was one of the miracles whereby reciprocity would benefit both producer and consumer. As it happens just now, he can buy more cheaply in his own market and get as large profits on sals as he could then.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE."

Griffin's Opera House was packed to the doors last night, the attraction being the three-act musical comedy, "The Cat and the Fiddle," the presentation of which did credit to a cast of forty as expert performers as have yet appeared upon the local stage this season. The choruses were all that could be desired, and the solo vocalists, while less numerous than in the average troupe, were well trained and clear in expression. In a sense the play was fantastic in the extreme, yet of a nature unusually interesting, holding closely the attention of all present. The stage scenery was most elaborate, the changes being effected during each act under a shadow without the lowering of the curtain, giving a most attractive effect to the play. A refreshing feature of the evening was the individuality of Harry B. Watson as "Happy, a child of fortune," whose collected demeanor and ready action under complicated conditions was especially amusing. In conjunction with Laurence Gothard as "The Cat" he assuredly held the stage, never faltering, always succeeding, even the ropes and prisoner's chest failing to keep him confined.

George E. Hart, as "Hans," a butcher; W. H. Burgess in the role of "Captain Bluff"; Thomas Gibbons, representing "Mike the captain's mate" were hosts in themselves. Nellie Waters, as "Polly, the captain's daughter," and Elaine Frohman, as "Kitty, Polly's twin sister," were worthy of special mention. Then there was Mattie Martz, as "Circe," with an ambition for power; Mina Manley in the especially pleasing character of "The Genii," the good fairy; George G. Wakefield as "Great Gobbs," with a desire to rule Eye Land, all adding much to the evening's pleasure.

The scenes aboard the ship Diana were pleasing, her final wreck being depicted in a most fantastic manner. and was fairly startling; the haunted hall in Gobb's castle; the forest demons; the fire altar; the transformation, and the golden fire shower aided much in the presentation of as interesting a show as has favored our city for some time, and The Intelligencer congratulates the manager of Griffin's upon the securing of so creditable a production.

The Peterborough Examiner has the following sensible remarks on the "address" nuisance:—"One's sympathies naturally go out to our new viceregent, His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught. He will be bombarded with addresses from everybodies, including nobodies. Several societies in Ottawa are contemplating perpetration of addresses to darken the young life of our future Governor-General, in a new land—a gruesome "welcome to this fair country." One cannot recall anything less read and generally less worthy of reading, and less heeded, than the formal address that custom has made the piece de resistance of the coming Governor-General, or the presentation of a cigar-holder to the benedict-to-be, except in the matter of reading, the richly bound family Bible, whose chief function is to gather dust and testify to the financial strength of the piety of the family. Nothing is less real than an address published in a newspaper, except perhaps a petition that one is asked to sign."

CURED CONSTIPATION QUICKLY

Tells of a Remedy that is Safe for Young and Old, for all Stomach and Bowel Troubles.

Writing from his home in Barcelona Mr. Frederick G. Mayer states: "I think no one ever suffered as severely from constipation as I did for nearly six months. So many serious symptons were developing as a consequence of this evil condition of the system, that I realized I must find a remedy. The strong pills of varous kinds I tried seemed after their first effects were over to make me far worse and I did not know where to turn for relief. I saw Dr. Hamilton's Pills advertised, and the first box used satisfied me I found a true remedy. Instead of griping me by undue activity Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted as naturally as if physic had not been taken. I never had to nicrease the dose, and, indeed, within a month I reduced it, and when the system finally acted of its own accord as a result of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I took a dose twice a week only, just to make sure the old condition would not come back."

No other remedy cures constipation and biliousness so easily or safely as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are an ideal family remedy for all diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels. Sold in 25 cent boxes, all dealers or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE KILTIES BAND A BIG SUCCESS AT THE EXPOSITION IN ROCHESTER.

The famous "Kilties" Band, of Belleville made a big hit at the exposition in Rochester last week and have been re-engaged for next season. The Rochester Herald says:—

"First, last and all the time, the famous "Kilties," about forty of them are the attraction of the hour, clad in the picturesque highland custume of Bonnie Scotland. There were many encores for the Kilties. Enthusiasm ran high during the first concert and the Highlanders were forced to respond to encore after encore before they were allowed to go on with their programme.

The members of the band arrived late yesterday and are now awaiting the completion of their new private car "Heather" before starting their regular tour of the U. S. A.

CABINET NOT READY TO FIX ELECTION DATES

TORONTO, Oct. 4.—The date of the provincial elections is still a mystery. Sir James Whitney's announcement that important matters would be discussed at yesterday's cabinet meeting was taken to mean that the date for filling the vacant seats in the Legislature would be decided on. But it wasn't. It was discussed, however, and will be further discussed to-day. Several of the ministers had to leave the city yesterday afternoon and that is why the cabinet couldn't go on deliberating.

Hon. Frank Cochrane was in attendance, feeling in excellent health after his fishing trip at Algonquin Park. As to his appointment in the Borden cabinet, he wouldn't impart any information. That point still remains uncertain, although it would be almost safe to believe that the portfolio of Lands, Forests and Mines in the Ontario Cabinet will soon be vacant. The presence of W. H. Hearst, M. L. A., in the parliament buildings yesterday strengthened the belief, seeing that Mr. Hearst is the most likley successor to Hon. Mr. Cochrane.

With regard to the probability of Hon. Frank Cochrane's transfer to the Federal Cabinet, Sir James Whitney said he had nothing to disclose. He thought any information relative to Mr. Borden's cabinet ought to come from Mr. Borden.

Another cabinet meeting will be held to-day and a positive announcement regarding the elections will likely be the result.

The Haunted Chamber

CHAPTER I.

The sun has "dropped down," and the "day is dead." The silence and calm of coming night are over everything. The shadowy twilight lies softly on sleeping flowers and swaying boughs, on quiet fountains—the marble basins of which gleam snow-white in the uncertain light—on the glimpse of the distant ocean through the giant elms. A floating mist hangs in the still, warm air, making heaven and earth mingle in one sweet confusion.

The creeping ivy up the ancient walls of the castle is rustling and whispering as the evening breeze sweeps over it. High up the tendrils climb, past mullioned windows and quaint devices, until they reach even to the old tower, and twine lovingly around it, and push through the long aperture in the masonry of the walls of the haunted chamber.

It is here that the shadows cast their heaviest gloom. All this corner of the tower is wrapped in darkness, as though to obscure the scene of terrible crimes of past centuries.

Ghosts of dead and gone lords and ladies seem to peer out mysteriously from the openings in this quaint chamber, wherein no servant, male or female, of the castle has ever yet been known to set foot. It is full of dire horrors to them, and replete with legends of by-gone days and grewsome sights ghastly enough to make the stoutest heart quail.

In the days of the Stuarts an old earl hanged himself in that room, rather than face the world with dishonor attached to his name; and earlier still a beauteous dame, fair but frail, had been incarcerated there and slowly starved to death by her relentless lord. There was even in the last century a baronet—the earldom had been lost to the Dynecourts during the Commonwealth—who, having quarrelled with his friend over a reigning belle, had smitten him across his cheek with his glove, and then challenged him to mortal combat. The duel had been fought in the luckless chamber, and had only ended with the death of both combatants. the blood stains upon the floor were large and deep, and to this day the boards bear silent witness to the sanguinary character of that secret fight.

Just now, standing outside the castle in the warmth and softness of the dying daylight, one can hardly think of bygone horrors, or aught that is sad and sinful.

There is an air of bustle and expectancy within the doors that betokens coming guests; the servants are moving to and fro noiselessly but busily, and now and then the stately housekeeper passes from room to room uttering commands and injunctions to the maids as she goes. No less occupied and anxious is the butler, as he surveys the work of the footmen. It is so long since the old place has had a resident master, and so much longer still since guests have been invited to it, that the household are more than ordinarily excited at the change now about to take place.

Sir Adrian Dynecourt, after a prolonged tour on the Continent and lingering visits to the East, has at last come home with the avowed intention of becoming a staid country gentleman, and of settling down to the cultivation of turnips, the breeding of prize oxen, and the determination to be the M. F. H. when old Lord Dartee shall have fulfilled his declared intention of retiring in his favor. He is a tall young man, lithe and active. His skin, though naturally fair, is bronzed by foreign travel. His hair is a light brown, cut very close to his head. His eyes are large, clear, and honest, and of a peculiarly dark violet; they are beautiful eyes, winning, sweet, and steady in their glance. His mouth, shaded by a drooping fair mustache, is large and firm, yet very prone to laughter.

It is quite the end of the London season, and Sir Adrian has hurried down from town to give direction for the reception of some people whom he has invited to stay with him during the slaughter of the partridges.

Now all is complete, and the last train from London being due half an hour ago, Sir Adrian is standing on the steps of his hall-door anxiously awaiting some of his guests.

There is even a touch of genuine impatience in his manner, which could hardly be attributed to the ordinary longing of a young man to see a few of his friends. Sir Adrian's anxiety is open and undisgusied, and there is a little frown upon his brow. Presently his face brightens as he hears the roll of carriage wheels. When the carriage turns the corner of the drive, and the horses are pulled up at the hall door, Sir Adrian sees a fair face at the window that puts to flight all the fears he has been harboring for the last half hour.

"You have come?" he says, delightedly, running down the steps and opening the carriage door himself. "I am so glad! I began to think the train had run away with you, or that the horses had bolted."

"Such a journey as it has been!" exclaims a voice not belonging to the face that had looked from the carriage at Sir Adrian. "It has been tiresome to the last degree. I really don't know when I felt so fatigued."

A little woman, small and fair, steps languidly to the ground as she says this, and glances pathetically at her host. She is beautifuly "got up" both in dress and complexion, and at first glance appears almost girlish. Laying her hand in Sir Adrian's, she lets it rest there, as though glad to be at her journey's end, conveying at the same time by a gentle pressure of her taper fingers the fact that she is even more glad that the end of her journey had brought her to him. She looks up at him with her red lips drooping as if tired, and with a bewildered expression in her pretty blue eyes that adds to the charm of her face.

"It's an awful distance from town," says Sir Adrian, as if apologizing for the spot on which his grand old castle has been built. "And it was more than good of you to come to me. I can only try to make up to you for the discomfrt you have experienced to-day by throwing all possible chances of amusement in your way whilst you stay here."

By this time she had withdrawn her hand, and so he is free to go up to his other guest and bid her welcome. He says nothing to her, strange to say, but it is his hand that seeks ot retain hers this time, and it is his eyes that look longingly into the face before him.

"You are tired too,?" he says at length. "Come into the house and rest awhile before dinner. You will like to go to your rooms at once, perhaps?" he adds, turning to his two visitors.

"Thank you—yes. If you will have our tea sent upstairs," replies Mrs. Talbot plaintively, "it will be such a comfort!" she always speaks in a somewhat pouting tone, and with heavyy emphasis.

"Tea—nonsense!" responds Sir Adrian. "There's nothing like champagne as a pick-me-up. I'll send you tea also, but take my advice and try the champagne."

"Oh, thank you, I shall so much prefer my tea!" Mrs. Talbot declares, with a graceful little shrug of her shoulders, at which her friend, Miss Delmaine laughs aloud.

"I accept your advice, Sir Adrian," she says, casting a mischievous glance at him under her long lashes. "And—yes, Dora will take champagne too—when it comes."

"Naughty girl!" exclaims Mrs. Talbot, with a little flickering smile. Dora Talbot seldom smiles, having learned by experience that her delicate face looks prettier in repose. "Come, then, Sir Adrian," let us enter your enchanted castle."

The servants by this time have taken in all their luggage—that is, as much as they have been able to bring in the carriage; and now the two ladies walk up the steps and enter the hall, their host beside them.

Mrs. Talbot, who has recovered her spirits a little, is chattering gayly whilst Miss Delmaine is strangely silent, and seems lost in a kind of pleased wonder as she gazes upon all her charming surroundings.

The last rays of light are streaming in through the stained-glass windows, rendering the old hall full of mysterious beauty. The grim warriors in their coats of mail seem, to the entranced gaze of Florence Delmaine, to be making ready to spring from the niches which hold them.

Waking from her dream as she reaches the foot of the stone staircase, she says abruptly, but with a lovely smile playing around her mouth:

"Surely, Sir Adrian, you have a ghost in this beautiful old place, or a secret starcase, or at least a bogey of some sort? Do not spoil the romantic look of it by telling me you have no tale of terror to impart, no history of a ghostly visitant who walks these halls at the dead of night."

"We have no ghost here, I am sorry to say," answers Sir Adrian, laughing. "For the first time I feel distressed and ashamed that it should be so. We can only boast a haunted chamber; but there are certain legends about it that I am proud to say the bare narration of which would make even the stoutest heart quail."

"Good gracious—how distinctly unpleasant!" exclaims Mrs. Talbot, with a nervous and very effective shudder.

"How distinctly delicious, you mean," puts in Miss Delmaine. "Sir Adrian, is this chamber anywhere near where I shall sleep?"

"Oh, no; you need not be afraid of that!" answers Dynecourt, hastily.

"I am not afraid," declares the girl, saucily. "I have all my life been seeking an adventure of some sort. I am tired of my prosaic existence. I want to know what dwellers in the shadowy realms of ghostland are like."

"Dear Sir Adrian, do urge her not to talk like that; it is positively wicked," pleads Dora Talbot, glancing at him beseechingly.

"Miss Delmaine, you will drive Mrs. Talbot from my house if you persist in your evil courses," says Sir Adrian, laughing again. "Desist, I pray you."

"Are you afraid, Dora?" asks Florence, merrily. "Then keep close to me. I can defy all evil spirits, I have spells and charms."

"You have indeed," puts in Sir Adrian, in a tone so low that only she can hear it. "And, knowing this, you should be merciful."

Though she cannot hear what he says, yet Mrs. Talbot can see he is addressing Florence, and marks with some uneasiness the glance that passes from his eyes to hers. Breaking quickly into the conversation, she says timidly, laying her hand on her host's arm:

"This shocking room you speak of will not be near mine?"

"In another wing altogether," Sir Adrian replies, reassuringly. Indeed, it is so far from this part of the castle that one might be safely incarcerated there and slowly starved to death without anyone of the household being a bit the wiser. It is in the north wing in the old tower, a portion of the building which has not been in use in fifty years."

"I breathe again," says Dora Talbot, affectedly.

"I shall traverse every inch of that old tower—haunted room and all—before I am a week older," declares Florence, defiantly. After which she smiles at Adrian again, and follows the maid up the broad staricase to her room.

By the end of the week many other visitors have been made welcome at the castle; but none perhaps give so much pleasure to the young baronet as Mrs. Talbot and her cousin.

Miss Delmaine, the only daughter and heiress of an Indian nabob; had taken London by storm this past season; and not only the modern Babylon, but the heart of Adrian Dynecourt as well. She had come home to England on the death of her father about two years ago; and, having no nearer relatives alive, had been kindly received by her cousin, the Honorable Mrs. Talbot, who was then living with her husband in a pretty house in Mayfair.

Six months after Florence Delmaine's arrival George Talbot had succumbed to a virulent fever; and his widow, upon whom a handsome jointure had been settled, when the funeral and the necessary law worries had come to an end, had intimated to her young cousin that she intended to travel for a year upon the Continent. and she would be glad, that is—with an elaborate sigh—she would be a degree less miserable, if she, Florence would accompany her. This delighted Florence. She was wearied with attendance on the sick, having done most of the nursing of the Honorable George, while his wife lamented and slept; and, besides, she was still sore at heart for the loss of her father. The year abroad had passed swiftly, the end of it brought them to Paris once more, where, feeling that her time of mourning might be decently terminated, Mrs. Talbot had discarded her sombre robes, and had put herself into the hands of the most fashionable dressmaker she could find.

Florence, too, discarded mourning for the first time, although her father had been almost two years in his quiet grave amongst the hills; and, with her cousin, who was now, indeed, her only friend, if slightly uncongenial, decided to return to London forthwith.

It was early in May, and with a sensation of extreme and most natural pleasure, the girl looked forward to a few months passed amongst the best of those whom she had learned under her cousin's auspices to regard as "society."

Dora Talbot herself was not by any means dead to the thought that it would be to her advantage to introduce into society a girl well-born and possessed of an almost fabulous fortune. Stray crumbs must surely fall to her share in a connection of this kind, and such crumbs she was prepared to gather with a thankful heart.

But unhappily she set her affection upon Sir Adrian Dynecourt, with his grand old castle and his princely rentroll—a "crumb" the magnitude and worth of which she was not slow to appreciate. At first she had not deemed it possible that Florence would seriously regard a mere baronet as a persistent suitor, when her unbounded wealth would almost entitle her to a duke. But "love," as she discovered later, to her discomfiture, will always "find the way." And one day, quite unexpectedly, it dawned upon her that there might—if circumstances favored them—grow up a feeling between Florence and Sir Adrian that might lead to mutual devotion.

Yet, strong in the belief of her own charms, Mrs. Talbot accepted the invitation given by Sir Adrian, and at the close of the season she and Florence Delmaine find themselves the first batch of guests come to spend a month or two at the old castle at Dynecourt.

Mrs. Talbot is still young, and, in her style, very pretty; her eyes are languishing, and blue as gentian; her hair a soft nut brown; her lips perhaps are not altogether faultless, being too fine and closely drawn, but then her mouth is small. She looks considerably younger than she really is, and does not forget to make the most of this comfortable fact. Indeed, to a casual observer, her cousin looks scarcely her junior.

Miss Delmaine is tall, slender, posee more or less, while Mrs. Talbot is prettily rounded, petite in every point, and nervously ambitious of winning the regard of the male sex.

During the past week private theatricals have been suggested. Every one is tired of dancing and music. The season has given them more than a surfeit of both, and so they have fallen back upon theatricals.

The play upon which they have decided is Goldsmith's famous production, "She Stoops to Conquer."

Miss Villiers, a pretty girl with yellow hair and charming eyes, is to be Constantia Neville; Miss Delmaine, Kate Hardcastle; Lady Gertrude Ving, though rather young for the part, has consented to play Mrs. Hardcastle under the impression that she looks well in a cap and powdered hair. An impossible Tony Lumpkin has been discovered in a nervous young man with a hesitation in his speech and a difficulty about the letter "S"—a young man who wofully misunderstands Tony and brings him out in a hitherto unknown character; a suitable Hastings has been found in the person of Captain Ringwood, a gallant young officer, and one of the "curled darlings" of society.

But who is to play Marlow? Who is to be the happy man, so blessed—even though in these fictitious circumstances—as to be allowed to make love to the reigning beauty of the past season? Nearly every man in the house has thrown out a hint as to his fitness for the part, but as yet no arrangement has been arrived at.

A cold snap looks like a soft snap—to the coal man.

In a hotel, not a hundred miles from Toronto, a notice is displayed in the bathroom as follows:—"Please do not use soap in your bath, as the water is used afterwards for horses."

Canadian Preference

The result of the proposed Reciprocity pact, at the expense of Canada's closer relations with England, has done more to awaken interest in business and public men, not only in Great Britain, but on the Continent, than any event of the past fifty years. Politicians and commercial men are beginning to realize what the policy of the Laurier Government really was, and what the people of the United States expected to accomplish, not only commercially, but politically, if the pact were approved by the Canadian people. This is examplified in a manifesto, issued by the Right Hon. Henry Chaplin, pointing out that the victory for Imperialism in Canada is essentially a triumph for Imperial preference.

"What is England going to do now?", he asks.

His answer is that she ought to respond in a clear voice to Canada as expressed at the polls, and carry through a policy of Imperial Preference, and help to get rid of the curse of unemployed at home by securing better and larger markets for British goods in the Dominion.

Pugsley & Contracts

From all accounts received from Ottawa, it would appear that Mr. Pugsley is trying to bind the incoming Government to all contracts for the expenditure of millions of money. Pugsley knows a thing or two. The latest telegram says that an order-in-council was passed, awarding contracts involving enormous sums of money, but that "there is reason to believe, however, that the order-in-council respecting the St. John harbor improvements passed the Council and was held up in the Governor-Genreal's office." It is to be hoped this is true. If not the new Minister, to follow the precedent set him by the late Alexander Mackenzie, should cancel them all, until a thorough investigation is had.

What Next?

All sorts of positions have been foreshadowed for Sir Wilfrid Laurier as a reward for being overwhelmingly defeated at the last election. First, he was to be Lord High Commissioner in London, to succeed Lord Strathcona. Now the Montreal Herald tells its readers that "the ex-Premier would be offered the position of president of The Hague Peace Tribunal very soon." If this fails a Kingship of some of the rebellious principaltiies in the Pacific might be offered him.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Promise of bright weather northwest had much to do with making the wheat market to-day swing to a lower level. The change from continued storms would mean a removal of delay to threshing and forwarding a large part of the spring crop. In consequence, the close showed declines of 1-4c to 3-8c from last night. The end of trade left corn 3-8c and 1-2c down; oats off 1-4c to 1-4c and 3-8c, and hog products either unaltered or varying to 15c lower.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d higher to ½d lower than yesterday on wheat, and ¾d higher on corn. Paris wheat closed ¼c to ⅝c lower; Berlin unchanged.

COUNTY JUDGES REPORT ON TAX LOT INVESTIGATION

the City Treasurer should have power to sell tax sale lots if the price he obtained was not less than the amount for which the corporation became the purchaser thereof, together with any subsequent taxes accrued thereon. (I may just say here that the evidence disclosed that City Treasurer Price has never exercised this right, but has always had the concurrance of one of the other members of the committee, or both.)

The By-law further provides that if the price offered for any lot is less than the amount for which the same was purchased by the city, then the Mayor and Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Council, together with the Treasurer, should be a committee to decide as to sale.

This By-law has never been repealed or amended, and it is under its authority the sales of lots were made in 1910 which are the subject of this investigation.

I find the following lots were sold in 1910:—

4, 5, 6 West McDonald Avenue, accepted in the same way as his previous offers and deed executed to him on the 20th. These lots cost the city $37.89 and the accrued taxes were $7.96.

VI.—On September 28th the book shows an offer of $100 for lots 7 and 8 South Russell and 4 and 5 North Russell, made by Davidson and accepted in the same way as previous offers, and a deed executed to him on October 1st. These lots cost the city $25.26 and the accrued taxes were $7.42.

VII.—According to photograph of letter from Price to Ackerman, already refered to, Mrs. B. E. Smith on September 13th, 1910, offered $400 for lots 6E, 7E and part of 8E on the east side of Bleecker Avenue, and this was marked "O.K." under the signature of L. W. Marsh and H. W. Ackerman. The deed was executed to him on September 15th. These lots cost the city $116.34 and the accrued taxes were $60.20.

The lots marked "nil" were deeded to E. Donald in 1893 and were lost to the city until 1910, when City Treasurer Price got him to deed back and have since sold.

Of these various sales the only relatives of Treasurer Price are H. A. Price, his wife and H. A. Davidson, his son-in-law, and the only relative of ex-Mayor Marsh is Mrs. B. E. Smith, his mother-in-law. The sales of all other than relatives I may dismiss in a word. Every one of them seems to be open and clear, free from all suspicion and wrong doing and even carelessness. On the contrary, the evidence fully establishes that the whole committee in connection with each sale exercised vigilance and caution following its instructions under By-law 1141.

The procedure followed by Treasurer Price in all sales was to enter an offer made by anyone for lots in a book, and sometimes had the offer signed by the party making it. He then submitted the offer to one or both of the other members of the committee, and if the offer was approved it was initialed by the members of the committee approving. Then the purchaser paid his purchase price, a receipt was given for it, an entry of cash made in the cash book, and the deed issued in due course. This procedure seems to have been followed as faithfully when selling to relatives as when selling to strangers.

Now as to sales to relatives:

I.—Helen A. Price, wife of the City Treasurer, according to the book entry, made an offer on September 7th, 1910, as follows:—

"H. A. Price offers for Lot One, West Pine, $25, free of taxes to December 31st, 1910."

At the foot of the offer I find: "O. K. H. W. Ackerman, L. W. Marsh."

The cash was paid and the deed issued to her on the 9th September. The cost of this lot to the City was $12.88 and accrued taxes $4.57.

II.—According to photograph of letter written by Mr. Price to Mr. Ackerman, together with the evidence of Mr. and Mrs. Price, Helen A. Price on September 13th, 1910, offered $80 for lots 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 West Alice Street. Mr. Ackerman signed this O.K. The deed was executed to Mrs. Price on the 15th September. These five lots cost the city $37.74 and accrued taxes were $11.43.

III.—The book entry of September 15th is as follows: "For lots 4, 5, 6 East Alice I offer the sum of $45, to be free of taxes to December 31st, 1910. H. A. Davidson per D. P." This offer is initialed by Mr. Marsh (Mr. Ackerman being ill.) It was accepted, the cash paid and the deed executed to H. A. Davidson on September 16th. These three lots cost the city $16.98 and accrued taxes were $5.49.

IV.—On September 16th the book shows an offer of $40 made by Davidson in the same way for lots 1 and 2 North Meyers. It was accepted in the same way as that of the 15th and deed was executed to Davidson on September 17th. These two lots cost the city $19.72 and the accrued taxes were $6.85.

V.—On September 17th the book shows an offer of $85 made by Davidson in the same way for lots 1, 2, 3,

VIII.—On September 24th the book shows an offer of Mrs. B. E. Smith of $100 for lots 6 and 7 North Russell and 5 and 6 South Russell. The acceptance was initialed by D. W. M. and D. P.: deed executed October 14th. These lots cost the city $22.61 and accrued taxes were $7.32.

These are the total sales to relatives. Two explanations should be made here.

(a) All sales not initialed by Mr Ackerman were made when he was too ill to be consulted. It is perhaps only fair to point out in Mr. Ackerman's evidence. "Q. 34. You have nothing to object to in those sales when you examined them as far as the the amount or price is concerned? A.—I have never gone into them thoroughly; the prices looked fair to me; I presume the prices would have looked fair to everybody if they had not been turned out at an immense profit so soon. Q. 49.—Without taking in your mind any of this talk, looking at the transaction in connection with these lots, the taxes that were against them and the prices obtained, do you see any reason why you should not sign them? A.—I do not; as I said before I have not thoroughly gone into the values of them, but I would judge, from the taxes that were reported against them, I would have done the same thing if I had been perfectly well. Q. 50.—I produce the Treasurer's Diary in which a copy of the record of the business being done is kept; on Wednesday, the 7th September, in which the offer of Mrs. H. A. Price for Lot One North Pine St. of $25 is O.K'd. by yourself and L. W. Marsh? A.—Yes. Q. 51.—That is your signature. A.—It looks like it. Q. 52.—And it is written with a pretty firm hand? A.—I was supposed to be perfectly well then. Q. 53.—That is a perfectly regular matter; you have no objection to that. A.—Not at all. Q. 54.—And compared with the other lots sold in that locality it was a proper sale? A.—I would think so."

It seems plain from this that whether there was anything wrong in the sales or not, they had the approval of the whole committee or would have had had Mr. Ackerman been well.

(b) The photograph of the page of the book containing offers for lots was procured by L. W. Marsh, who was then Mayor. His evidence is that he tore the sheet out of the book to have the letter photographed, as at the time he understood Mr. Ackerman denied signing the O.K. The sheet has been mislaid but he promises to find it and return it to the book.

Mrs. Price has resold some of her lots. On September 15th, 1910, she executed a deed to Thomas Rainbird for Lot One, South Pine, for $75.

On October 11th she deeded to Alfred Calcutt lots 7 and 8 West Alice for $150.

On October 15th she deeded to Alfred Skinner Lot 6, West Alice, for $75.

Mrs. Price apparently still owns Lots 9 and 10, West Alice

H. A. Davidson has resold his lots. He sold to R. H. Ford by deed dated October 18th, 1910, Lots 4, 5 and 6, East Alice, Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, West McDonald Avenue, Lots 7 and 8, South Russell, Lots 4 and 5 North Russell, Lot 1 North Meyers and Lot 2 North Meyers for $950. This apparently includes all the lots Davidson bought.

Mrs. Smith resold as follows:

She sold to M. A. Willbee by deed October 20th, Lot 6E on the east side of Bleecker Avenue for $300. She sold to R. H. Ford by deed dated October 29th, 1910, Lots 6 and 7 North Russell and Lots 5 and 6 South Russell for $300. She sold to N. A. Patterson by deed dated October 18th Lot 7E East Bleecker Avenue for $300. She sold to R. A. Acton by deed dated October 18th part of Lot 8E East side of Bleecker Avenue for $275. This apparently includes all that Mrs. Smith bought.

As to the sales made by Mrs. Price: The deeds were all executed by her personally.

As to sales made by H. A. Davidson, the deed was made executed by H. A. Davidson and his wife, Elsie M. Davidson, in Saskatchewan.

As to sales made by Mrs. Smith, the deeds were executed by Mrs. Marsh, her daughter, under power of attorney executed by Mrs. Smith and registered.

The offers for the lots purchased by Mrs. Smith were made by L.W. Marsh at the request or with the knowledge and consent of Mrs. Smith, and the money actually paid for the lots was the money of Mrs. Smith, and she has received the benefit of any profit made on the resale of the lots.

The offers for the lots purchased by Mrs. Price and H. A. Davidson were made by David Price at the request or with the knowledge and consent of Mrs. Price, and the money actually paid for the lots was the money of Mrs. Price. The profit on resale of Mrs. Price's lots accrued to her benefit. The selling price of the Davidson lots on resale Mr. David Price deposited in the bank to his own credit in the savings department for the benefit of his daughter, as he says. It was so on deposit when this question began to be discussed and he did not then send it to his daughter for fear it might look as though he was trying to cover up deposit, but both Mr. and Mrs. Price swore that Mrs. Price put her money into these lots for the benefit of the daughter, and the proceeds belong to the daughter. The deed was put in the name of her husband, H. A. Davidson, because she knew nothing of business matters and the father and mother depended on the son-in-law to look after it for the daughter. Mr. Price negotiated the purchase and sales for Davidson under power of attorney executed by Davidson and registered.

I have stated in a "nutshell' the persons who actually made the offers and for whom, whose money was used and what became of the proceeds on resale, as all the evidence agrees with this and there is no contradiction, and therefore no necessity for me to go into all the evidence, relating to this important branch of the investigation, in detail.

Without going into the evidence in detail again, I may say it showed that these lots sold to relatives had been offered for sale to other parties, at about the same price or less than they were sold for, before they were sold to those relatives.

I may note in particular the evidence of Mr. Flagler: "Q. 14.—(Referring to Mr. Price.) Were the lots he wanted you to buy on Bleecker Avenue just opposite your place? A.—Yes. Q. 15.—Those are the lots Mrs. Smith afterwards acquired? A.—Yes. I believe they were the lots; he pointed those lots out on account of my living on that street; he said, those are the lots you should buy across the street. Q. 16.—You remember where the old golf ground is? A.—Yes. Q. 17.—Were there not a number of lots back there towards Alice Street? A.—Yes. Q. 18.—Did he refer to those lots? A.—Yes. Q. 19.—Those are some of the other lots mentioned as being sold or bought by Davidson? A.—Yes."

This offer of Treasurer Price to Mr. Flagler was apparently made shortly before the sales were made to Mrs. Smith and Davidson.

There are four men in particular who had to do with negotiations for purchase of lots from the committee, and who by newspaper correspondence and otherwise became known to the public as men with a grievance.

I will now deal with each of these men's evidence and the evidence touching their negotiations:

First, Mr. Frank Solmes says that in 1909 he asked Mr. Price about lots and he was given a price of $275 a lot, which he would not pay, but he made no offer for the lots. Mr. Price says Mr. Solmes was given prices as follows:—5 East Bleecker and 6 East Bleecker combined, $500; 47 and 48 east Bleecker, $150. The entry in the Treasurer's Diary relating to this is as follows: "October 4th, F. S. Solmes requires price for lots, Bleecker Ward, 47, 48, 5E, 6E, north part 7E. October 5th, recommended to sell 5E and 6E for $500, 47 and 48 for $150." This is initialed L. W. M. "October

Cured His Rheumatism In Three Weeks.

James LeB. Johnstone, a prominent member of the Citizen's Band, of Chatham, writes:

"I contracted Rheumatism by exposure, five years ago, and was ailing for two months and in great pain all the time. I got Father Morriscy's No. 7 Tablets and took them for about three weeks, when the Rheumatism all left me and I have had no return of the pains since."

Rev. Father Morriscy

Father Morriscy's "No. 7" Tablets have cured thousands of this terribly painful disease.

Rheumatism is generally brought on by exposure, but is really caused by Uric Acid in the blood. This Uric Acid is an irritating poison, formed from the waste matter of the body. The kidneys should remove it, but when they fail it poisons the blood, and, settling in the joints, causes Rheumatism.

"No. 7" Tablets clear out the clogged-up Kidneys and stimulate them to perform their task of filtering the Uric Acid out of the blood. When this is done the Rheumatism simply and naturally vanishes.

"No 7" Tablets cost 50c. At your dealer's. 28

JUDGE'S REPORT ON TAX LOT INVESTIGATION

8th, 1910, Solmes says: much too high."

On May 25th, 1910, George Darragh offered $150 for 47 and 48; it was accepted, but Darragh failed to complete, and afterwards, on October 15 1910, these lots were sold to Thomas Crozier for $150.

Lot 5E was bought by Alfred Skinner from the city for $200, on September 9th, 1910. Lots 6E, 7E and part of 8E were purchased by Mrs. B. E. Smith, for $400 on September 15th, 1910, averaging about $185 a lot.

Re J. P. C. Phillips: Mr. Burrell had offered Mr. Phillips $100 a lot if he could secure for him from the city Lots 5, 6, 7, 8, south Russell, and 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 west McDonald; he says he saw Mr. Price August 25th, 1910, who told him he could have them for taxes, which Mr. Price said was about $15 a lot. Mr. Phillips saw the mayor, who agreed. He then saw Mr. Ackerman, who thought a percentage should be added to the amount of taxes. Afterward Mr. Price on the street said he had made a mistake, as he found the taxes would be about $23 or $25 a lot. Mr. Phillips says he said nothing to this, but tried to get a meeting of the committee. A short time afterward he says he met Mr. Price and asked him if he had a meeting and Mr. Price said, no the lots had been sold. I might quote a few questions and answers from Mr. Phillips' evidence: "Q. 115.—As a matter of fact you never made any formal offer for the lots? A.—In dollars and cents, no, I didn't but they knew I was prepared to give what was against them. Q. 116.—You wanted to get them as cheap as you could naturally? A.—Why certainly. Q. 117.—And that is why you combated Chairman Ackerman's idea of trying to make a little more money for the city? A.—I talked that over with him; I didn't dispute it; that is the reason I asked to have a meeting called. Q. 118.—You pointed out to him that the other people took a different view? A.—Certainly; if they all agreed there would be no necessity for calling a meeting. Q. 119.—You were anxious for these lots; why didn't you follow it up and make an offer? A.—I thought I had done all that was expected from one man to another, and I think so still. Q. 120. You never intimated you were prepared to pay $30, $40 or $50 for those lots? A.—No. Q. 121.—You at that time had information that they didn't have as to the value of those lots? A.—I had and they got that information afterwards, and that is the reason they didn't sell to me. Q. 122.—Who did they get it from? A.—I don't know. Q. 123.—You knew Mr. Burrell was prepared to pay $100 a piece for those lots? A.—Yes. Q. 124. —And you were the only one that knew that? A.—I don't know that I was. Q. 125.—Mr. Burrell told you he would give $100 a piece for those lots? A.—He did. Q. 126.—And you didn't tell that around the town? A.—I don't generally tell my business around the town. Q. 134.—And you were refused some time in the early part of September or the last of August, were turned off? A.—Yes. Q. 135.—And you think that was because in some way or other these people found out that Burrell was prepared to pay $100 a piece for those lots? A.—I do. Q. 136.—You think that? A.—Yes. Q. 137.—How do you explain the fact on the 7th day of October Mr. Ford made an offer for those six lots and got them for $25 a piece? A.—I don't know anything about it." (The evidence seems to show that no member of the committee ever had any knowledge that Mr. Burrell would pay $100 a lot.)

Mr. Phillips says he lost $800 by not getting these lots, but does not claim that the city lost any money by his failing to get them.

By reference to an earlier part of this report you will see what ultimately became of these lots.

The evidence of Mr. Price on this question is found commencing with question 63.—"What is the next entry there? A.—August 25th: J. P. C. Phillips inquires if he can get back his former lots, say 5, 6, 7, 8, south Russell, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 west McDonald; thinks he should get them for $8 each, but would give $9. Q. 64.—Is that the first occasion in the year 1910 when Mr. Phillips came to you about lots A.—Yes. Q. 65.—On August 25th? A.—Yes. Q. 66.—Now, what took place? A.—He came in and said he would like to redeem those ten lots, could he get them; I said, yes; he said on what terms; I said by paying the amount of taxes and interest against them I think you can get them, and I said, what are they worth to you? Well, he said, I ought to get them for about $8 each; I said the committee would not entertain that offer; he said, what taxes would there be against them? I said, speaking roughly, about $15 each. He pooh poohed that idea, didn't see why they should be $15 when the last he bought was $9; he said, you gave me a lot for $9; I said, I think you are mistaken, I don't remember it, but afterwards I found he was correct. Q. 67.—Was that entry made at the time Mr. Phillips came in? A. —Right at the time; I then said he had better see the committee. Q. 68 —After Mr. Phillips spoke about the $8 and then said you ought to let him have them for $9, of which you made an entry, did you see the committee? A.—I spoke to them as they came in and they declined it." (The word "declined" is written in by Mr Price.) "Q. 69.—Now, then, where did you see Mr. Phillips next after the committee declined that offer: A.—I met him nearly opposite the Intelligencer office one morning; I don't know just when after this, a week or two, and he said, what about those lots? And I said, Mr. Phillips the city declined your offer, and he seemed, I thought, a little annoyed and I left him at that; I think he said he would see the committee that is my recollection. I understood afterwards from Mr. Ackerman and the Mayor that he had seen them and that nothing had been arranged. Q. 70.—Did the committee have any discussion with you about the quantity of land that he was offering for? A.—I think it was Mr. Ackerman spoke, raising a little objection to selling him lots that would form two acre blocks because he had about 90 lots on the tax rolls of 1910 assessed as farm property on which he was paying 54 cents a lot. Q. 71.—Mr Phillips has about 90 lots assessed as farm property and he was paying 54 cents a lot for them? A.—Yes, and the committee's idea was if they were in the hands of individual buyers that the taxes would be very much higher. Q. 72.—And this block of land that was discussed that you have entered in your book, how much land is there there? A.—It would be a little over two acres; if these lots were separated and still join some other lots of his they would still come under that. Q. 73.—Would this adjoin these other lots of his assessed as farm property. A.—I think they would. Q. 75.—And they would still be assessed as farm property? A.—Yes. Q. 75.—And that matter was discussed? A.—Yes. Q. 76.—Did you see Mr. Phillips again after that. A. —Yes, I saw him some weeks afterwards. I can't fix the date; I think probably the latter part or middle of October; I met him in the Post Office one evening and he said, well anything been done about those lots and I said they had been sold. He was very much annoyed and said he thought the committee hadn't treated him fairly or thought they didn't want to do business with him and I had better look for another job; he was very much annoyed at the time I told him I was not looking for another job just yet. Q. 77.—Did you say anything about his former offer: A.—Told him his offer was too low. Q. 78.—Did you have any other conversation with him in reference to these tax lots? A.—Never. Q. 79.—Did he ever make any offer to you other than the one you have recorded there on the first occasion? A.—Never."

The evidence of Mr. Marsh on this question is: "Q. 153.—Mr. Phillips seems to think he was rather treated with cold water when he tried to buy lots from the city; you heard his evidence here? A.—Yes. Q. 154.—Do you remember having a conversation with him some time in August he puts it, about lots the Bleecker estate had been interested in? A.—I have kind of a remembrance of his dropping in my office one day speaking about some lots he wanted to get back; I asked him if they were lots that had come into possession of the city in the Caldwell-Phillips litigation and he asked if he could get them back; I said I would have to see what the taxes were; he said something like this: Would you give us a chance against anybody else? I said my opinion had always been where people had carried vacant lots for a good many years, they would get the preference if they wished to buy them in again. Q. 155.—He says in the letter and also in his evidence that Mr. Price and yourself expressed yourselves as being more favorable to that proposition than the present Mayor, that Mr. Ackerman thought the city should get a fair advance on the taxes? A.—I don't know that there was a difference of opinion; I think Mr. Ackerman's opinion and mine co-incided; I never said any person could have lots for the taxes against them. Q. 156.—Did you gather from Mr. Price what his attitude was about buying them back A.—Yes; a day or two after I was in the Treasurer's office and he told me Mr. Phillips had been in and had made an offer of $8 or $9 for the lots, showed me the entry on the book; I said, what taxes are against these? We found the taxes amounted to a great deal more; I said we couldn't accept any such offer as that. Three or four days after that I met Mr. Phillips again and he asked what had been done; I said we couldn't let him have those lots for any such price as he offered the Treasurer; he said, why not? I said the taxes were a good deal more than that; I said we ought to get $25 a piece for these lots, and he pooh-poohed it. Q. 157. —Were you in the Council when the litigation was going on with the city and Mr. Phillips? A.—Yes. Q. 158. —And he always seemed to think he ought to get the lots back for the taxes? A.—That was his attitude. Q. 159.—Did you promise him to call a meeting? A.—No. I said I would look and see what the taxes were against the lots and talk it over; we didn't call special meetings for anybody; there was some of us down there every day. Q. 160.—As far as you know was any offer out in by Mr. Phillips for lots. A.—There was no offer to me. Q. 161.—Were you asked to consider any offer, or the committee? A.—Only that $8 or 9. Q. 162.—Anything that he was willing to give more than the amount the Treasurer mentioned to you? A.—No. Q. 163.—Any reason to give Mr. Phillips any different treatment from anyone else? A.—Not at all."

Regarding Mr. Burrell and Mr. Ford, I take them together, as Mr. Ford was acting under instructions from Mr. Burrell, and Mr. Burrell says all he knew about the matter is what Mr. Ford reported to him and also by reference to the various documents. He had no personal dealings with any member of the committee as to purchase of lots in 1910.

Mr. Burrell asked Mr. Phillips to buy lots for him and I have just given the evidence pretty fully regarding Phillips' negotiations.

Mr. Burrell also arranged with Mr. Ford to buy lots for him. I will therefore now deal with the Ford negotiations:

Mr. Ford says he first went to see Mr. Price the latter part of September to find out if he had sold any of the lots that Phillips was intending to buy, and he found that four of them were under offer, 5, 6, 7 and 8 south Russell. (The others had been conveyed to H. A. Davidson, September 20th.) He did not make any offer for these lots at that time. He also inquired about lots on west McDonald Avenue and was told by Mr. Price that they were under offer. (The fact seems to be that these McDonald Avenue lots were under offer at that time to George Humphrey, who afterwards declined them and they were then sold by the city to Ford on October 7th.).

He bought in all nine lots from the city, seven on west McDonald and two on east Alice. "Q. 116.—Is there anything about those two transactions that were of a suspicious character that you can give us further or anything about it that seems to strike you as being wrong at all A.—I do not understand why the lots were under offer in the commencement, that I couldn't buy them in the start and I could buy them afterwards. Q. 117.—Did you say to Mr. Price that you would buy these lots when you first went to him, did you tell him that? A.—I asked him if they were for sale. Q. 118.—Did you tell him or give him to understand that you would buy them? A.—Naturally if I asked him if they were for sale I would buy them if I could, nothing more than that though; I told him I liked the location of those lots. Q. 119.—You asked him if they were for sale; did you say anything further to give him to understand you would buy them? A.—I inquired at different times. Q. 120.—You didn't name any price at all? A.—No, the price was not settled. Q. 121.—Did you name any price at that time. A.—I couldn't because the lots were under offer; I told him in the event of them not being sold I would like to make an offer, if they were on the market again. Q. 122.—I heard from Mr. Burrell this morning that you were authorized to pay $100 for lots? A.—Authorized to pay up to $100. Q. 123.—That is correct? A.—Yes. Q. 124.—I suppose you didn't mention that to Mr. Price, or did you? A.—No. Q. 125.—I suppose Mr. Price didn't know that Mr. Burrell had anything to do with these transactions at all? A.—As far as I know he didn't. Q. 55.—Let me get back to our question again; I want to know if you ever made an offer to Mr. Price or any other member of that committee in dollars and cents for a lot owned by the city that you did not afterwards get? A.—No. Q.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

ITALIAN ARMY IS ACTIVE; LANDING IS REPORTED

Italian Paper Says Tripoli Has Been Bombarded.

Italian Cruisers Have Entered the Harbor, Says La Tribuna, and Have Hoisted the National Flag—Abruzzi Threatens to Shell the Town of Prevesa—New Turkish Cabinet Is In Favor of Mediation.

London, Oct. 4.—The last official word from Tripoli comes from Vice-Admiral Faravelli, who notified the Italian Government that he had given the Turkish commander until noon Tuesday to surrender.

A special edition of The Rome Tribuna publishes the statement that the Italian cruisers entered the harbor of Tripoli Tuesday afternoon, bombarded the forts and the governor's castle, made a landing and hoisted the Italian flag.

The most important naval capture of the war so far is that of the Turkish transport Sabah, with a Turkish general, a large contingent of troops and much ammunition aboard.

Corfu reports that the Duke of Abruzzi, in command of a torpedo flotilla off Prevesa, threatens a bombardment of that place.

The Porte's appeal to the powers has been answered by the powers to the effect that they cannot offer mediation until a basis of settlement is suggested on the lines of the Italian demands.

Late reports from Constantinople say that the new Cabinet has been nominated and that it will continue the policy looking to mediation.

The Turkish battleships and a cruiser have been sent to reinforce the squadron in the Dardanelles. Turkey, it is stated, has troops aboard two Russian steamers now held up at Suez. This tends to confirm the Vienna report that Turkey has ordered the Yemon expeditionary force to occupy the coast of the Italian colony of Eitrirea, with the support of a squadron of warships.

No Further Development.

London, Oct. 4.—The lapse of another day leaves the Turco-Italian war without further development. There is no confirmation of the alleged bombardment of Tripoli, which appears unlikely to have happened, as it will yet be several days before the expeditionary force is ready to leave Italian shores.

Apparently the Italian Government is apprehensive that the Turkish fleet may be able to hamper the passage of transports, and great precautions are being taken. The expedition will be started from ports in two seas, rather than from South Italy and Sicily, in order to minimize that danger, and evidently Italy is in no hurry to get the expedition on the way.

Another reason for the delay of warlike operations is the continuence of the Turkish Cabinet crisis. Clearly, the old Ministers are remaining in office against their will and are unable to formulate or agree upon any definite line of action. It is even reported that the Minister of Marine has resigned on account of flagrant disobedience of his orders to the fleet.

Meanwhile the pour parleurs of the Powers continue without intermission. It is said that Russia is now supporting Germany in her efforts to bring about peace.

A report comes from Agosta that the Turkish transport Derna changed her name to "Eitel Frederich" and flew the German flag while running the blockade at Tripoli, and that her officers were proud of eluding pursuit.

But, it is pointed out in the report, she might have been captured two hundred miles from Tripoli, had not the Italians wanted her arrival at Tripoli and the landing of arms as a pretext to declare war.

Duke Turns Fierce.

Corfu, Oct. 4.—Vice-Admiral the Duke of Abruzzi has sent an ultimatum to the vali of Prevesa threatening a bombardment unless he surrenders the Turkish warships which have taken refuge in the harbor.

Turkey's Other Cheek Slapped.

Constantinople, Oct. 4.—Replies to the Porte's appeal have been received from most of the powers, but, as was expected, they afford little satisfaction. In effect the powers say they will be unable to offer mediation until the Porte offers a basis of settlement along the lines of the Italian demands set forth in the ultimatum.

The Austrian ambassador had a long interview with the grand vizier yesterday afternoon, and it is announced that the Russian ambassador will visit him to-day, but it is questionable whether Said Pasha will be able to remain in office another day.

Halil Pasha, the Minister of the Interior, insists upon the acceptance of his resignation, but the grand vizier wishes him to accept another portfolio. French efforts have been made to prevail upon Hilmi Pasha to take the Ministry of the Interior.

Turkish telegrams report that an Italian warship has sunk two motor boats near Hadeida, a seaport on the Red Sea, and pursued the Turkish destroyer Peikisnevket.

Striker Killed By Breakers.

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 4.—E. H. Montgomery, a striker, is fatally injured and a number of other persons more or less seriously hurt as a result of a pitched battle which occurred following the arrival of a special train loaded with strike-breakers at McComb City, Miss., late yesterday. Pistols were fired, clubs and stones used. The three carloads of strikebreakers were arrested.

Starving Ship and Crew.

Kingston, Jamaica, Oct. 4.—The Haitien gunboat Le Centenaire has been lying in the harbor here for many months, abandoned by her Government. A majority of the members of her crew are without money or food and are practically starving.

No More Men Needed.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—No more men will be hired at present to fill the places of strikers on the Illinois Central Railroad, according to a statement issued last night from the office of Vice-President Park.

Killed His Own Son.

New York, Oct. 4.—"Stop! You have killed your boy," was the cry which yesterday informed Percy Greeley, a truck driver, that he had crushed his three-year-old son to death.

Greeley rushed back, and, picking up his son's body, wept over it until a patrolman arrived and took him to the nearest police station.

Greeley, employed by a blacksmith firm, was starting out at noon with a load of iron when a hoop which was rolling along the sidewalk dropped into the street. His boy reached between the wheels for it and his head was crushed by the rear wheel.

The father drove on, unaware of the accident, until stopped by a shout from a witness of the tragedy.

McGuigan Lands Another.

Montreal, Oct. 4.—Three tenders for the prefilter of the filtration plant, varying in amount from $485,000 to $584,000, were opened yesterday by the Board of Control. The tenderers were: F. H. McGuigan, Toronto, $485,000; Haney, Quinlan & Robertson, $554,000, and Laurin & Leach, $584,000.

A letter was read from Mr. Janin, chief engineer, recommending that no more than $500,000 be paid for this contract, saying that the city could construct the plant for that sum.

This is taken to indicate that the Torono firm will secure the contract.

Wiley In Full Charge.

Washington, Oct. 4.—In a sudden succession of orders, an initial move in the expected reorganization of the Department of Agriculture, Solicitor G. P. McCabe, yesterday was retired from the pure food and drug board. Associated Chemist F. L. Dunlap, closely identified with McCabe, was allowed leave of absence until the President's return, and Chemist Harvey W. Wiley left apparently in supreme command of the board. Dr. R. E. Doolittle of New York, was temporarily appointed to the board to succeed Mr. McCabe.

METHODISTS CONVENE

Great Ecumenical Conference Begins in Toronto.

Eight Hundred Delegates From the Ends of the Earth Are In Session In Fourth Convention For the Discussion of the Broad Basic Problems of the Denomination—Doctrinal Points Do Not Enter Into the Debates.

Toronto, Oct. 4.—With the drop of the gavel this morning at 10 o'clock, in the hands of the president, Rev. A. Carman, D.D., in the Metropolitan Methodist Church in Toronto, the Ecumenical Conference of Methodism for the fourth time, was in full swing, and will go down in history as one of the greatest and most important religious gatherings ever brought together in the world's history, representing 30,000,000 adherents and with delegates present from every part of the inhabited world. The word "ecumenical" derived from the Greek, means "from all the earth," and is well chosen for this representative body.

At the opening of the conference this morning, the official sermon was preached by Rev. Henry Haigh of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, president of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference. The morning session concluded with the administering of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, by Bishop J. M. Walden, D.D., Bishop A. W. Wilson, D.D., Bishop B. F. Lee, D.D., Rev. Henry Haigh, Rev. Edwin Dalton and Rev. George Packer, Bishop A. W. Wilson, D.D., of Baltimore, bishop of M. E. Church South, for thirty years, will preach at the afternoon session, beginning at 2.30. After devotional services by Rev. J. E. Dickey, D.D., will follow the election of officers on nomination of business committee.

Addresses of welcome were delivered by Rev. Wm. Briggs, D.D., Bishop J. W. Hamilton, D.D., Bishop H. B. Parks, D.D., and Bishop E. E. Hass, D.D., and will be responded to by Rev. Henry Haigh, Rev. S. S. Henshaw, Sir Robert W. Perks, Bart., and Mr. R. W. Essex, M.P.

The ecumenical conference meets once in every ten years, and this meeting is the second one to be held on this side of the Atlantic, the first, which was the second ever held, was in Washington, D.C.

Two hundred of the five hundred delegates present represent the eastern section, which includes all who cross the ocean, while the other three hundred represent the western section, comprising the whole of the American continent.

There is installed for the convenience of the delegates a branch of the postoffice in the church, where mail will be delivered and despatched to all parts of the world.

Among the many social events which will take place during the conference, which lasts from Oct. 4 to 17, will be a reception at the City Hall to-morrow at 4.30 p.m, and on Saturday afternoon his honor the Lieutenant-Governor will give a garden party on the grounds of the Government House. Covers will be laid for 800 at a banquet to be given the delegates in Massey Hall by the Methodist Social Union, on Friday evening.

A party of 35 or 40 English delegates who have been enjoying the scenery of the mountains, arrived last night on a special train, in charge of Rev. Blackburn Fitzgerald of Leeds, and are enthusiastic in their praise for Canada and her wonderful resources. Fifty-one colored delegates will be in attendance, representing the African Methodist Episcopal Church, African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. Many addresses will be made during the conference, covering every feature of religious work and new departments proposed by some of the brightest minds of Methodism, and much valuable information will be derived by those in attendance.

Church Union In New York.

New York, Oct. 4.—Steps toward a federation of the Presbyterian Reformed, Congregational, United Presbyterian, and the Reformed Episcopal churches in New York city and vicinity are being taken here under the direction of the Presbytery of New York.

The plan as outlined provides that the denominations, "while maintaining their present position as integral elements of their respective communions, shall unite loyally and pray, plan and work together as one church in the city."

Big Tank Falls.

Hamilton, Oct. 4.—A big tank containing about 15,000 gallons of water fell from the roof of George E. Bristol & Co.'s warehouse on Macnab street, north, yesterday afternoon, and crashed through three floors into the cellar of the John E. Brown building, immediately north. The falling of the tank was accompanied with a deafening report and the keenest apprehension as to the results of the accident existed until it was discovered that no one had been injured.

Taft Is Bold.

Denver, Oct. 4.—In a speech to the Public Lands Convention here yesterday, President Taft flatly disagreed with the sentiment of that convention in regard to the leasing of public lands by the Federal Government expressed in resolutions adopted Monday. The President declared that the west needed capital to develop its public lands, and said that only through a federal leasing system could such capital be induced to come west.

Flagg's Tangled Skein.

New York, Oct. 4.—The bail of E. Tennyson Neeley, the publisher, who was one of eight men arrested at the recent "52 per cent. brokerage" raid, was yesterday reduced from $10,000 to $2,500, and Neeley was released from the Tombs. It is reported that Madeline Russe, Flagg's telephone girl, who is said to know much about his methods, is gravely ill at her home in White Plains.

LABORERS AT AUSTIN

Army of 600 Busy Cleaning Up the Heaps of Wreckage.

List of Identified Dead Is Now 38 and the Village Is Being Restored to Its Original State—Many of the Victims Will Be Crushed Beyond Any Possibility of Identification—Many Others Were Burned.

Austin, Pa., Oct. 4.—With six bodies recovered from the flood wreckage here yesterday, the face of another, and a skull so badly charred that neither the sex nor the approximate age of the victim could be determined, the total number of known dead in the catastrophe that almost obliterated this community last Saturday, now stands at 38. All but one of the bodies were identified.

Although the expected number of laborers have not come in, there were approximately 600 at work clearing up the wreckage yesterday, and the chaotic appearance of the village is fast being changed. Several families were enabled, with official permission, to take out what was of use of their household goods.

With the almost hourly revision of the list of missing it is impossible to make an accurate statement of the dead. The feeling is expressed that a number of the dead will never be found. Those not having been consumed in the fire, it is believed, will have lost any semblance to a human body before being discovered, so deeply have they been buried in the wreckage, which frightfully tore and mangled the bodies that have been recovered.

The body of Arthur Ainsworth, one of those recovered yesterday, was found pinned down to what was the sidewalk by a heavy sign that marked his legal office. Ainsworth was a former district attorney of Potter County. The position of the body and conditions surrounding indicate that he had been buried in the avalanche of debris while leaving his office.

The body of Mrs. A. C. Brown, recovered last Monday, was found by Capt. Schell and Sergt. Simmons of the State Constabulary, who had gone out to select a site for a tent in which to house some of the laborers. The men stepped on some loose planks, which yielded, and upon lifting them they found the body.

Resists Arrest to Death.

Jonesville, Va., Oct. 4.—In a fight between a sheriff's posse and kinsmen of a young woman wanted as a murder trial witness at Gibson's Station, Va., yesterday, a deputy sheriff was killed and two other officers wounded, one fatally.

The posse was beaten off, and another has been organized here to regain the bodies of the victims and arrest the men who did the shooting.

The posse, headed by James Collins, went to the house of George Smith, near Gibson's Station, Va., to arrest Mrs. Ziralda Denny Barnett, as a material witness against her brother, Charles Denny, accused of murder.

Mrs. Barnett was willing to go with the officers, but her kinsmen, the Smiths, fired on them.

Earl Grey In Montreal.

Montreal, Oct. 4.—Their Excellencies Earl and Countess Grey and the Ladies Sybil and Evelyn Grey arrived in Montreal last evening. Last night they attended a reception at the Mount Royal Club.

This morning His Excellency officially unveiled the statue in memory of the late John Young, who did so much for the development of the port, and will then take a trip around the harbor in one of the harbor commissioner's tugs.

In the evening a banquet will be tendered His Excellency at the Windsor Hotel.

Tailor Nearly Smothered.

Toronto, Oct. 4.—Fire caused by gas tailor's irons imprisoned Philip Cohen, in the cellar of his tailor shop at 504 West Queen street, yesterday morning. The blaze did $1,200 damage to the premises.

Cohen lit the irons at 7 o'clock in the morning and then went into the cellar. When he went to go up he found his way blocked with smoke and flames. So much smoke found its way into the cellar that he was unconscious when a window which he had been unable to break had been driven in and he was carried out.

Really Rather Premature.

Providence, R.I., Oct. 4.—Having raised $1,000 for the purpose of celebrating Columbus Day by an exhibition of fireworks, the Italian Professional and Business Men's Association decided yesterday to donate the money to the Red Cross Fund to be used in the care of Italian soldiers in the present war.

FIREMAN KILLED.

Sensational Scenes at Destructive Blaze In Quebec.

Quebec, Oct. 4.—Buried in the debris, the body of Fireman Labarre of No. 4 station was taken out by his companies last night at 10.30 from the ruins of No. 5 fire station, which was utterly wrecked by fire which broke out shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The blaze was attended with a number of sensational incidents, the fire spreading so rapidly that the whole station was a mass of flames within a few minutes, and the occupants in the upper stories were cut off by the blaze. Mrs. Savard, the widow of Fireman Savard, who was buried Monday, had to jump from the third storey to save herself, and sustained injuries which may prove fatal, and Mrs. Lemelin and Messrs. Louis Lanouette and Telespore Savard, who also jumped, were more or less seriously injured.

While the firemen were at work the floors suddenly collapsed and four men were hurled into the cellar. All managed to escape except Labarre, who was pinned under a heavy beam, and covered with the falling debris.

The occupants of the upper stories of the building had narrow escapes from death. The two women who jumped in an endeavor to catch the ladder, which was a storey below them, were badly injured, but at latest accounts from the hospital were doing well. Mrs. Savard was caught in the rungs of the ladder and remained suspended head downward struggling for some time in the midst of the flames which were bursting out of the windows.

The fire is supposed to have started in the stables.

Crushed Between Cars.

Niagara Falls, Oct. 4.—On his fourth trip since entering railroad's service, Harry Webb, brakeman, Buffalo, was killed while leaving the Falls for Buffalo yesterday. He was crushed between two cars.

Report current here last night that a permanent appraiser will be appointed to local customs service before Laurier relinquishes power. Dr. Pursel is acting appraiser. Collector Boyle said he did not think there was any truth to the report.

For the second time since being rebuilt, the Clifton Hotel closed for the winter season yesterday. Keeping the hotel open during the winter proved unsuccessful.

Mrs. R. O'Neill, mother of Father B. J. O'Neill, rector of Church of Our Lady of Peace, died at the family home here yesterday. She was one of the city's oldest residents.

"Judge," said Mrs. Starvem to the Justice who had recently come to board with her, "I am particularly anxious to have you try this chicken soup." "I have tried it," replied the Judge, "and my decision is that the chicken has proved an alibi."

Premature Grayness

MELVILLE.

The Harvest Thanksgiving service held in the Melville church on the evening of the 17th of September was a grand success. Rev. Mr. Williams Pastor, of Consecon, occupied the pulpit and preached a very interesting and instructive sermon. The church was artistically decorated with autumn fruits, flowers and grains. The choir rendered two anthems and Mr. Weeks and Miss Osborne each contributed a solo. A duet, entitled, "The Golden City," by Mr. Weeks and Miss Osborne, was greatly appreciated. The social held on the following evening was well attended. A good programme was provided, consisting of a short lecture, by Rev. A. Hill, subject, "My Ramblings," and a musical part, consisting of solos and duets. A solo. "The Girl From Tipperary," sung by Mr. Weeks was heartily applauded also a duet by Miss Osborne and Mr. F. Morton. After the programme the leading feature of the evening was an address and presentation of a fine Morris chair to Mr. J. Weskels, as a token of appreciaton of his many services to Melville church. Fighting in Mexico.

Mexico City, Oct. 4.—While the Mexican civil authorities are trying to solve the problem of the vice-presidential election held last Sunday, federal troops, under Romulo Figueroa, are making a vigorous campaign to wipe out the rebels, headed by Gen. SPORTING NOTES

HOCKEY.

Work on the new rink is progressing rapidly and it will soon be ready for the roof. No one seems to know, however, whether Belleville will have a hockey team or teams during the coming season.

Mr. J. T. Sutherland, of Kingston, the Napoleon of hockey in the Limestone city, was in town over night. Kingston, he says, will have a strong team in the Senior series, for which there is ample material, the Juniors of last year forming the nucleus.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

56.—You never did? A.—No, not lots owned by the city. Q 57.—You have never made an offer for a lot owned by the city, in dollars and cents, that you didn't afterwards buy? A.—That is right. Q. 381.—Before the dates that you bought any of those lots from Mr. Davidson had you made an offer to Mr. Price for them? A.—I made an offer for nine of them before I got them. Q. 382.—Was that after Mr. Davidson became the owner of them? A.—Yes. Q. 383.—Before Mr. Davidson had become the owner of these fifteen lots did you make Mr Price an offer for them? A.—No. Q 384.—Did you make any member of that committee an offer for any of these fifteen lots? A.—No. Q. 385.—Dir you buy any lots from Mrs. Price? A.—No. Q. 386.—You bought some lots from Mrs. Smith? A.—Yes. Q 387.—Prior to the time Mrs. Smith became the owner of those lots did you make any offer to Mr. Price or Mr. Marsh for those lots? A.—No. Later on he asked about the Russel Street lots and bought two from Mrs Price and two from Mrs. Smith.

As to this part of the negotiations Mr. Price says Mr. Ford came in September 30th, according to the entry in his book, to make inquiries about some taxes and he interested Mr Ford in two lots on east Alice belonging to the city, which sale was put through on October 7th, the second time Mr. Ford came in. On the 30th he told Mr. Ford that lots 13 to 19 west McDonald Avenue were under offer, but that he, Ford, might have a chance at them. Q. 330.—At that time were there any other lots under offer that you mentioned to Mr. Ford? A.—No. Q. 331.—So that if you referred to any lots under offer it must have been those lots? A.—Yes. Q. 332.—And their record show these were under offer? A.—Yes. Q. 333.—Now, what became of those lots afterwards? A.—This offer of Humphrey was on the 27th September and when Ford came in on the 7th October I told him these lots were open and he offered us $25 each for them, for the seven; that was $175, as against Humphrey's offer of $100, and then for 11 and 12 the offer was $30 each, which we had decided on, and he bought the whole lots for $235. Q. 334.—In whose name were these lots sold? A.—They were the city's lots. Q. 335.—And they were sold to Mr. Ford? A.—R. H Ford. Q. 336.—Up to that time, the 7th October, had he ever made any inquiry as to the lots belonging to Mr. Davidson, Mrs. Price or Mrs Smith? A.—No. Q. 337.—Nothing whatever? A.—No. Q. 338.—So that at that date nothing had been said about them; looking at your diary on October 7th was the same day he bought those lots from Davidson? A—Yes.

Mr. Burrell in his letter to the press used the word "sold" where strictly speaking he should have used the word "conveyed," and this rather natural error led to some confusion in his own mind and in the mind of the public on this question. I here give some evidence of Mr. Ford and Mr. Burrell himself, which explains this. From Mr. Ford's evidence: Q 240.—You have not written any letters to the papers? A.—Not any. Q 241.—Did you give the information to Mr. Burrell from which to write, is that it? A.—Acting on his behalf I gave him information regarding the deal. Q. 242.—You did give him certain information? A.—Yes. I was dealing for him. Q. 243.—Then did you publish this matter that these lots were not sold to Mrs. Smith until the 14th October, 1910? A.—No Q. 244.—You were in court and you heard that letter: Mr. Burrell says he thought that was the date of the sale, the 14th October, because the deed was dated then; did you have that in your mind at all, in fact from your having been down to Mr. Price's office you would know that the matters to the papers? A.—Not any. Q you would know that the plan was to make an offer first and that had to go through and the deed might follow in some days? A.—In my case yes. Q. 245.—Would you not expect that from that way of dealing? A.—I don't know how they deal. Q. 246.—Mr. Burrell says he based that letter on your information, and he says when you came to deal with the lots you found that they were only sold to Mrs. Smith on the 14th October; did you tell him that? A.—No. Q. 247.—Then all he would have to draw that from would be the deed you showed him? A.—I don't know where he got it. Q. 248.—You didn't have that in your mind at all? A.—No. Q. 249.—Have you ever said to Mr. Burrell or anyone else that these lots were sold to Mrs. Smith after you were there? A.—After I was where? Q. 250.—After you were at Mr. Price's office, say on the 30th September? A.—No, I never said that. Q. 251.—Have you ever expressed any doubt on what Mr. Price told you that these lots were under offer or some offer was made before you were at his office at all, do you doubt that? A.—No. Q. 252.—What is your grievance about, Mr. Ford? A.—I have not any grievance." And from Mr. Burrell's evidence: "Q. 187.—Just to be frank, your letter to Mr. Corby which was written on the 6th January, 1911, was written on the assumption that the sale was made on the 14th October, 1910, to Mrs. Smith? A.—Yes, from the deed. Q. 252.—That all comes back to the assumption that the date of the deed was the date of the sale to Mrs. Smith? A.—Yes. Q. 253.—Then if your assumption turned out to be wrong the whole fabric falls down? A.—No. Q. 254.—You argued in that letter that because before the 14th October Mr. Ford applied to Mr. Price, that Mr. Price knew that Mr. Ford wanted to purchase those lots, and that knowing that on the 14th October he sold them to Mrs. Smith? That is the fair inference? A.—Yes. Q. 255.—That is the fair inference? A.—Not to a day or two. Q. 256.—If that state of facts is found not to exist you will admit the conclusion of the letter will be wrong? A.—Then it is up to Mr. Ford. Q. 257.—You spoke of a deed to Mrs. Smith on the 14th October; the sale may be on a different date? A.—I see what you are driving at. Q. 258.—Your whole letter proceeds on that basis and I suppose that the letter was a fair reflection of what was in your mind when you wrote it? A.—Yes, and that letter was written in the face of the statement to me by Mr. Ford backed up by the deed; you prove the whole assumption wrong and of course it falls to the ground; there is nothing to stand on. Q. 529.—Quite so, we are all agreed there and we will just leave it there. Then you drive that conclusion in by these words "in other words he was kept waiting for the lots while they were transferred to him, not directly but by Mrs. Smith?" A.—Yes, sir. Q.—260.—That is also based on the same premises? A.—Yes."

In justice to Mr. Burrell I should also quote his answer to question 165. "A.—Yes, it never entered my head that I was buying these lots to get these men into trouble, and I am quite prepared to turn these lots all back; I helped to elect Mr. Marsh, and Mr. Deacon knows that; personally there is absolutely nothing in it to say I knew these men had these lots or their relatives; it never entered my head and had they bought these lots before that I would say they are perfectly right. I want to put myself on record there."

The evidence of Mr. Price, as verified by his book entries, is that the latest sale of any of these lots referred to by Mr. Ford was September 24th. (Mr. Ford's first visit was September 30th.) but the deed issued October 14th, and this led to the confusion to some extent.

This report is already longer than I expected it would be, but I am afraid not many will care to read the mass of evidence in detail, so I have tried to cover what seemed to be the important features of the investigation in the report to avoid the necessity perhaps of the members of the City Council reading the whole evidence.

It seems clear, from the whole evidence, that there was no conspiracy between the members of the committee—that the sales to relatives brought as fair a price as sales to strangers—that no stranger had made an offer for any of these lots before they were sold to relatives; that the same procedure was followed in selling to relatives as in selling to strangers—that no part of the purchase money in any case belonged to any member of the committee and no member of the committee profited personally by the sales.

I have only two suggestions to make as an outcome of this investigation.

First, the advisability of the Council considering whether the policy which has been followed since the passing of By-law 1141 should be continued, that is, to dispose of the lots at the cost to the city or a little better at the earliest opportunity in order to get the property in the hands of taxpayers who might improve and thus increase the assessment and tax revenue; or whether, as some citizens seem to think, the lots should be considered more from the standpoint of an investment and held to be sold at a higher price in a possible rising market, or whether, as suggested by some of the citizens, the sales should be by public auction instead of private sales, as at present.

Second, whether there should not be a resolution of the Council prohibiting the Property Committee from selling to any relative of any member of the committee without first having the sale approved by the Council itself.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

If you can't have your own way you way.

DEATH'S CALL

CHARLES GREEN.

At an early hour this morning, just as the dawn of day was appearing, the spirit of a well known citizen passed away to the haven of rest. Mr. Charles Green is no more. After a severe struggle for some months with a complication of diseases, the end came, and he peacefully slept away. But few men were better known in this city than the departed. In the year 1847 Mr. Green was born in Worcestershire, England, and 20 years later came to this country and settled in this city, where he has since resided. For many years Mr. Green conducted successfully a butcher business, which is still in existence. Deceased always took an active interest in municipal matters and in the year 1901 was elected a member of the Council, being one of the Aldermen for Murney Ward. From that date up to the beginning of the present year, he had been a member of the Council, filling many chairmanships, presiding over the Gas, Market and City Property and Industrial Committees. In all of his extended municipal career, Ald. Green did what he conscientiously believed to be for the best interest of the city. He was faithful in the discharge of his duties.

In religion Mr. Green was an Anglican, and in politics a Conservative, being at one time President of the West Hastings Conservative Association. Deceased was a member of Eureka Lodge, A. F. & A. M., under whose auspices the funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Green was a genial, open-hearted Englishman who had a host of friends, not only in the city, but in the community at large, and his demise will be sincerely regretted.

Some years ago he married his second wife, Miss Elliott, of Hungerford who, with two sons, Harry and Willie, survive. To them will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of a host of friends, in which The Intelligencer joins.

APPEARANCE OF EVIL

(Philadelphia Record.)

"Sister Henderson," said Deacon Hypers, "you should avoid even the appearance of evil."

"Why, deacon, what do you mean?" asked Sister Henderson.

"I observe that on your sideboard you have several cut glass decanters and that each of them is half-filled with what appears to be ardent spirits."

"Well now, deacon, it isn't anything of the kind. The bottles look so pretty on the sideboard that I just filled them half-way with some floor stain and furniture polish, just for appearances."

"That's why I'm cautioning you, sister," replied the deacon. "Feeling a trifle weak and faint, I helped myself to a dose from the big bottle in the middle."

LARGEST SAILING VESSEL

While the sailing vessel is gradually disappearing from the high seas, an exception is to be noted in the giant LaFrance, about to be launched. This monster sailing craft will be 303 feet in length with a beam of fifty-two feet and will be the largest sailing craft in the world. She will carry 19,500 square feet of canvas upon five masts which it is expected will give her a speed of seventeen knots. The vessel will be lighted with electricity and will have a steam heating plant. A number of large cabins, richly furnished, will be provided for passengers. The LaFrance will carry a small auxiliary engine for use in calms. The shipping world is watching this experiment with keen interest.

DESPERATE STRUGGLE WITH A LUNATIC

Salvation Army Captain Savagely Attacked—Demented Man Had Superhuman Strength

Capt. Allen, who is in command of the Salvation Army here, yesterday afternoon had an experience which he has no desire to have repeated. For a few days past a young Englishman named George P. Marshall, who was working about the city, had made his headquarters at the Salvation Army barracks, having joined the Army. The man had of late been acting rather strangely and Capt. Allen was notified to take no chances, as Marshall might act ugly. Yesterday afternoon Marshall went to the barracks and, without any warning, attacked the Captain in a savage manner, tearing his clothes and striking him. Mrs. Allen, who was present, called loudly for help, and fortunately assistance was secured, three men going to the Captain's assistance. The police were also notified, and Sergt. Naphin and Officer Corrigan responded to the call. The unfortunate man was in such a condition and acted so violently that it was found necessary to place him in a strait jacket. Later in the evening the two officers conveyed Marshall to the insane asylum at Kingston for safe keeping. While Capt. Allen was not seriously injured, he bears many marks of the struggle he had with Marshall. The latter is about 29 years of age and had been about the city for some time. He has not, as far as known, any relatives in this country.

FRENCH NEWSPAPER ON THE RESULT

"The verdict of Ontario is not as has been alleged."

This is the heading of an article in Le Pays, Mr. Godfrey Langlois' paper. Proceeding, Le Pays says that the Liberal newspapers are using a great deal of energy to prove that the defeat of the Laurier Government was caused by abominable appeals to race and religious prejudices, but Le Pays declines to believe. The paper says it was chiefly the question of reciprocity which lost Ontario to the Government. Reciprocity appeared to the people of Ontario as a menace to the integrity of the Empire. The Empire is the god of the day, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his ministers were sacrificed on its altars. The preference on English goods, the sending of the South African contingents, the Intercolonial conferences at London and the creation of a navy for Canada are matters which during the past fifteen years have pushed us towards Imperialism.

"Speaking of American trade, Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself said one day: 'We have said good-bye to that trade, and we put all our hopes in the British trade.' In other words, we have contributed ourselves to the rising tide of anti-Americanism. It will be seen, in fact, that English opinion in our country was not prepared for so radical a change in our fiscal relations. Indeed a long educational campaign was necessary. The manufacturers of the Dominion saw in the Washington pact a serious menace to their industries and their capital. The business men were also alarmed at the serious crisis in the United States, while our own country was enjoying the greatest measure of prosperity.

"The loyalists par excellence feared the America invasion, meditating the speeches of President Taft, of Champ Clark and the articles of the American press which pointed to American absorption as a result of the reciprocity agreement. This, therefore, is what destroyed the Liberal party for ten and perhaps for twenty years in the province of Ontario, and the Liberal newspapers who pretend that the verdict of that province means anything else are simply deceiving their readers. All those, in fact, who attribute the result to anti-French sentiment in the English provinces are away astray, it is simply anti-American."

CHAMPAGNE M. P. MAY TURN CONSERVATIVE

SASKATOON, Sask., Oct. 4.—A. Champagne, M. P.-elect for Battleford may "flop" according to a statement in an interview here with the Capital this morning. He said when questioned as to the report to the effect of his going with the government which was circulated several days ago, that he was elected to represent the people of Battleford, and he intended to represent them. Because Battleford was out for all that was coming to it and was entitled to all it could get, it need not be a surprise were he to go over to the Conservatives. He said further that many Conservatives voted for him, but had it not been a straight party fight he would have had a hard fight. Furthermore, he came from an old family of Conservatives, his brother having sat at Ottawa as Conservative member for years. He left little doubt as to his intention of leaving the Liberal party.

CURRENT COMMENT

The outbreak of war between Italy and Turkey should make France and Germany all the more anxious to compose their differences over Morocco.

Milk has gone up another cent a quart. If the cream-line takes a corresponding drop, we can bottle up our indignation.

If it be true that 60,000 Arabs are entrenched to resist the occupation of Tripoli, Italy will not have a walk-over.

While the monarchist revolution in Portugal is said to have begun, it appears to be marked mainly by the arrest of supposed conspirators.

London, Ontario, will at the next municipal election vote on a proposal for the government of the city by a commission. Why not try the same thing in Belleville?

The nineteen principal English railway companies operating 13,930 miles of track earned in the first half of this year an increase of nearly 5 per cent. in net earnings.

A local minister preached Sunday night on: 'Be sure your sin will find you out.' He deserves infinite credit for his self restraint in making no pointed references to the late government.—Ottawa Journal.

The British Government may not have foreseen the Turko-Italian war, but its action in appointing Lord Kitchener British Agent in Egypt would almost indicate that a strong hand might be useful in Northern Africa.—Toronto Star.

The Presbyterian takes the Liberal press to task for their extraordinary efforts raise the "Bourassa bogey." The Presbyterian says: "It is true that Mr. Bourassa's extreme views in regard to the autonomy of Canada and her relation to the mother country do not commend themselves to the English speaking Canadians, and the expressions of some of his hot-headed lieutenants were very reprehensible, but even Mr. Bourassa's position is not incompatible with loyalty to British connection, and his views can be combatted without indulging in hysteria. To speak of civil war in this connection, as the ex-minister of justice did, is simply mischievous."

As regularly as the fall rolls around wiseacres are not lacking to predict weather conditions for the coming winter. As a proof of their alleged reliability, says the Hamilton Spectator, they draw their inspiration from the action of the little four-footed denizens of the woods, such as the chipmunks and squirrels, and infer in the present instance that the winter is to be a long and hard one. But either should be taken too seriously. There have been too many previous failures to make good to prove these forecasts altogether reliable. As well pin your faith to the markings on the breastbone of a grey goose, but, better still, be content with the probabilities that the weather man hands out from day to day.

Among those who voted for Borden and Crosby, says the Halifax Herald, were Thomas Parker and Thomas Palmer, of Owl's Head. The former is probably the oldest voter in Canada, and the latter comes in a good second. Mr. Parker is 106 years of age, and Mr. Palmer is 102. Mr. Parker was a centenarian when he voted in the previous federal election Mr. Palmer attained that distinction since Halifx county has doubtless the honor of having the two oldest voters in Canada, and John A. Gillis had the honor of driving them to the polls to record their votes against reciprocity and for the new Premier. Both Messrs. Parker and Palmer enjoy good health, as good as could be expected at their great age and both retain their faculties in a marked degree. That they helped to defeat the reciprocity pact and helped to elect the new Premier shows they were able to help in a great and noble work and share in a glorious victory.

The W. A. Charlton victory in Norfolk county is said to have been purchased by the circulation of the Daily Globe and Weekly Sun in that constituency. The same shining and illustrious victory is also said to have been purchased by the circulation of $5 and $10 bills on election day. Let an election petition decide whether several carloads of Globes and Suns or two automobile loads of cash had to do most with the result in Norfolk.—Toronto Telegram.

A telegram from Vancouver of the 4th inst., says:—"Premier McBride announced to-day that he had changed his mind and would not take a seat in the Federal Cabinet. He has abondoned his trip east at present." Mr. McBride is to be commended for the course he has pursued in declining to leave the important position he now holds, as is the Premier of Ontario. Their services are required where they are, and it is in the interests of both provinces that they should remain there.

WHO DID IT?

"Who planned the act that knocked the pact?"
They asked each man and stripling;
Along the track a voice came back—
"'Twas little Ruddy Kipling!"
Cleveland Plain Dealer.

But echo makes some strange mistakes
Or else it lies like fury;
The bungling chap that spilled the sap
Was Champ Clark of Missouri.
—Chicago Tribune.

You want to know who changed the vote,
And made us most unyielding;
Well, here, the man who rocked the boat,
Was little Billy Fielding.
—Montreal Star.

You all are wrong—so very wrong;
You sure have gone clean daft.
The man who killed the cunning scheme
Was U. S. President Taft.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY

An eminent scientist the other day gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh, healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing.

The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Company and told them that for over twenty years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema.

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c stamp (to pay return postage). Address, Zam-Buk, Co., Toronto.

ONE MAN KILLED; TWO SERIOUSLY INJURED

MIDLAND, Ont., Oct. 4.—A terrible accident occurred at Port McNicoll, between this town and Victoria Harbor, near the C.P.R. docks, when one man was killed and two were seriously injured. Mr. Wm. Hall, who was employed on the steam drill, was handling a stick of dynamite when it exploded, blowing off both his hands lacerating his body in a frightful manner, and killing him instantly. Two men, Mr. John Meylan and a Mr. Doe who were standing nearby, were badly injured. The force of the explosion hurled Mr. Hall into the bay.

Mr. Hall was a son of Mr. David Hall, formerly Reeve of Matchedash, township. The body was brought to Midland this evening, and will be buried near the home of David Hall in Matchedash to-morrow. Deceased was unmarried.

Both Legs Amputated.

Wingham, Oct. 5.—A very serious accident befell Mr. Rousseau, traveler for the Relindo Shoe Co., Toronto, while on his way to Wingham yesterday morning. He stepped off the Bruce train at Blyth for a moment, and when attempting to get on the moving car again, was caught and thrown under the train, the wheels passing over both limbs.

Mr. Rousseau was hurried to the General Hospital here, where amputation was found necessary, and he is now in a critical condition.

Sad End of Honeymoon.

London, Oct. 5.—Word has been received of the death in England of George Hoyles of London, instructor of firemen for the Grand Trunk. He was married here on August 20, and a few days later started on his honeymoon trip to England. He was taken ill on the boat with typhoid fever.

His young wife, worn out by constant attendance on him and grief, is now in a critical condition.

CANADIANS WEALTHY

According to Bradstreets, at the end of August the savings in the various chartered banks of Canada totalled $375,740,956, an increase since a year ago of $30,000,000. While the great bulk of the readily available savings of the people is to be found in the chartered banks, there were on August 30 deposited in the financial institutions a total of $86,037,166. Of this amount $14,647,872 was in the Government savings bank, at the end of 1910, while $43,586,357 was in the post office savings bank and $27,772,937 was in the loan and savings societies. This brings the total up to $661,778,122, or an average of $82 per head of population, assuming the population to be 8,000,000.

Goods Train on Fire.

Some excitement was caused outside Chalk Farm Station by a goods train catching fire. Two trucks laden with tar barrels became involved, and the flames shot up to a height of 200 feet. The fire spread to the guard's van. Railway employes used sand to extinguish the flames. Several thousands of people assembled in the vicinity of the station.

To a request for a harvest festival contribution the owner of a trawler sent a Grimsby clergyman a little pig in a crate. The animal was duly placed in the Grimsby fishermen's church on Sunday at the foot of the pulpit.

The death took place at the age of seventy-three of Alexander Luck, for fifty-two years employed at Putney Station. He rose from porter to be a signalman in the station box, and retired on a pension in 1908.

The King and Norfolk Weed.

Hearing of the experiment of Major G. F. Whitmore in tobacco growing on his Mithwold estate, Norfolk, King George, as a neighbor, sent a note of congratulation. Specimens were sent by return to His Majesty. One leaf measured over 16¼in. in breadth.

Fourpence a Day.

A witness at Birmingham Police Court stated that he found the starving wife of an idle husband working at putting "eyes" on chains for payment of a halfpenny per gross. By working all day the woman was able to make just fourpence.

Seven Foot Potato Plant.

At Briston, Norfolk, a gardener has grown a number of potato plants to an extraordinary height. Many of them are over six feet high, while one measures over seven feet. The tubers have not in any way been affected, and as much as nine pounds were dug from a seven-foot tree.

County Armagh Outrage.

An old woman named Mary Morgan has died at Mullabawn, as the result of injuries caused by an unknown masked man. The old woman lived alone a short distance outside the village, and her assailant, who entered the house and attacked her, is believed to be a tramp. She had some money in the bank.

Bank Manager's Death.

William F. Fetherstonhaugh, of Vernon-terrace, Frankfort-avenue, Dublin, died suddenly at the Brookfield lawn tennis grounds. He was fifty years of age, and a bank manager in Dublin. He had just finished a game of tennis, when he sat down, and after a few minutes was seen to fall off his seat. He suffered from heart disease.

Pigeon in Church.

At a recent evening service in Cambuslang Parish Church the building had an unusual visitor in a pigeon which had entered the place unobserved. Amusement was caused among the congregation, as at the time they were singing the words, "Even as a bird out of the fowler's snare."

Child Kicked to Death.

A distressing affair is reported from Echt, near Aberdeen. Henry Robertson, two and a half years old, was found lying near the door of his father's house. An angry mare was standing beside him and attempting to kick the prostrate body. The injuries which the child sustained proved fatal.

Falkirk's Historic Spot

A memorial fountain is to be erected at Falkirk to indicate the spot which tradition asserted was where Sir John de Graeme, Wallace's comrade-in-arms, fell at the battle of Falkirk in 1298. Mr. Robert Dollar, of San Francisco, a wealthy native of Falkirk, who has in the past befriended the town, will bear the expense.

Gold, Silver, and Copper.

In the copper mine at Lochgilphead, Argyllshire, the metal-bearing reef has again been tapped at 100 ft. below the surface, and the copper has been found much richer than at a depth of 60 ft., where the miners first came across it. The ore at 100 ft. is expected to produce a larger percentage of metal, chiefly copper, but also lead, silver, and perhaps a small percentage of gold.

FISH WERE DRUNK

Seven hundred gallons of confiscated wine, thrown into a canal at Frontignah (Herault), by the Customs officers, have had, it is alleged by Paris newspapers, the effect of intoxicating the fish, which swim to the top of the water and can be picked up by hand. The housewives refuse to buy fish when they can get them for themselves, and the fishermen in the district have united to protest against the action of the Customs officers.

PROTECT FEATHERED KIND

German society women and favorite actresses—who between them make and unmake fashions in Germany—have leagued together to do away with bird-of-paradise feathers and other millinery trappings, derived from winged creatures. The movement is led by Professor Schillings, a famous African explorer, and he has secured the support of the Grand Duchess of Mechlinburg-Schwerin, Princess Marie Alexandrine of Reuss, Fraulein Fritzi Massary, the uncrowned queen of German musical comedy and a number of other ladies all-potent in the realm of fashion.

The Haunted Chamber

Sir Adrian, of course, is the one toward whom all eyes—and some of very jealous ones—are directed. But his duties as host compel him, sorely against his will, to draw back a little from the profferde honor, and consult the wishes of his guests, rather than his own. Miss Delmaine herself has laughingly declined to make any choice of a stage lover, so that, up to the present moment, matters are still in such a state of confusion and uncertainty that they have been unable to name any date fo rthe production of their play.

It is four o'clock, and they are all standing or sitting in the library, intent, as usual, in discussing the difficulty. They are all talking together, and in the excitement that prevails, no one hears the door open, or the footman's calm introduction of a gentleman, who now comes leisurely up to where Sir Adrian is standing, leaning over Florence Delmaine's chair.

He is a tall man of about thirty-five, with a dark face and dark eyes, and lwitha, a slight resemblance to Sir Adrian.

"Ah, Arthur, is it you?" says Sir Adrian, in a surprised tone, that certainly has no cordiality in it, but, just as certainly the tone is not repellant.

"Yes," replies the stranger with a languid smile, and without confusion. "Yesterday I suddenly recollected the general invitation you gave me a month ago to come to you at any time that suited me best. This time suits me, and so I've come."

He stills smiles as he says this, and looks expectantly at Sir Adrian, who, as in duty bound, instantly tells him he is very glad to see him, and that he is a good fellow to have come without waiting for a more formal invitation. Then he takes him over to old Lady FitzAlmont, the mother of Lady Gertrude Vining, and introduces him to ehr as "my cousin, Mr. Dynecourt."

The same ceremony is gone through with some of the others, but, when he brings him to Mrs. Talbot, that pretty widow interrupts his mode of introduction.

"Mr. Dynecourt and I are old friends," she says, giving her hand to the new-comer. Then, turning to her cousin, she adds, "Florence, is it not a fatality our meeting him so often?"

"Have we met so often?" asks Florence, quietly, but with a touch of hauteur and dislike in her tone. Then she too gixes a cold little hand to Mr. Dynecourt, who lingers over it until she disdainfully draws it away, after which he turns from her abruptly and devotes himself to Mrs. Talbot.

The widow is glad of his attentions. He is handsome and well bred, and for the last half-hour she has been feeling slightly bored; so eager has been the discussion about the Marlow matter, that she has been little sought after by the opposite sex. And now, once again the subject is examined in all its bearings, and the discussion waxes fast and furious.

"What is all this about?" sks Arathur Dynecourt presently, glancing at the animated group in the middle of the room. And Sir Adrian, hearing the question, explains it to him.

"Ah, indeed!" and then after a scarcely perceptible pause—"Who is to be Kate Hardcastle?"

"Miss Delmaine," answers Sir Adrian, who is still leaning over that young lady's chair.

"In what does the difficulty consist?" inquires Arthur Dynecourt, with apparent indifference.

"Well," replies Sir Adrian, laughing; "I believe mere fear holds us back. Miss Delmaine, as we all know, is a finished actress, and we dread spoiling her performance with faults on our side. None of us have attempted the character before; this is why we hesitate."

"A very sensible hesitation, I think," says his cousin, coolly. "You should thank me for coming to your relief this afternoon; I have played the part several times, and shall be delighted to take it again, to help you out of your difficulty."

At this, Miss Delmaine flushes angrily, and opens her lips as if she would say something, but after a second's reflection, restrains herself. She sinks back into her chair with a proud languor, and closes her mouth resolutely.

Sir Adrian is confounded. All along he had secretly hoped that, in the end, this part would fall to his lot—but now, what is to be done? How can he refuse to let his cousin take his place, especially as he has declared himself familiar with the part?

Arthur, observing his cousin's hesitation, laughs aloud. His is not a pleasant laugh, but has a rather sneeting ring in ti, and at the present moment it jars upon the ears of the listeners.

"If I have been indiscreet," he says with a slight glance at Florence's proud face, "pray pardon me. I only meant to render you a little assistance. I thought I understood from you that you were rather in a dilemma. Do not dwell upon my offer for a moment. I am afraid I have made myself somewhat officious—unintentionally, believe me."

"My dear fellow, not at all," declares Sir Adrian hastily, shocked at his own apparent want of courtesy. "I assure you, you mistake. It is all so much to the contrary, that I gratefully accept your offer, and beg you will be Marlow."

"But really——" begins Arthur Dynecourt.

"Not a word!" nterrupts Sir Adrian; and indeed by this time Arthur Dynecourt has brought his cousin to believe he is about to confer on him a great favor. "Look here, you fellows," Sir Arthur goes on, walking toward the other men, who are still arguing and disputing over the vexed question, "I've settled it all for you. Here is my cousin; he will take the difficulty off your hands, and be a first-class Marlow at the same time."

A suppressed consternation follows this announcement. Many and dark are the glances cast upon the newcomer, who receives them all with his usual imperturbable smile. Rising, Arthur approaches one of the astonished group who is known to him, and says something upon the subject with a slight shrug of his shoulders. As he is Sir Adrian's cousin, every one feels that it will be impossible to offer any jobectoin to his taking the much-coveted part.

"Well, I have sacrificed myself for you; I have renounced a very dear desire, all to please you," says Sir Adrian, softly, bending down to Florence. "Have I succeeded?"

"You have succeeded in displeasing me more than I can say," she returns, coldly. Then, seeing his amazed expression, she goes on hastily, "Forgive me, but I had hoped for another Marlow."

She blushes prettily as she says this, and an expression arises in her dark eyes that moves him deeply. Stooping over her hand, he imprints a kiss on it. Dora Talbot, whose head is turned aside, sees nothing of this, but Arthur Dynecourt has observed the silent caress, and a dark frown gathers on his brow.

CHAPTER II.

Every day, and all day long there is nothing but rehearsing. In every corner tow or more may be seen studying together the parts they have to play. Florence Delmaine alone, rehearse her part except in full company, though Mr. Dynecourt has made many attempts to induce her to favor him with a private reading of those scenes in which he and she must act together. He has even appealed to Dora Talbot to help him in this matter, which she is only too willing to do, as she is secretly desirous of flinging the girl as much in his way as possible. Indeed, anything that would keep Florence out of Sir Adrian's sight would be welcome to her; so that she listens kindly to Arthur Dynecourt when he solicits here assistance.

Port Arthur Abandoned

A striking illustration of the fearful waste of war, of the tremendous sums thrown away in preparation for conflict, as well as in actual warfare itself, is given by the announcement that Japan has decided to abandon Port Arthur as a military base and naval station. On few, if any, places of the earth has there been a greater outpouring of blood and money. For years it was regarded as the key to supremacy in the East.

Port Arthur was first fortified by China. Later Russia obtained possession. Russia then planned to gain possession of Manchuria and Korea and to overawe, if not directly control, both Japan and China. Russia expended tens of millions at Port Arthur. Huge forts were constructed on the neighboring hills and it was thought to be proof against any siege. Japan attacked Port Arthur in the Russo-Japanese war and took it, but only after one of the bloodiest and hardest fought sieges known to history. Over 48,000 Japanese and about 25,000 Russians fell in the attack on Port Arthur, in addition to the thousands killed on the warships which were attacking and defending on the water. After the war Port Arthur passed to Japan. The great fortifications were restored and strengthened.

But the success of Japan in the Far East has diminished the value of Port Arthur. The importance of the place was in the fact that it controlled access to the most important ports of Korea and Manchuria. In addition, while in the possession of Russia, it afforded a dangerous base for an attack on Japan. When Japan obtained possession of Korea, and practical control of Manchuria, the value of Port Arthur so far passed away that it was not worth maintaining the immense fortress. So it is to be dismantled and its great guns removed to another fortified base which Japan plans to construct on the Korean coast.

Boating Fatalities

The Intelligencer has received the following communication, which is hereby commended to the favorable consideration of all concerned:

Brantford, Sept. 28, 1911.

Sir,—Owing to the increasing prevalance of fatal boating accidents I have given much time during the past three years to securing support for legislation tending to alleviate such accidents. I have secured the written consent of a number of the leading papers in the province to support the bill and a number of prominent officials and boating men.

The idea is to have all boats inspected yearly and equipped with air chambers sufficient to support any number of persons equal to its seating capacity. And special provision to be made in motor boats for the automatic discharge of gasoline should the tank spring a leak, the automatic discharge to be drained overboard.

It will help to boom boating interest, as it will relieve the public of any adverse apprehensions they may hold regarding boating.

Hoping to be favored with your assurance of support by return mail, I remain

Respectfully,
N. R. THOMPSON.

The object which Mr. Thompson is desirous of attaining is a highly praiseworthy one, and everyone who has the public welfare at heart ought to lend him aid.

The loss of life in Canadian waters every year by the upsetting of canoes and boats is lamentably large, and it is to be hoped that such legislation as is proposed by Mr. Thompson will at an early date be placed upon the statute book.

Salaries of Ministers

For those who wish to know, it might be of interest to state the number of ministers at Ottawa, salaries paid and so on. There are fifteen members of the Cabinet and one Ministe not in the Cabinet, as follows:

Portfolio.	Salary.
Prime Minister and President of Council	$12,000
Finance	7,000
Justice	7,000
Trade and Commerce	7,000
Secretary of State	7,000
Marine and Fisheries	7,000
Militia	7,000
Postmaster-General	7,000
Agriculture	7,000
Public Works	7,000
Railways and Canals	7,000
Interior	7,000
Customs	7,000
Inland Revenue	7,000
Labor	7,000
Not in Cabinet.
Solicitor General	5,000

Work Ahead

The new Government, when installed, will have, in addition to measures which it will have to originate, to deal with important measures left over from the last session, the Laurier Government having failed to deal with them.

In addition to supplies required to be voted, there is the revision of the Bank Act to deal with; the Grain Act which passed the Senate but was shirked by the Government, and, what is of great importance, the question of branch lines of the Intercolonial Railway, and probably a redistribution bill, based on the new census may be brought down.

The general impression is that the initial session will be largely for organization and that beyond what is absolutely necessary little constructive legislation will be presented.

LAWYERS TOO NUMEROUS

The Bar is Getting Uneasy and is Asking Restrictions

Complaints about the overcrowding of the legal profession in Germany continue to grow louder and more numerous. That a great increase in the number of lawyers should mark the growth of the empire, and is especially the development of industry, was to be foreseen and welcomed, but the increase has now reached such a pitch that the Bar itself is getting seriously uneasy and is calling for State restriction on the number of candidates for admission. A young lawyer elects for the service or civil legal career. He either enters the judicial employment of the State that leads to a judgeship with a salary of $2,500 a year, or he becomes an advocate, practicing in as many courts as he can find the time or business for. To an observer the rush to the legal profession is hardly intelligible in the face of the smallness of the costs fixed by law as lawyers' fees, and, indeed, the seeming cheapness of litigation on the whole. The subject of overcrowding the Bar will be disc[illegible] at the National Law Congres[illegible] be held shortly.

MEASURES MINDS WITH MACHINE

Wonderful Apparatus Devised by an English Scientist.

A Mr. John Gray has devised a mind measuring apparatus, and among the persons already tested by him are Lord Avebury, Sir William Crookes, professors and physicians of the West London and Middlesex hospitals, many of the women of the Lyceum Club, and one actor.

Commenting on the results of these tests, he says that, generally speaking, he found the men, with the exception of the actor, came under class V of the scale of persistence, which includes men of thorougn and profound thought. What a dramatic critic Mr. Gray would have made!

He found the literary women to be more mentally brilliant, witty and quick of apprehension than the average. Then Mr. Gray takes another whack at the actor by saying he came under class II, which comprises cynics, persons who do not go into the depths of things and only learn superficially.

The apparatus consists of a box, the interior of which is fitted with a revolving mirror, on which powerful colored lights are made to play. The eye of the person to be tested is placed against a whole in the side of the box, the mirror is set in motion, and the length of time taken for the sensation of flickering to disappear from the subject measures his mental persistence, thus giving indication of his intelligence.

SEVEN YEARS OF MISERY

All Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have anyone move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It is more widely and successfully used than any other remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed. Why don't you try it?

BELGIAN CHILDREN.

Parents share their Pleasures with Offspring.

This delight in the family life is characteristic of all Belgians. One sees in Brussels and Antwerp monsieur promenading in the boulevard or the bois with a cigar in his mouth, madame leaning on his arm and the children, hand in hand, walking sedately under the proud eye of their parents.

One finds children in the restaurants and children in the music halls. The pleasures of father and mother are shared always with the nursery. To go junketing without the children would appear to the Belgian not only selfish but dull. His happiness is the happiness of his children. He sees the circus half with his own eyes and half with theirs. The toyshops and bookshops in Brussels tell of th paramount part played by the child. The happiness of this people is the pleasure of domesticity.

More Widows than Widowers.

The proportion of remarriages shows an almost continuous decrease, says the registrar-general in his report on the births, deaths and marriages in England and Wales during 1909.

The number of widows, he states, is always much greater than that of widowers, because in the first place men marry later in life than women; secondly, because the duration of male life is shorter than that of female life, and thirdly, because the proportion of widows who remarry is much lower than the proportion of widowers who remarry.

Marriages of persons described as divorced have steadily increased and in the year 1909 were the highest on record.

ARE THE MEN THE WEAKER SEX?

Women Gaining Muscular Supremacy.

A college professor expresses the conviction that women are gaining the muscular supremacy over men. He attributes this to their taking a more active interest in outdoor sports, while the men are becoming indolent in that respect, and prefer being spectators to participants in athletic exercises. With their admitted superiority in all the arts and graces, including fluency of expression, and to add to this physical predominance, there seems to be little left for mere man but to plod unostentatiously along in the ranks of the producers, and continue to pass up his gross earnings to his mental and physical superior every Saturday.

His Money's Worth.

"Sixtane shilluns a da' did they charrge me for my room at the hotel in Lunnon. Mon, mon, ye dinna sup-pose," said Sandy, on his return to Croburgh Burghs from a sight-seeing expedition.

"Ou, aye, it wasna cheap," agreed his father; "but ye must 'a' had a gey fine time seein' the sichts."

"Seein' the sichts!" roared Sandy. "I didna see a sicht a' the time I was in Lunnon. Mon, mon, ye dinna suppose I was going to be stuck that much for a room, an' then no get the proper use o't!"

ABOUT BURGLARS

Amongst the More Novel Protections Against the Burglar is That Provided by Persons Who Take Fresh Air Cure.

Every renter has his own idea of what constitutes a desirable neighbourhood," said the renting agent. "A tenant hung back from signing a lease for six hours the other day because I could not tell him whether anybody in the block was taking the fresh-air cure. He was so insistent that I finally made inquiry and learned from the janitor at No. 225 that a man on the third floor of his building sleeps every night with his head stuck out of the window, and then the tenant signed the lease.

"His precaution was due to fear of burglars. He has learned, he says, that the best burglar alarm ever invented is the fresh-air cure. Not even the doctors who advise it know so well as the second-story men how many people sleep with their heads out of the window. They know because the habit interferes with their business. Whole blocks that used to be profitable hunting grounds for burglars are now so much waste space because two or three persons in the block go to bed with the upper half of the body protruding beyond the window sill. Outdoor sleepers may sleep comfortably, but they sleep lightly. The second-story man cannot make a noise half a block away without waking them and giving the alarm."

Get Busy, Keep Busy

Lord Strathcona, the famous Canadian, who left Scotland 73 years ago bearing the name of Donald Alexander Smith, holds peculiar views about the qualities necessary to promote success in life. During a recent speech he said: 'Do not despise what you are. Be satisfied for the time, not grumbling and finding fault. Do the work yourself; don't wait for friends to use their influence on your behalf; don't depend on the help of others. Apart from what we call genius, I believe one man is able to do as well as any other, provided the opportunity presents itself, and he is blessed with good health. Much of what I would advise young men to do is contained in the old counsel, "Trust in God and keep your powder dry.'"

Had Lord Strathcona been inclined to fret or worry over disappointments he would certainly not have lived to the old age of 91 years which he has attained.

Kindness Pays

Kindness pays. This is not the best reason for practising it, but nothing is more certain than that it is true. The cow beaten with the milking-stool will lessen her supply of milk, perhaps without having any choice in the matter; the horse teased when young and ready to form habits will soon develop vices which will cut down his price; the team overworked at the binder and the plow will undoubtedly depreciate in value more than they gain by the overwork.

Some years ago an experiment was carried out to ascertain if Sunday labor paid in the case of the horse. Two horses as nearly alike in all respects as possible were broken in as colts, put to very similar work, and treated exactly alike for the rest of their lives, except that one rested on Sundays and the other didn't. The one that knew not Sunday was worn out many years before his more fortunate brother.

A Long Walk

A university professor, who had greatly endeared himself to his students on account of his kind-heartedness, has one particular failing — that of absent-mindedness. He visited his married nephew a few days ago, and had listened to the young wife's praise of her first-born. The gentleman felt that he must say something to give the impression that he was interested. "Can the dear little fellow walk?" he inquired quietly. "Walk!" shouted the mother. "Why, he has been walking for five months!" "Dear me!" exclaimed the professor, lapsing again into abstraction, "What a long way he must have got!"

World's Wettest Spot

There is much interest for most people at the moment — though, perhaps, no particular comfort — in the announcement that the rainfall of a village among the hills of Assam, during the ten weeks from May 1 to July 9 this year, was 250 inches. The village is Cherrapunji, the rainiest spot in Asia, and presumably in the world. Its annual rainfall is something over 450 inches. Cherrapunji stands on a plateau, overlooking the plain of Sylhet, and it is 4455 feet above sea-level.

If a girl really wants to marry a man she can lead him up to the altar without waiting for leap year.

If a man's mind is fully occupied he has no time to be miserable.

THE GOLDEN RULE

Not Too Much Strict Letter of the Law, but Do to Others What Will Bring Most Happiness.

The Golden Rule should not be interpreted too literally, for at times to do to another what you would like him to do to you is to incur his undying enmity. The spirit of the law breeds happiness but the strict letter of it has the power to cause trouble of no trivial sort.

It is told of a man who for a whole winter took a girl every week to see a vaudeville show and prided himself on being a most generous and attentive cavalier. He was fond of vaudeville himself and presumed that she ought to be, for he turned a deaf ear to any suggestion that they go to see any good things in legitimate drama, of which he knew she was fond.

In the narrow confines of domestic life one sees it often, this too literal translation of the Golden Rule. One sees the wife work and toil over meals and the keeping of the house, all for her husband's good as she fondly believes, when what he really wants most is a smile and a song. Again the husband thinks he is doing all in his power to make his wife happy when he provides well for her and gives her presents of as great value as he can afford. He cannot comprehend that what she wants is to be teased and kissed, and when he is away from home a letter every day is of far more worth than if he brings home a Paris frock or a pearl necklace. Do unto others what will give them the most happiness even if it looks like foolishness.

Togo and the Suffragettes

Admiral Togo recently gave his views on the Suffragist question to a woman interviewer. "I am not a Suffragist,' he said. "I believe woman is harmed by any movement that takes her mind off her home and children. I believe in the higher education of women, but to me the highest education a woman can have is that which makes her believe that her greatest usefulness is at home and her greatest duty towards the States is the giving to the nation children — the future citizens. What does a woman [illegible] the education usually given to men? In our country women have a lower grade of education than men — that is, where the outside political, and practical things are considered — but she gets all the education she needs. The women of my country send their husbands, and brothers and sons out to the battlefield with a courage as great as that possessed by the soldiers themselves. That is where woman shows her strength and splendid citizenship and patriotism."

A Sudden Change!

"Florida in the late winter and early spring is a delightful place to visit," said John Jacob Astor, at tea beneath a palm at Palm Beach.

"But," said Mr. Astor, "some people think that in any Florida town for $1.50 a day they will get the luxury that we find here, or in St. Augustine, or in Miami.

"I know a man who, arriving at a kind of 'busted boom' resort in the hammock lands of Orange County, said to the hotel clerk with a sarcastic smile:

"'It's wonderful what havoc time makes.'

"'Yes?' said the clerk, politely.

"'Yes, I was thinking,' explained my friend, 'what a magnificent building this hotel was in the circular I saw before leaving New York yesterday—and, alas! look at it now.'"

Realism in Art

Actors frequently receive unexpected proof of the realism of their art. Not long ago, on the occasion of the performance of "Hamlet" by a distinguished English player, there were no more interested and absorbed spectators than two newsies in the gallery.

The boys had been watching the performance with breathless interest. The last act was drawing to a close. The duel almost dragged the lads from their seats.

Before their eyes the Queen was poisoned, Laertes killed, the King killed, Hamlet killed. On the final tragedy the curtain started down. The audience was spellbound.

In the gallery there was a clatter and a crash as one of the boys mentioned started for the door.

"Come on, Tommy," he shouted back to his companion. "Hustle! There'll be extras out on dis!"

The Pope and His Sisters

The Pope's sisters live in an unostentatious [illegible] at Rome. They once told a visitor, who asked them how they addressed their brother, that when other people were present they used the formal term Your Holiness, but when they were alone with him they called him Giuseppe and sometimes Beppo or Beppino. The Pope's name, Giuseppe Sarto, is the Italian for Joseph Taylor, and the endearing [illegible] sisters are the humble Joe and Joey. Sisters of a Pope are usually created countesses. Pius X thought it unsuitable to confer this rank on his sisters, and they themselves prefer to remain simple peasant women rather than assume a rank to which birth has not entitled them.

Too Much Self-Flattery

[illegible] at an awful speed!" said a motorist, who was relating a strange experience with a dog and its mistress. "I didn't see the dog, but I heard this 'Ki-yi,' so I ordered the chauffeur to stop. Going back we found an irate lady standing over her dead dog — one of the ugliest dogs you ever saw! She met us with a tirade of abuse, telling us in no uncertain manner what she thought of us and motorists in general, and finishing up by calling us the murderers of her dog. It was then that I thought I would pacify her. 'Madam,' I said, 'I will replace your dog.' 'Sir,' she said, in a freezing tone, 'you flatter yourself!'"

Laugh to-day; your sense of humor may be out of commission tomorrow.

A TALENTED ARBITRATOR.

Ralph Connor Is a Man with a First-Hand Knowledge of Men.

Rev. Charles W. Gordon (Ralph Connor) of Winnipeg, the famous novelist, who has been appointed Chairman of the Board of Conciliation which will seek to settle the big strike of coal miners in the West, is noted for his tolerance. That quality stands out strongest among his characteristics as a man, a minister, and a writer.

As good an example of this as can be found is an amusing incident in his novel, "The Foreigner."

The Anglican bishop in the story was being driven over the Edmonton trail by Sam Macmillan, a very competent but very profane freighter. Every time the horses became wired in a slough Sam would let loose a string of original oaths which made the bishop's blood curdle. The latter implored the man to desist.

"Just as you say, your reverence," replied Sam. "I ain't hurried this trip, and will do our best."

At the next slough the experiment was tried. Ordinary language was used, but the horses would not budge. Half an hour passed with no results.

"It's getting late, Mr. Macmillan, and it looks like rain. Something must be done," said the bishop.

"It does, your lordship," answered Sam. "But the brutes won't pull half their own weight without I speak to them in the way they are used to."

More time passed. Then the bishop gave in.

"Well, well, Mr. Macmillan," he said, "we must go on. Do as you think best, but I take no responsibility in the matter."

He retired from the scene and—

Macmillan seized the reins from the ground, and, walking up and down the length of the six-horse team, began to address them singly and in the mass in terms so sulphurously descriptive of their ancestry, their habits, and their physical and psychological characteristics that when he gave the word in a mighty culminating roar of blasphemous excitation, each of the bemired beasts seemed to be inspired with a special demon, and so exerted itself that in a single minute the load stood high and dry on solid ground.

A clergyman who will write like this ought to be a man to consider all the circumstances and provocations on both sides of a labor dispute.

A Trick of the Sun.

Upon a mountain in Andalusia quaint spectral forms are frequently seen. Whenever there is a heavy mist and persons are ascending the mountain they appear in all their ghostly splendor and sometimes so suddenly as to strike dismay into the hearts of those who see them for the first time. Of course it is all a trick played by the sun. When a mist partly shrouds the mountain the sun is naturally obscured, and then he revenges himself by projecting the shadow of any person who is ascending the mountain until it assumes the form of a gigantic spetre.

CONFIDENCE

We Back Up Our Statements With Our Personal Reputation and Money..

We are so positive that we can relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine free of all cost if we fail.

We think it is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Cathartics may do much harm. They may cause a reaction, irritate and weaken the bowels and make constipation more chronic.

Constipation is often accompanied and may be caused by weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or colon. To expect a cure you must therefore tone up and strengthen those parts and restore them to healthier activity.

The discovery of the active principle of our remedy involved the labor of skilful research chemists. This remedy produces such results as are expected from the best of the best-known intestinal tonics, and it is particularly prompt in its results.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our guarantee. They are exceedingly pleasant to take and are ideal for children. They apparently act directly on the bowels, having, it would seem, a neutral action on other organs or glands. They do not purge or cause inconvenience. If they do not positively cure chronic or habitual constipation, and thus relieve the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, your money will be refunded. Try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. Three sizes, 10c., 25c., and 50c. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—J. S. McKown,, Belleville.

MAKING OF CARPETS.

They Were First Used in Europe to Cover Tables.

The primary use of carpets in Europe was to cover tables. The first of these so-called carpets were embroidered—not woven—fabrics, and were made in French cloisters, about 1,600 years ago. The manufacture of carpets in Europe did not begin until the reign of Henry IV. of France. In England the industry was established about 1750 by a French artisan, who, being at odds with his own country, fled thither.

Carpet-making, as a modern industry, was first developed in France. That country had large factories and a monopoly in Europe of the art of carpet-weaving when a rush-strewn floor was the rule even in the royal palaces of Britain. But the edict of Nantes, that great dispenser of French artisans and artistry, caused many of the carpet craftsmen to cross the channel. They settled at Bristol, Axminster and other places in the southwest of England. From there the secrets of the industry spread to Glasgow, Kidderminster and the towns of Yorkshire. These places are still the great carpet-weaving centres of Great Britain.

TO ATTEND WELLINGTON

Third Son of the King Not Likely to Go to Eton

It is understood that Prince Henry, third son of the King, who is now at school at Broadstairs, will go to Wellington College. It was thought at one time that the young Prince would follow the steps of his uncle, Prince Alexander of Teck, and his cousin, Prince Arthur of Connaught, and the Duke of Coburg, by proceeding to Eton; but, although the senior school enjoys a great deal of royal favor, it has never been regarded as the best vehicle for royal education. King Edward, as Prince of Wales, used to attend lectures at Eton, and one or two pupils used to share his recreations at Windsor, but Prince Alexander was the first member of the Royal family to be included on the roll of oppidans.

FROM SHOP TO STAGE

Mlle. Navarra, a Shop Girl, to Take a Part in David Copperfield.

One of the happiest young women in Paris is Mlle. Navarra, of Lyons, who has been engaged by M. Andre Antoine in the troupe of the Odeon, and who will play a part in M. Max Maurey's adaption of "David Copperfield" there this season. Mlle. Navarra was a member of an amateur dramatic society in Lyons. She worked for her living in a shop there, spent her evenings learning parts and rehearsing them, and became one of the leading ladies of the Lyons Amateur Dramatic Society. There are a number of these amateur societies in all the big provincial towns of France, and every year the clubs meet in friendly rivalry in one of the big towns, and prizes are distributed to those whom leading managers consider best. There was a competition of this kind at Douai. Mlle. Navarra and a M. Dervigny represented the Lyons Club, and were awarded the second prize. Among the audience was M. Antoine. He sent a letter to Mlle. Navarra offering her and M. Dervigny engagements in the Odeon troupe, and they accepted, threw up their positions in the shop, and came to Paris.

EATEN BY CANNIBALS

Members of the Mackie Party Were Cut Off by Natives

Reports from the Congo confirm the story that two members of the caravan of Mr. H. G. Mackie, the British Consul at Boma, have been killed and eaten by natives during a recent tour. It appears that while crossing from the main Congo to the Lopori River, one of Mr. Mackie's carriers became ill, and another man was instructed to assist him. The pair lagged behind, and were cut off from the main caravan by a party of cannibal hunters from the district through which the British Consul had passed. Two expeditions have been sent and some arrests made, but the real culprits are still in hiding.

WIRELESS BONDS OF EMPIRE.

A plan for bringing the whole British Empire into touch with Whitehall by means of wireless telegraphy is being perfected, says the Pall Mall Gazette. Recent tests show that messages could be got from the Admiralty to most stations abroad very expeditiously, with the exception of Australia. To link up the latter continent with the rest of the Empire powerful wireless stations are being erected in Australasia, and others are to be made at Norfolk Island and Fiji. High-power instruments have also been installed at Malta, this, it is understood, being in connection with the plan for putting all ports of the Empire into wireless touch with London.

WHITE WOMEN, BLACK MEN

Lord Gladstone Defends His Policy in South Africa.

Viscount Gladstone was entertained at a public luncheon at Salisbury, Rhodesia. Replying to the toast of his health, the Governor-General of South Africa confessed, amid laughter, that he had come to Rhodesia with a certain amount of reasonable apprehension, but he knew that he might rely on their sense of British fair play. He declared that his confidence had not been misplaced.

Proceeding to deal with the "Black Peril," he said that it would be idle for him to ignore the serious effect of the Umtali decision (in which he reprieved a native sentenced to death for assault on a white woman) upon the relations between the High Commissioner and the people of Southern Rhodesia. Nobody regretted the difference more keenly than himself, but it was a difference over the merits of a particular case rather than a difference in principle—namely, "the inviolable sanctity of our women accompanied by strict justice and fair play for the subject races."

He had always conscientiously applied that principle.

"If people think I applied the principle wrongly let them say so, let them accuse me of ignorance, even stupidity, but not charge me with callousness and indifference or any foolish desire to assert authority in defiance of these high principles which are inseparable from British rule and upon the observance of which my fitness to hold my high office depends."

Lord Gladstone proceeded to point out the unpleasantly large number of criminal cases in which white and black had been involved during the past year, and he asked whether the machinery of the trial of such cases was all that could be desired. It was for their Legislature and their statesmen to consider whether the machinery required overhauling. He was confident that the sound common sense of the British people in Rhodesia would be guided to that conclusion which was best for the common good of the territory.

Referring to the future government of Rhodesia and the reference of the Mayor of Salisbury to the possibility of the incorporation of Rhodesia with the Union, Lord Gladstone said nothing would be done hastily. He prophesied that, if the Rhodesians continued to progress as they were doing, 1914 would mark a long step forward in the political development of Southern Rhodesia.

DISCOVERED RADIUM ORE

A Valuable Deposit Was Found at Mount Painter, Australia

The Antarctic explorer, Dr. Douglas Mawson, who is an eminent geologist, aroused excitement in local mining circles by the announcement that he had discovered a valuable deposit of radium ore at Mount Painter, in a far northern district of the State of South Australia. Dr. Mawson has since his return from England again visited the spot and issues a long report on his later investigation. He declares that there is a vast lode of radium ore at least three miles long and from a few feet to several hundred yards wide. The deposit is of high grade, and a quarter of a ton is ready for shipment. Dr. Mawson calculates the net profit per ton of ore at $1,135. He says that there are huge deposits of corundum and aluminum-bearing ore in the vicinity.

CONFESSED TO MURDER

Paul Houssard Admits Crime—Murdered Man's Wife Also Arrested

M. Paul Houssard, the well-to-do resident of Toulouse who was charged with the murder of M. Guillotin, the husband of the woman he loved, has confessed to the crime. Mme. Guillotin was arrested as an accomplice. This fact, which became known to Houssard, seems to have affected him deeply, and he sent a letter to the investigating magistrate, in which he said: "I acted in a moment of folly. From childhood I have loved Mme. Guillotin. To live with her was the ideal of my life. I wish to state that she has never been my mistress. I knew that she was unhappy. She is innocent and I am guilty. Give her her liberty and do what you like with me."

Peace often costs more than a fight

TATTERSHALL MAY GO

Archaeologists Are Up in Arms Over the Possible Destruction of the Building

There is danger that one of the greatest treasures, not only of the county, but of England, will be removed. Some four or five years ago the late Lord Fortescue sold his estate in Lincolnshire, including Tattershall Castle. When this transfer took place no anxiety was felt by those who regard Tattershall Castle as a precious national possession. Unless it were razed to the ground, a danger so remote as not to be worth contemplating, nothing, it was thought, could happen to it. The castle and church of Tattershall were built by Lord Cromwell, Lord Treasurer of England, who died in 1455. The manor, having reverted to the Crown, was granted by Edward VI. in 1551 to the Earl of Lincoln, and towards the end of the seventeenth century passed as a dowry into the Fortescue family. The most valuable and interesting relics of the castle are its magnificent fireplaces, which tell its history in heraldry, and of which there are no less than forty-eight. It is just these fireplaces which appealed to the tastes of some millionaire, and he has made a very tempting offer to the syndicate that owns the castle. "If you remove those fireplaces," said W. T. Cragg, the well-known archaeologist, "you destroy the history of the castle. The fireplace in the hall of state or audience chamber on the second floor has a row of heraldic shields and badges in circles. First the Treasurer's Purse, then St. George and the Dragon, Cromwell and Tattershall impaling Deincourt. In what was probably the state bedroom the fireplace is an exceedingly delicate architectural composition, the spandrels being carved with foliage. Alternating with the Treasurer's Purse are the shields of Bernak, Deincourt, Driby, Cromwell and Tattershall. The fourth floor has a fireplace of somewhat similar character, the shields of Deincourt, Driby, Cromwell and Bernak being separated by small Treasurer's Purses."

The Lincolnshire Archaeological Society has sent a strongly-worded protest to the commission which has care of national monuments, and has also appealed to the Prime Minister to stop the sale until a fund has been collected to outbid the American millionaire.

MISS KATHERINE ELKINS

"SWIMMING AND TEA FROM FIVE TO SEVEN"

The Paris Fashionable Set Have a New Idea for Entertaining Their Friends

The latest novelty in Parisian society is the issuing of cards bearing the inscription "Swimming and tea from five to seven," and if you happen to be in the rue de Chazelles, near Parc Monceau, between these hours, you will see a procession of smart motor cars and broughams depositing well-known clubmen and fashionably gowned women before the "piscine" kept by Dr. Guimard. The central swimming pond occupies three sides of a square, with one end roped off for children and beginners. The rest is deep water for those who dive and swim and play at waterpolo. The baths are got up in an art-nouveau style of architecture, with platforms running out over the water, supported by mosaic columns. The sides are lined with mirrors, and the pond is lit from the ceiling, which is dotted with myriad electric bulbs. Mixed bathing is permitted, or rather it is one of the attractions. The establishment cost $400,000 to equip, and is the most up-to-date "institute medical" of its kind. The bath is filled with Paris drinking water and before it reaches the pond it is boiled, filtered, and clarified with lime. So that there is small risk of anyone being poisoned, especially as it is changed twice a day. There are 301 cabins, and so great is the rush on the baths on some days that the people have to wait their turn.

DOGS IN WARFARE

They Are To Be Used in Scenting Ambushes

For the first time trained dogs are to be used by a British force on active service. Two big and strong Airedales from Major Richardson's kennels are to accompany a punitive expedition on the Indian border to scent ambushes.

The expedition, consisting of a Ghoorka regiment, is to cross the Assam border to punish the Abor tribe for the murder of Mr. Noel Williamson and his party. Much of the country through which the Ghoorkas will have to pick their way is dense scrub, and these Airedales have been trained to utter a low growl to warn their friends of the vicinity of strangers. They have the faculty of "winding" game or people over a mile away, and have been trained not to bark.

Although nearly all the Continental countries, and Japan and the United States only, count among their military units a dog corps, British military authorities have held divided views as to the utility of these four-footed scouts, some officers contending that they would by barking disclose, not only the presence of an enemy, but also warn the enemy of attack.

Major Richardson, who has devoted much care and thought to the breeding and training of war, police, and watch dogs, stated in an interview in the "Daily Telegraph" that for many reasons his choice fell upon Airedales—not the show dog of that breed, but the larger and heavier old-fashioned type, which was strong, very plucky, not apt to be afraid of anything, and not gun shy.

"The great advantage, in my opinion," said Major Richardson, "of a dog to a sentry or outpost picket is that at once the value of his services is more than doubled. A picket accompanied by a dog will never give a false alarm, and in the case of attack the approach of an enemy is noticed by the dog owing to its extraordinary keen sense of smell and sound long before the man has any definite idea of their presence.

"During the Matabele War a police patrol had turned in in their blankets for the night, leaving one of the number on guard. They had an old retriever with them. The night was very dark. The sentry saw and heard nothing, but the dog was restless and growled. Thinking something was wrong, the sentry roused his comrades. They were up, and had just prepared for an attack when a party of natives attempted to rush them. But for that dog that patrol would in all probability have been wiped out.

"It may interest you to learn," added Major Richardson, "that since the Borkum spy affair dogs patrol those fortified islands day and night."

CANNIBALS STILL EXIST

Expedition Sets Out From Oxford for Goodenough Island

A remarkable expedition, headed by a scientific expert from Oxford university has just left London for New Zealand whence it will proceed direct to British Guinea. Goodenough Island, the most northerly district in the Deutrecasteaux Archipelago, itself in the extreme south-easterly corner of British New Guinea has been selected at the headquarters of the expedition, and to this island the work of observation and exploration will be confined. The district has been chosen chiefly because of the fact that up to the present it has been absolutely untouched, notwithstanding the fact that it is the most accessible portion of Paqua. Nothing at all is known of its people, who are believed to be an intermixture of the Melanesian and Paquan tribes. It is a well-known fact that cannibalism is practised on the island very extensively. There is one mission station on the coast, and occasionally a Government official pays a visit to the island, the interior of which, however, remains unexplored. Goodenough Island is of volcanic origin, 40 miles long and 30 miles across. The highest mountain is 8,000 feet, and it is believed to be the highest island of its size in the world.

Just to prove that she doesn't lack the sense of humor, the average woman wants to be humored all the time.

HEART DISEASE CURED

Kingston Girl Saved by "Fruit-a-tives"

Heart Weakness and Heart Irritation are the common outgrowth of Indigestion. Gas is formed in the stomach and this accumulation of gas bulges out the walls of the stomach and presses against the heart. Palpitation, pain over the heart, and sometimes a feeling of smothering and dizziness, all are caused by the stomach and not because of any organic heart disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure this weak, irritated condition of the heart by curing the stomach.

91 CLERGY ST., KINGSTON, ONT.

"I suffered for some years with a dangerous form of Heart Trouble. My heart beat violently, and I had pain over the heart and down the arms. I also suffered with Constipation and Indigestion. I was treated by physicians and took many remedies, but nothing did me any good. Then I began taking "Fruit-a-tives", and this medicine completely cured me of all the heart trouble, constipation and indigestion, and gave me back perfect health." (Miss) MABLE TODD.

FLYING MACHINES

The Question of Automatic Stability Was Under Discussion

The most striking feature of the discussion on flying, for which the mathematical and engineering sections of the British Association joined forces, was the attack made upon the notion of automatic stability. At the present time a great many designers of aeroplanes are working at this problem. It is generally regarded as the next great line of advance in the construction of flying machines. Yet both Professor Petavel and Sir William White derided the idea.

Dr. W. N. Shaw, the well-known meteorologist, discussed the difficulty of wind—a difficulty which he thought could only be overcome by greater speed. This, however, would not get over the trouble of "holes in the air," into which aeroplanes fall every now and then, with results greatly disconcerting to their pilots. Meteorology was trying to discover what these holes in the air were. They might be due to variations in the velocity of wind.

Professor Petavel threw doubt upon the possibility of obtaining automatic stability, and even said he did not think it was necessary or desirable. The tricycle was stable, and the bicycle unstable, but almost all riders preferred the latter. Any mechanism worked by gusts of wind for ensuring automatic stability would probably be dangerous in other ways. With this view Sir William White agreed. He said he felt an instinctive distrust of automatic appliances. In his opinion there was nothing like human power directed by a strong will and careful observations.

Professor Troughton looked forward to the day when aeroplanes would be as big as Atlantic liners, and could afford to disregard the small holes in the air that had been mentioned.

CHEAPER TELEGRAMS

Germany Has Now Introduced the Letter Telegram System

From now on the Germans in all the great cities and important towns will be able to send a telegram for about one twentieth of a cent a word, deliverable by the first post next morning. At present the telegraphic rate throughout the empire is a cent a word with a minimum of about 12 cents. This minimum will be retained, but otherwise the innovation represents a remarkable cheapening of the telegraphic service. Probably the new system will be most freely used by the business world, which will be in a position to write its business letters at a very cheap rate after ordinary postal hours, with the knowledge that the recipient will get them first thing in the morning. As matters now stand letters for distant places must be posted at an early hour in the afternoon if they are to reach their destination next morning. The hours for handing letter-telegrams to the telegraph office are between 7 p.m. and midnight.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

TRIPOLI IS BOMBARDED

Two Attacks Are Made by the Italian Fleet.

Shelling Began on Tuesday Afternoon and Continued Until Dusk, After Which It Ceased For the Night—It Was Resumed Yesterday Morning—Fortifications Have Been Destroyed—Response Is Weak.

Djerba, Tunis, Oct. 5.—Tripoli has been bombarded twice by the Italian fleet. The first shot was fired shortly after three o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Shelling was resumed early yesterday morning after a quiet night.

There was a steady but slow fire from the warships until dusk Tuesday evening, and shots also came from the forts in the town.

The French steamer Tafana took a delegation from Djerba out to the scene of hostilities. Among the party was the French consul-general, M. Leon, who made several unsuccessful attempts to land. The Tafana was stopped by the cruiser Varase when about two miles from shore. She was ordered to return, but she remained for more than an hour, even creeping in closer to the blockaded town.

From the distance the white buildings of Tripoli could be plainly seen and the whole field of operations was unfolded before the eyes of the watchers. The officers of the Varase kindly explained that the battle had been delayed because Admiral Augrey, commander of the Italian fleet, had received a request from the Tripoli garrison for another day of grace after the expiration of the three days' notice to surrender. The admiral gave the garrison a few extra hours.

The battleship Benedetto Brin and the armored cruisers Giuseppe Garibaldi and Francesco Ferrucio drew up in line opposite the harbor. There were no small craft in the battle line and the Varase stood off to keep back intruders.

There was no sign of life in the city, which appeared as though deserted, but the Turkish flag flew from the castle and forts. The first shots were directed toward Charchatti fort, and later Kerkereche fort was shelled.

No sooner did the first shells burst over Tripoli than the garrison seemed to awake. It returned the fire with vigor and energy. A heavy cannonade was kept up on both sides for a few minutes, and then firing became desultory. So far as could be seen no warship was hit.

Vice-Admiral Faravelli, at 4 o'clock, ordered his ships to cease firing to permit the town to surrender, but no sign of surrender was given, and after the lapse of a few minutes, the ships began again. This time great havoc was wrought.

Fortifications were razed to the ground, the forts suffered severely, the lighthouse to the northwest was destroyed by shells from the Garibaldi. There was no means of knowing what the loss of life was in Tripoli. But ample opportunity was given to the defenders to escape.

When the Tafana left the scene of operations, no landing had been attempted on the part of the Italians and it was feared that during the night the town would be pillaged by nomad Arabs, who had been hovering in the vicinity for some days. The admiral knew of the hasty removal of arms and ammunition into the interior.

Again, at an early hour yesterday morning, the first division of the Italian fleet under Admiral Faravelli, resumed the bombardment. The Turkish garrison still occupied a position behind the forts and responded with a few shells, which fell short.

Rome, Oct. 5.—The bombardment of Tripoli was resumed yesterday morning with the object of completing the destruction of the batteries. Up to six o'clock last evening no official confirmation of the surrender of Tripoli could be obtained.

London, Oct. 5.—A Rome despatch from Tripoli says that it is believed that the garrison has suffered very heavy losses and that the governor is wounded. It appears that even after the demolition of the forts the Turkish gunners continued to serve such guns as were available.

It became necessary for the warships to train their guns upon the ruins. Several private houses were destroyed by fire, but none were struck by shells. The town has been entirely deserted by the inhabitants.

Deadlock at Sublime Porte.

Constantinople, Oct. 5.—Political difficulties within the capital are multiplying and it seems impossible to form a Cabinet. Members of the committee of union and progress are unwilling to take office, as they do not wish to assume responsibility for recent events, while the elder statesmen refuse to undertake the task of Government unless the committee retires from the field and dissolves.

A deadlock practically has been reached; and the only solution to serve the best interests of the country is held to be dissolution of the committee and the ending of the war without delay on the best terms that can be obtained.

ASKS FOR TOLERATION

Rev. Henry S. Haigh Strikes Keynote at Congress.

President of Wesleyan Conference Says the Present Social Revolt Is Against Privilege Which Is the Foe of Service—Whole Address Breathes Liberalism — Criticism Is Search For Truth—An Inspiring Scene.

Toronto, Oct. 5.—It was really a thanksgiving service at the Metropolitan Church yesterday when the fourth Ecumenical Methodist Conference opened its first session. There were thanksgiving and praise on the one hand, and prayer and exhortation for greater efficiency on the other. One might almost have said that a Wesleyan revival had burst over the gathering of all peoples from all climes. Never was the note of unity more definitely struck in Methodism, and at the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, when people from the four quarters of the globe, from the islands of the sea and the Orient gathered around the rail.

Rev. Henry Haigh, president of the Wesleyan Conference, gave the lesson. It was the story of the harvest; the harvest was ready. The sermon was a call to work, it breathed liberalism and toleration. Criticism was the spirit of seeking for truth. The preacher called for greater brotherhood among mankind, and said the revolt against the social system was against privilege that was separate from character and service. Co-operation must supplant competition, and the church must show wider sympathies.

Fittingly, the afternoon service was a manifestation of the spirit of brotherhood. The delegates were welcomed by four representatives of different branches of the church in America, and four from Great Britain replied. Rev. Dr. Briggs was first, and in well-chosen words he bade the visitors welcome, and told them in picturesque fashion of the country they had come to. The speakers for the southern conferences paid tribute to the memory and worth of Britain's great Queen, and Sir Robert Perks spoke glowingly of the present ruler of the Empire. The conference was advised to get down to work. The delegates had not traveled far for nothing, and a plea was made by Mr. R. W. Essex for consideration of spiritual rather than material things. "Let us deal with the mystical—the spiritual," he said.

Now that the conference has organzied and opened its sessions, hard discussions will follow. To-day will be devoted to Ecumenical Methodism.

Coming of Connaughts.

London, Oct. 5.—Elaborate preparations have been made for the sailing of Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, to take up their residence in Canada, on Friday of this week.

Special arrangements to ensure their comfort and convenience while on board the Empress of Ireland have been made. The entire alley on the chief deck has been reserved for the exclusive use of the royal party and suite. The royal party will, however, dine in the general dining saloon.

King George has ordered that the royal standard shall be flown from the Empress of Ireland at the moment of the duke's arrival on the ship.

Enormous quantities of luggage have already been moved forward to Liverpool, including the duke's own horses and equipment and his motor cars.

H. R. H. the Princess Patricia is leaving London almost immediately for Sweden to visit her sister, the Crown Princess of Sweden. She is arranging to arrive in Ottawa some time before Christmas.

Woman Was Pardoned.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Responding to a woman's appeal for immediate release or the privilege of remaining in jail several months after her sentence expires in order to escape the hardships which surely would follow the termination of her imprisonment in the dead of winter in Alaska, President Taft has pardoned Lottie Burns, convicted at Nome of selling liquor without a license. Her sentence of one year would have expired in February, but she will be released at once with the opportunity to gather food and fuel for the winter.

Government Dredge Adrift.

Halifax, Oct. 5.—The Government dredge New Brunswick is adrift in the Bay of Fundy, if not sunk to the bottom or piled upon the coast. She was abandoned yesterday afternoon while being towed from Digby, N.S., to this port. Three tugs left Digby with her early yesterday and ran into a very heavy southwester. In the afternoon they found it impossible in the great seas to make port and the crew of the dredge was taken off. The tugs came here. The dredge is said to be worth $35,000.

Steamer Burned at Sea.

Batavia, Dutch East Indies, Oct. 5.—The Dutch steamer Ixion, bound from this port for Liverpool, has been destroyed by fire near Engano, an island off the west coast of Sumatra.

The steamer's crew, numbering 25, took to the boats, but have not yet been reported as having landed on any point off the Sumatra coast.

FRENCH ARE LOYAL.

Earl Grey Pays Compliment to People of Quebec.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—His Excellency Earl Grey was tendered a banquet at the Windsor Hotel last night by the leading citizens of Montreal. Some 500 business and professional men attended. The most notable speech of the evening was made by the guest of honor, who on rising to respond to the toast to himself was received with rounds of applause.

He paid a compliment to the Canadians of French descent, so largely in the majority in this province.

"It will be vain for the minority of French descent, should they even desire to do so, to dream of ever establishing a racial ascendancy on this side of the Atlantic; but it is equally obvious that the right they possess to regulate their own development, unchecked by any outside interference, a right which will be enjoyed by the Province of Quebec and by every self-governing portion of the British Empire, so long as the British Empire endures, will always be respected," he said.

"As Governor-General I have no politics. I am the constitutional mouthpiece of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and of Mr. R. L. Borden the next. But as Governor-General I have a standing quarrel with anyone whose policy it is to stir up racial differences."

The speaker added that he regarded the inhabitants of the Province of Quebec as the most loyal subjects of the crown.

Another Robbery.

Hamilton, Oct. 5.—Another mysterious robbery, involving the sum of $450, has been put up to the local police for solution.

John McDonough, 133 Young street, is the loser of the sum mentioned. Preparatory to removing to Chicago, McDonough had sold his furniture, and while it was being taken away from the Young street house yesterday morning, under the supervision of Mrs. McDonough, the money disappeared.

The money was at first thought to have been misplaced, but when it could not be found after diligent search, the police were notified, and Sergt. Bainbridge, with Constables Blakely, Herkimer and Holland, were sent to the house to investigate the matter.

The officers were unable to find any trace of the money, and after carefully enquiring into the circumstances, it was decided to arrest a man named Cohen, who had been employed to remove the furniture from the house. Cohen maintains his innocence, and no clue to the whereabouts of the money has been obtained.

Ready to Resign.

Ottawa, Oct. 5.—The Laurier Cabinet sat till a late hour last night and will resign to-day or to-morrow, if Earl Grey is back from Montreal in time. Mr. Borden will in all likelihood be sent for Friday afternoon, but will announce his Cabinet several days after that.

The announcement when made will break every slate that has been made to date. At least half a dozen of the men now prominently mentioned for portfolios will not get them. It appears to be assured that the militia portfolio will go to a civilian.

Hector McInnes, K.C., of Halifax, and W. T. White of Toronto, who arrived yesterday and were in conference with Mr. Borden, are regarded as sure for the justice and finance portfolios.

Elections Were Peaceful.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Assurances from American consuls throughout Mexico, the latest coming yesterday from Monterey, that the Mexican Presidential and vice-presidential elections were characterized by the utmost good order and feeling, make the officials very skeptical as to the accuracy of the report that Gen. Reyes is about to head another junta at San Antonio, Texas, to foment a revolutionary movement against Madero when he assumes office.

The department has no word from any of its agents of any such project, but the Department of Justice and the War Department are fully prepared to enforce the neutrality laws with the utmost vigor, if any attempt is made to hatch a revolution on Texas soil.

Smothered In Coal Dust.

Freeland, Pa., Oct. 5.—Five men, all foreigners with families, lost their lives at a Lehigh Valley Coal Co. mine at Drifton Tuesday night in a most unusual accident. Two other men had narrow escapes.

The laborers were working on a huge culm bank, repairing a drag line attached to an apparatus that carries refuse from the mines to the top of the culm heap. Near them was a large wooden stack, connected with an air shaft running into the mine. The stack suddenly collapsed, and the fine coal refuse started to run into the mine, opening like quicksand, drew the men into a vortex, precipitated them 70 feet into the mine, and covered them with tons of dust.

McGill Freshmen Lectured.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—When the McGill freshmen, charged with obstructing the police and interfering with traffic Tuesday night, pleaded guilty yesterday morning, Recorder Weir advised them to stick to the plow and the snow shovel and not to delve into the higher arts.

Sentence was postponed till to-day to see whether the students' council will impose sufficient punishment without a court sentence.

Still Favors Reciprocity.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—An interesting visitor to Montreal this week is Rev. J. J. McCaskill, the Presbyterian clergyman of St. John, N.B., whose action in taking the stump for reciprocity during the recent campaign brought strong criticism from his presbytery and a request for his resignation from the trustees of his church.

Rev. Mr. McCaskill is not taking his church difficulties seriously, and despite the trouble, which his position caused, continues to discuss politics as freely as ever. He still believes in reciprocity.

"What was it moved you to this breach with your church and associates?" Mr McCaskill was asked.

"Simply," he said, "because the importance to the country of the issue of free trade in natural products dwarfs any question of the personal relation of a clergyman to the ecclesiastic organization or of a pastor to his congregation.

"The Presbytery has criticized me for my action in the matter. Their criticism might be just if the issue were not so serious."

Storm on Lake Ontario.

Toronto, Oct. 5.—All day yesterday Lake Ontario was agitated by one of the heaviest gales of the year, which paralyzed all navigation. A strong westerly wind was in evidence early in the morning and as the day progressed it steadily increased in velocity, till late in the afternoon the wind was blowing at the rate of 58 miles an hour and showed no signs of abating.

None of the passenger boats with the exception of the Macassa made a regular trip, and very few tugs or other boats attempted to weather the storm.

ALLEGE ECCENTRICITY

Lawyer For Pinkertons Outlines Their Defence.

Siegfried Bush, Formerly Russell's Secretary, Is Chief Witness For the Defendants, and Says That His Employer Had an Idea He Was Being Plotted Against — Chief Carpenter and Detective Gorman Testify.

Montreal, Oct. 5.—An outline of the case for the defence in the now famous Russell suit against the Pinkertons was given by Mr. Geoffrion yesterday when he showed that the efforts of counsel for the Pinkertons were directed towards proving that there had been sufficient eccentricity in Mr. Russell's actions to justify his friends in taking the steps they had and in seriously discussing his sanity. These steps, he claimed, were not to have Mr. Russell incarcerated in an asylum, as the plaintiff alleged, but merely to have him examined as to his mental condition.

In support of this the main witness called was Siegfried Bush, Mr. Russell's ex-secretary, who stated that on various trips with Mr. Russell, the latter seemed to have been under the impression that he was being plotted against and that he was continuously talking about plots against him and taking all sorts of precautions to avoid being poisoned or knocked on the head.

Chief Carpenter was on the stand nearly all day, his evidence occupying almost the entire afternoon session. Mr. Greenshields, whom Mr. Russell suspected of being behind the series of alleged plots, on account of a million-dollar land suit which Mr. Russell has against him, was on the stand in the morning and denied all connection with the case.

The testimony of Chief Carpenter and of Detective Gorman, who was also on the stand, cleared up somewhat the question of the mysterious telegrams produced at the opening of the trial. The telegrams referring to the revolver and taking "the bullets from the gun," addressed to "G." were in reference to the gun given Russell by Carpenter and were sent to Detective Gorman, who was sleeping near Mr. Russell's room to protect him against supposed conspirators after Chief Carpenter had been brought to believe that Russell was mentally deranged.

Should Pay Wives.

London, Oct. 5.—That husbands should pay wages to their wives is the newest proposition submitted to the Yorkshire Women's Liberal Association.

Many women made bitter complaint at a meeting of the association that wives do not even know how much their husbands earn. These women said that in the marriage service husbands promised to endow their wives with all their worldly goods, yet fail to do so and do not intend to do so while they are promising to.

A delegate at the meeting proposed to substitute in the marriage service the words, "the husband shall render unto the wife due benevolence and also the wife unto the husband." The delegates generally agreed that wives should be paid. The association will ask Parliament to make a law providing how a wife's wages shall be fixed and set aside by her husband.

The world applauds a woman who forgives an erring husband, but it gives a man the laugh who forgives an erring wife.

DAIRYING LAWS WELL OBSERVED

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 4.—The annual report of Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Chief Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, on the work of his department, contains much valuable information on dairying, extension of markets, fruit shipments, and cold storage works carried on under the supervision of the Department of Agriculture.

In his reference to Dairying Mr Ruddick states that the laws relating to the manufacture and sale of dairy products are well observed, on the whole. The inspectors of the department found it necessary to prosecute only three traders for selling and two for manufacturing butter containing an excess over the legal amount of water, and two cheesemakers for stuffing new cheese with old and worthless curd, during the whole year. In each case a conviction was secured.

Regarding the extension of markets, the report states that the experiments conducted in the export of Canadian peaches has opened up a new market for this fruit in Great Britain.

Greater interest is being taken in the cold storage work of the department, and during the year there have been increased demands for the plans and specifications furnished by the department for the erection of cold storages throughout the country. Trial shipments of apples in cold storage have evidenced that apples can be shipped with safety any time during the winter months.

SCALP ITCH

How to Remove Quickly

Scalp itch is invariably caused by a microbe called dandruff. He is a persistent fellow and works while you sleep and when you are awake. He feeds on the vitality of the hair roots until he has cleared the patch and you are bald-headed.

Parisian Sage will kill him and stop itching of the scalp in a few hours. Parisian Sage is the most pleasant and vigorating hair dressing in the world and the sworn foe to dandruff. Fifty cents a large bottle. Sold by your druggist who guarantees it. See that the Girl with the Auburn Hair is on each package.

GRIM JUSTICE IN CHINA

(London Standard.)

The summary methods of justice which prevail in China and the grim spectacle afforded by the carrying out of the death penalty for such crimes as piracy are graphically presented in the following account of the seizure by pirates of Mr. W. J. Murray, a chemist, of Hong Kong, and the subsequent capture and beheading of the pirates by the authorities:—

"It is just three months," said Mr Murray, "since I set sail in a Chinese junk, with ten other Europeans, to a village some 40 miles along the coast called Yang-Tse, where I had some business that required immediate attention. Progress in a junk is naturally slow, and we had some eight miles to accomplish and dusk had fallen when, on rounding a small island, we were surprised to see a couple of boats coming toward us. The occupants, 30 in number, were all armed to the teeth, and were making gesticulations, whilst the man in the bow ordered our men to stand by. They promptly deserted us by diving overboard and swimming away.

"Seeing it was useless to put up a fight, and having regard to the fact that three of our number were French women, we decided to surrender. We were taken in tow by the boats to a place some four miles off our track and then robbed of practically everything we possessed and left to reach Yang-Tse the best way we could.

"On arriving at Yang-Tse we immediately reported the matter to the chief mandarin, who ordered all the junks in harbor to be filled with soldiers and the island to be completely surrounded. In the early morning the soldiers effected a landing not without some trouble, nearly 4 of them being killed or wounded and 21 of the pirates were captured. These were brought immediately to Yang-Tse and taken before the mandarin, who after hearing the evidence, ordered them to be publicly executed on the morrow, and the inhabitants of the villages and towns round about to be notified.

"At 4 o'clock on the following morning the great bell at the prison commenced to toll, and all made their way to the seashore, to the point where the pirates landed, and in full sight of the island where they were captured. The population of the place had practically all arrived when we got to the scene, being formed up in a long line with their backs to the sea. After a wait of some twenty minutes the mandarin with his suite arrived and proceeded to read his verdict and sentence upon the pirates to the crowd. This being done, he despatched his orderly to the governor of the prison demanding the men to be sent to the place of execution immediately.

"On their arrival it was seen that the men came in one single line guarded by a soldier on each side. They were not bound, but walked with heads bent down. Halting immediately in front of the mandarin and some twenty yards from the crowd, they extended to an interval of some two paces. The soldiers then turned and marched away, leaving them in charge of the headsman and his assistant. The priest having finished his chanting, at the signal given by the mandarin the headsman proceeded to his task.

"The pirates stood with their backs to the sea. As the executioner approached the first man he ordered him to turn round and kneel on the sand, drawing a large double-edged sword from his belt at the same moment. At a nod from the mandarin he seized the man's pigtail firmly in his left hand and pulled the head forward, and after making a small nick in the neck, as a sort of preliminary, gave his sword a quick twirl, and the head was off. He waited for a nod from the mandarin before he proceeded to decapitate another, and so on until all were beheaded. The pirates did not flinch in any way, only a perceptible shudder could be seen in the body when the headsman made the preliminary nick.

"Poles, with the heads affixed to them, were then fixed into the ground, and left to the gaze of every one for ten days. The bodies of the men were taken and flung into a pit, no service of any sort being held. There was great feasting and rejoicing after the execution, the day being given up to pleasure, the mandarin declaring it to be a public holiday. Relics of the pirates' clothing and their possessions were sold in the afternoon by the headsman, the whole of their belongings being part of his fee. This headsman is said to hold the record in China, having beheaded no fewer than 500 persons in a year."

AWKWARD SITUATION IN P. E. ISLAND

There is an awkward situation in Liberal party circles in Prince Edward Island. Rightly or wrongly, an idea prevailed some time ago that the Liberal Provincial Government intended to bring on a general election, although the Legislature had another year of life by law. It did not bring on the contest, and will probably not do so now, after the Conservative gain in the federal election. In that case it will be necessary to hold two bye-elections, one for the vacancy created by the appointment of Premier Hazzard to the Bench, and the other by the acceptance of Mr. Palmer of the office of attorney-general. There are thirty members in the Island Legislature; fourteen are Liberals, fourteen are Conservatives. If the Liberals re-elect their attorney-general and a successor to Judge Hazzard they will have a majority of one with the Speaker in the chair. If the Conservatives win the two seats they will control the Legislature with a majority of one, the Speaker in the chair. If both sides elect one, the Liberals will lose, because with the speaker in the chair they will in a minority of one. At the last general election the Liberals captured seventeen seats and the Conservatives thirteen.

IN ELECTRIC HOTEL CURRENT DOES ALL

The interesting news comes from Paris that an hotel will be built there in which all the domestic service will be performed by electricity. If the promoters of the scheme keep their promises everything will be done by electricity, except the guests' payment of their bills. Even then they can give the cashier a shock by refusing to pay.

There will be no waiters, no bell hops, no coatboys, no chambermaids, and consequently no tips. If a guest arrives home at 3 a.m., all he will have to do is to touch a button, which will turn an eelctric sun, and then he can say to his wife:

"My dear, you're really getting lazy. Look at me. I'm up and dressed."

If he feels that he needs a cocktail, he can touch another button. One touch brings a martini, two whisky, three a Manhattan, four vermouth, five an ambulance. In answer, a dumb-waiter rises through the floor either to bring the desired bracer, or, when need be, to lower the guest to the ambulance.

The hotel promoters lay much stress on the fact that all their waiters are dumb. In place of the ordinary Swiss who only stand and wait, instead of running and serving, there will be automatons run by electricity and guaranteed not to spill soup down your back or creamed asparagus in your lap. The dining table will be decorated with flowers raised by intensive electrical culture in both winter and summer, for there will be no seasons in this hotel, push a button and you're warmer than when you see another fellow walking with the "only dear one on earth," push another button and you're colder than when the other fellow frigidly asks, "What the deuce are you doing here?"

One of the features of the hotel will be an electric orchestra, in which all kinds of stringed instruments will apparently play of their own accord.

The inventor, a Frenchman named Giorgia Knap who has spent years experimenting with the various devices, asserts that they are now all absolutely perfect, and has formed a company under the name "Societe des Hotels Electriques" for the purpose of building electric hotels in every big city throughout the world. —From the New York World.

FIND HOLY GHOSTERS STARVING AT SEA

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The Red Star Line Steamship Lapland, which arrived last night from Antwerp, reported having spoken on Wednesday to the "Holy Ghost and Us Society" yacht Coronet and having supplied it with provisions. It was in the afternoon and the Lapland was 900 miles from Sandy Hook when she sighted the Coronet, tossing on a heavy sea. As the Lapland approached the Coronet ran up signals to say "We are short of provisions; starving."

The liner was slowed down, and as it was impossible for those on the yacht to lower a boat, Capt. Doxrud ordered one of his own overboard. The Coronet was hove to and the sea was rough, for the vessel had just emerged from a gale that had retarded her progress for hours.

It took some time provisioning the small boat for the captain was generous. He sent to the Coronet 300 pounds of beef, 60 pounds each of sugar and corned pork, 48 loaves of bread, 52 pounds of smoked beef, 75 pounds of corned beef, 12 cheeses, and 4 bags of potatoes.

The Lapland's boat ran up to windward and then drifted down until about three ship lengths away. Then working to leeward it went alongside. It took much more time to transfer the goods, but within two hours the Lapland was again on its course. Captain Doxrud offered to take passengers and crew off the Coronet, but the offer was refused.

DESPERATE FIGHT OF RAILWAY STRIKERS

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 4.—Illinois Central Railroad strikers and strike-breakers, the former reinforced by citizens, fought a pitched battle at McComb City, Miss., this afternoon, as a result of which many persons are known to be wounded, perhaps half a dozen fatally, and it is believed that several were killed outright. The trouble followed clashes between strikebreakers and citizens in several other points in Mississippi.

As a result of the trouble in several portions of Mississippi, troops were ordered out by the Governor, and conditions are serious. Martial law has been declared in McComb City.

MARIE CORELLI GIVES VERY HOT ANSWER

LONDON, Sept. 30—The Rev. R. J. Campbell, minister of the City Temple, who is soon going on a preaching tour of America, has greatly wounded the susceptibilities of Marie Corelli.

In a sermon Mr. Campbell referred to Miss Corelli's latest novel, "The Life Everlasting," which he said was marred by a certain strain of hard, bitter, intolerant, unsympathetic insistance on human depravity and culpability," adding:

"Miss Corelli seems to have beene unfortunate in the people she has met. They seem to be scoundrels, hypocrites, devils, voluptuaries."

Miss Corelli dipped her pen in vitriol to answer. She charges Mr. Campbell with libel, slander, wicked falsehood and presumption, and says that he has put himself on a "platform of holy platitudes," and concludes:

"If such action is a form of the Higher Christianity the reverend gentleman preaches, I pray God to save me from its teachings."

CUBS PICK GIANTS.

The Chicago Cubs are confident that Christy Mathewson will again ride rough-shod over the Athletics in the world's championship series.

"No team which hasn't faced Matty at close intervals has any chance to beat him," forms the bulk of Cubs' analysis upon one phase of the result. They are not so confident about other Giant slabmen. Neither do they believe that Giant base-runners can run amuck over Thomas, Livingston or Lapp. Most of Chance's people profess to believe that Chief Meyers will be the turning point of the series; that if the chief holds his balance and doesn't flutter, McGraw's team should win. But many of Chicago's team figure that the Athletics attack will upset the Indian and put the Giants to rout.

When informed of this opinion, McGraw's rejoinder was simply this: "If Meyers was the only worry I had to carry in this series I could claim four of the first five games now. I regard him to-day as one of the steadiest and most dependable catchers in the business. If it's up to how the Chief acts when we meet Mack's team, the fight is already won."

A BASEBALL CONVERSATION.

(From the Indianapolis News.)

A letter received in this city tells of a conversation overheard at a baseball game in New York recently. The principals were a young man and a young woman.

"Do you know," said he, "a game of baseball reminds me of a household. There is the plate, the pitcher, the fouls, and the flies."

"It reminds me more of courtship and marriage," said the young woman, "with the diamond, the coaching, the strikes, the men going out and their difficulty in getting home."

BOXING

KAUFMAN AND WHITE HOPE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Al Kaufman, the California heavyweight, who was offered a sum of money by Hugh McIntosh to go to Australia and engage in five battles in that country this coming winter, but turned it down so that he could get on bouts with the big fellows at one of the local clubs, has finally been matched up for a fight. He was signed up by Jack McGuigan to-day to meet Billy Bass, the heavy-weight of Norfolk, Va., for six rounds at a show of the National Athletic Club of Philadelphia on Saturday evening, Oct. 7. Bass recently won the white hope tournament held in Philadelphia. He is 22 years of age, six feet tall and weighs 2? pounds. Philadelphia Jack O'Brien is boxing with Bass and getting him in condition for the contest.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—Young Saylor, of Indianapolis, gave "Battling" Nelson, the former lightweight champion of the world, one of the worst defeats of his life in twelve rounds of interesting boxing at the Armory Athletic Association to-night. Nelson met a man who was his superior at his own game of infighting.

In the first round the men were in a constant clinch, with both working body punches with good effect. At the third round the men were broken apart at the clinches and Saylor met every rush of the "Battler" with swift left and right swings. Nelson landed few clean punches. Saylor had every round and was given the decision.

FLYNN AND WALLACE.

Jim Flynn, the heavyweight of Pueblo, Colo., who administered such a terrible beat to Carl Morris, the Oklahoma white hope, in a recent bout at Madison Square Garden, New York, has just signed articles of agreement calling for a fifteen-round bout with Harry Wallace, the Kansas City heavyweight, to take place at Pueblo, Colo., the latter part of next week.

Once you stop taking medicine into the stomach and get the healing oils and pure balsam of Catarrhozone at work you can be sure of quick and lasting cure for nose colds, catarrh, weak lungs, bronchitis, and speakers' sore throat.

13 YEARS OF CATARRH CURED.

"As Catarrhozone has cured me of a Catarrhal Cough and Asthma that lasted thirteen years, I feel I can honestly recommend it. I really used all kinds of medicine, but Catarrhozone was the only one that did any real good. I am entirely cured—have no cough, no bad breathing spells, not a sign of a cold or catarrh about me. But I will always occasionally use 'Catarrhozone.' I prize it so highly." Mrs. E. L. Osgood, Johnson, P. O., Ont.

TREATING FOREST AS A CROP

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Ten thousand heads of New York families, 500 retail dealers in 50 lines and several hundred farmers of the Pennsylvania State grange have combined in an association here to eliminate the middle man and lower the high cost of living. While the Pennsylvania State grange is completing negotiations with the association this week to handle their output, a small army of canvassers is enrolling hundreds of other families in the movement and officers of the association are negotiating with the farmers of New York State to handle their products also. The association plans to act as a clearing house between producer and consumer, dividing between them the profits of the various middle men through whose hands food commodities have hitherto passed. In the case of some farm products, the association finds that six middlemen or brokers have been reaping profits before the products reach the consumer. The 500 dealers in almost every line of retail trade are members of the association and receive their supplies, because of such membership, at lower than market rates. The heads of families are associate members.

The 500 dealers are divided into seven groups. Each group is required to pay into the coffers of the association a percentage of its gross receipts, varying from six per cent for grocers to fifteen per cent. for druggists. The fund thus created is divided into six parts, four of which are put aside for distribution among the consumers, one part being spent for advertising, and one part for administration and operating expenses.

Each associate member, or head of a family receives a coupon from the dealer whenever he makes a purchase, setting forth the amount of goods bought. At the end of stated periods the consumer surrenders his coupons to the association to serve as a basis for computing the rebate which he will receive from the profit fund. It is the plan to reduce the cost of living by these refunds rather than by charging the consumer lower than market prices in the first instance.

The association has been canvassing the apartment houses and residence district for associate members during the past seven days. Within this period they have procured nearly 5,000 of their 10,000 associate members. Patrick Egan, former United States minister to Chili, who is the vice-president of the association, predicted to-day that the cost of living would be materially reduced through the organization. A part of the programme includes a campaign against the manipulation of market prices of farm products by storing produce in refrigerating plants.

WALT MASON'S CORNER

I'm glad there is one day for resting, one day the tired man owns, when he may cease his weary questing for bones, and still more bones. I'm glad to see the people SUNDAY wending their way to church and pew, to hear a tale of love unending and grace for me and you. It rests one's soul to hear the ringing of church bells here and there; to hear the organ nobly flinging its music to the air. The tiresome talk of trade's unspoken, store window shades are down; stillness, soothing and unbroken, is resting on the town, save where some ancient dame is crooning a hymn she used to sing, before her life had reached its nooning, and love had taken wing; save where the children, strange to sorrow, find Sunday dull and gray, and wait a longing for to-morrow, when they can run and play. I'm glad there is one day of resting, when wheels have ceased to hum, and all the bartering and jesting and greedy lips are dumb. One blessed day, one day in seven, a boon to have and hold! One day to think of hymn and heaven, forgetting guile and gold.

ASSAULT CASE POSTPONED.

The case of George Perry, who is accused of assaulting and occasioning grievous bodily harm to James Davidson was enlarged until to-morrow. Perry in the meantime is out on bail. Mr. Carnew appeared for the accused.

"NOTHING DOING."

At 10.30 last evening two officers of the police force answered a call to Alexander Street, it being reported that tramps were in a barn. There was no sign of the knights of the road when the officers arrived, although they made a diligent search.

MISCHIEVOUS BOYS.

An official of the C. N. O. R. reported to the police that some boys had been tampering with the switches near the company's railway bridge over the river here. These switches have only just been placed in position and were not locked. If the guilty parties are detected they will no doubt be prosecuted and the law very properly is severe for such an offence.

VAGRANT BOYS REMANDED.

This morning about 2.30 two boys, named Moran Weese and Wm. Donough, were arrested on a charge of vagrancy. They are about 15 years of age and were in the vicinity of the G.T.R. station when taken care of. The boys, who have been in trouble previously, do not appear to have benefitted by the advice given them. The magistrate this morning remanded the accused to jail until Monday.

FACTORY BURGLARIZED.

The Thompson Company's factory on Mill Street, near the Cannifton Road, was broken into last night. An entrance was effected by the breaking of a light of glass in the rear portion of the premises. An officer of the police force in making an inspection of the premises discovered the pane of glass broken out. It is thought that boys were responsible for the act and the guilty parties will in all probability be detected. Nothing was apparently taken from the premises.

FIRE IN PRINTING OFFICE.

In a store room in the rear part of the Ontario printing office, where a large quantity of old papers, etc., were stored, fire broke out at a few minutes before eight o'clock this morning. The brigade was soon upon the scene after an alarm was sounded and confined the flames to that portion of the building where they originated. The loss sustained was not serious and is covered by insurance. How the fire originated is not known. Had it broken out at an early hour in the morning there might have been a serious blaze.

MARCHMONT HOME.

A paragraph was published in some of the daily papers yesterday, which seemed to convey the impression that the work of the above Home was about to cease. As this is not the case, we have been asked to publish the following statement: The work of bringing out and placing boys and girls will go on as it has done since the Home was established in 1870. The Home will become the property of the Manchester and Salford Homes, and they will continue sending out their children as they have been doing since 1886. There will be no change in the character or management of the work. Mr. Wallace, who has been connected with the Home for the past 29 years, will still continue to act as Honorary Superintendent.

RAN INTO AN ENGINE.

At a few minutes before six o'clock last evening an accident occurred on Pinnacle street near Victoria Avenue which might have been fatal in its results. The pilot engine on the line of the Grand Junction Railway was hauling a few empty cars up Pinnacle street when, near Victoria Avenue, a man driving a horse came down the street and deliberately ran into the engine. The occupant was thrown out and some damage was done to the buggy and harness. The occupant of the vehicle was Robert Gibson, who resides in Tyendinaga. He was in such an intoxicated condition that it was almost impossible to get from him his name. The police were called to the scene, with the result that Gibson was locked up. Fortunately he escaped injury. This morning Gibson appeared before the Magistrate and admitted that he was drunk. Being an old offender, he was fined $10, which he paid. The lesson he received will probably prove beneficial to him.

TOWNSHIP COUNCILLOR DEAD.

Mr. George Peacock, of Faraday township, succumbed to an attack of typhoid fever on Thursday last. The deceased was a member of the township council and was very highly respected.

BESSEMER IRON MINES.

The iron mines at Bessemer are being opened again. Mr. Marshall, the manager, is very optimistic regarding the future outlook, and says that they will have several hundred men employed in a short time.

CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION.

A Conservative convention will be held in Madoc on Thursday, Oct. 26, for the election of officers and the selection of a candidate for North Hastings at the next Provincial election.

FINE EQUIPMENT.

The C. N. R. open their new line between Toronto and Trenton on Monday next. Parlor cars will be attached to all trains. A dining car will leave Trenton daily on the west bound evening train.

DID GOOD IN SECRET.

The Secretary-Treasurer of the National Sanitarium Association writes: "Will you kindly acknowledge through your paper the receipt of a contribution of one dollar from a friend in your city to the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives. As the donor did not give any name we are unable to make acknowledgment direct."

NEW RIFLE RANGES.

Yesterday afternoon the rifle ranges, which have been constructed just east of the city limits, were formally taken off the hands of Mr. Thomas Manley, who had the contract for building the same. Captains Clarke and Hughes, of the Divisional Staff, represented the Militia Department, and Col. Stewart, of the XVth Regiment, was present. The ranges will no doubt prove to be of great benefit.

SUSPICIOUS VISITORS.

Mr. H. Wrightmyer, who resides on Mill Street, reports to the police that during last night he was awakened by a noise, and, looking out of a window, saw two parties in the yard strike a match. The parties in the yard made a hasty retreat upon being disturbed. The object of their visit about the premises can only be conjectured.

BASE BALL WAS PROSPEROUS.

A meeting of the Executive and the members of the City Baseball League was held last evening and was well attended. The business of the year was wound up, after reports had been presented. After paying all expenses upwards of $100 remained for each team in the league, which was a good showing. A financial statement of receipts and expenditures will be published later. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the officials of the League for the duties performed by them.

LANDS TO BE SOLD.

NAPANEE WEDDING

In St. Mary Magdalene Church, on Wednesday evening at eight thirty, o'clock, Edith Marjorie, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Furnival, was married to William Allan Templeton. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. W. E. Kidd in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The bride, wearing a gown of white satin trimmed with silver and carrying a shower bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley, was given away by her brother, James C Furnival, of Portland, Maine. The bride was attended by Miss Mabel Vrooman, wearing a dainty gown of white satin veiled in blue and embroidered in crystals. She carried an armful of pale pink roses. Mr. James E. Madden assisted the groom, and little Janet McIntosh, in frock of white lace, with touches of blue, acted as flower girl, carrying a basket of pale blue flowers. Mr. F. S. Boyes and Mr. J. B. Allison were ushers. After the ceremony the guests adjourned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Furnival to congratulate the bride and groom. Mr. and Mrs. Templeton will spend their honeymoon in New York.

EX-CIVIL SERVANT ENDS HIS LIFE

Was Dismissed as Result of Enquiry Into Marine Department.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 5.—There was a re-echo to-day of the Marine Department investigation, which caused some dismissals after the enquiry by Judge Cassels, when the body of J. Frederick Fraser, of Ottawa, was discovered in Rockliffe Park. He was formerly Commissioner of Lights for the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and was dismissed as the result of the investigation. He had been missing from his home since Monday, and probably committed suicide, though an inquest must be held to decide that question. This is scheduled for Monday next, but will probably prove a case of poisoning, self-administered. Since his dismissal deceased had been in New York.

Deceased had issued the order for a [illegible] number of gas buoys, for which it was said, the Government could not possibly find use, and it was alleged that there was some considerable rake-off in the matter. Fraser was quite prominent in church affairs here and very well known.

He had written a letter to the local police stating where his body was likely to be found.

SIR JOHN'S CHAIR FOR MR. BORDEN

Mr. Geo. A. Kingston Keeps Promise Made at Borden Club Banquet Some Years Ago

The old arm chair used by the late Sir John A. Macdonald during the years 1874 to 1878, when he was out of office practising law in Toronto, has recently become the property of Mr. R. L. Borden, the Premier-elect, under remarkable circumstances.

When the personnel of the law firm of Macdonald & Marsh, with offices in the old Trust and Loan Building, 25 Toronto Street, changed, the old chair which had been used by Sir John as senior partner, passed into the hands of the new senior partner, the late Mr. William Lount, K. C.

In 1900, when Mr. Lount was called to the bench, the chair was handed over to the junior member, Mr. George A. Kingston, the only Conservative member of the firm at that time, who was retiring.

Some years later Mr. Kingston was present as Secretary of the Borden Club of Toronto at a banquet given at the King Edward in honor of the leader of the Conservative party, and shortly afterwards asked Mr. Borden to allow him on that happy occasion in the future to which all Conservatives looked forward as not far distant, when he should be Premier of Canada, to make him a present of the chair.

The following telegrams, dated September 21 and September 24, 1911, are eloquent concluding chapters in the history:

Toronto, Sept. 21, 1911.
R. L. Borden,
Halifax, N. S.
Heartiest congratulations. Will have Sir John's old chair shipped to you at Ottawa at an early date.
George A. Kingston.

Ottawa, Sept. 24, 1911.
George A. Kingston,
Temple Building, Toronto.
Warm thanks for congratulations. I shall accept the old arm chair without fail.
R. L. Borden.

The chair is built is the old fashioned comfortable style with the high back frame. The frame is of maple and was originally upholstered in green baize. It has recently, however been re-covered in a more modern style with heavy dark leather.

LATEST REPORTS FROM OTTAWA

Laurier Likely to Resign To-day—New Cabinet will be Announced Monday

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 5.—At the conclusion of to-night's Cabinet council it was announced that another sitting will be held to-morrow. This may mean a further postponement of the resignation.

A lot of foolish guesses are being made regarding the Borden Cabinet. A case in point presented itself today. Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture in the Whitney Government, was spotted in the Russell rotunda, and the statement went abroad that Mr. Duff was to be brought into Mr. Borden's Cabinet as Minister of Agriculture and would oust Andrew Broder, who seems to have the portfolio tucked away. Mr. Duff's mission was purely official. He visited the annual fair at Carp.

There are some men who are tolerably certain of securing a place in the new ministry. They can, however, be counted almost on the fingers of one hand. They are Cochrane, Doherty, Roche, W. T. White and Ames. The list handed to His Excellency by the Premier-elect will contain names of men overlooked in the long list of possibilities.

Resignation To-day.

There is a general impression that to-morrow Laurier will tender his resignation. This will permit of Mr. Borden submitting his Cabinet to his Excellency on Monday. It all depends upon Mr. Pugsley's ability to dig up some contract, which he wishes to award. The Department of Public Works has been most active since the verdict of September 21.

Already the contract for decorating the buildings and grounds for the new Governor-General has been let to a good Liberal contractor and for some days scaffolding has been erected on the main walk and over the east and main gates, despite the fact that the coming of the Duke of Connaught was ten days away.

GREEN—In Belleville on Thursday, October 5th, 1911, Charles Green, aged 64 years.

The funeral will take place from his late residence, James Street, tomorrow, Saturday, Oct. 7th, at 2.30 p. m., sharp. Services at the house at 2 p. m. Interment in Belleville cemetery.

CURRENT COMMENT

It is once more necessary to swat the fly.

This is the way in which the St. Thomas Journal puts it: "The City Council will perform to-night."

Suggestions as to fit and proper persons for the positions of mayor and aldermen are now in order. Don't all speak at once.

THE BIG INTEREST that defeated CONTINENTALISM was the interest of Canadians in their country and their Empire.—Toronto Telegram.

Lody Cook, who intends to reform Chicago, is to start by buliding four churches. How she intends to get Chicagoans into them is not stated.—Milwaukee News.

LAST YEAR'S OVERCOAT.

Once more I sadly take it down,
And musingly I gaze upon it:
I choke my pride and then decide
'Twill do with a new collar on it.

During the Federal contest the Liberal papers repeatedly reminded the electors that "there was but one issue—Reciprocity." Now, we are told by the Grits and their papers "that it was not reciprocity that did it!" Well, what did do it? For surely some one "struck Billy Patterson."

As a result of the recount in West Northumberland Mr. Charles A. Munson has been declared elected as M. P. by a majority of six votes—two more than was at first reported. "Charley" has many old friends in Belleville who will heartily congratulate him on the result.

E. A. Thompson, Canadian correspondent of the Boston Transcript, who confidently predicted that the Laurier Government would be returned to power with a majority of ninety, now explains the result of the elections by saying that the Liberal party is a party of cowards. The soreness of Thompson exceeds even the soreness of the esteemed Globe.—Hamilton Herald.

The Brantford Expositor makes out a poor case in defence of the dying Laurier Government awarding contracts for millions of dollars worth of work, which the new Government will have to provide money for and oversee for perhaps years to come. If the work being undertaken is right the contracts could safely have been left to the new Government to award.—Guelph Herald.

President Taft told his people that a defeat of his Reciprocity scheme in Congress would have the effect of giving a great impetus to the British policy of Preferential trade for the Empire. Now if the defeat of the Yankee scheme in Congress would have that effect on the British scheme much more should the defeat of that anti-British scheme by the voice of Canadians set the people of Britain energetically to work for the commercial organization of the Empire.—Halifx Herald.

Post Master Lovelace of St. Catharines resigned to run against E. A. Lancaster, and of course, met defeat. The new Post Master General filled the office, which is likely to create some trouble. It is stated that the appointment was put through by Hon Henri Beland personally, in the absence of Dr. R. M. Coulter, the Deputy Post Master General, who had twice refused to sanction it. This is Dr Beland's sole action of any importance since assuming office on the eve of the Laurier Government's defeat. Turn him out.

Sarnia Observer, September 18:—A ridiculously exaggerated estimate of the result of the Dominion elections published by The Toronto World, figures up a majority of 17 for Borden. To secure this The World counts on Bourassa securing 25 seats in Quebec. Here is the "ridiculously exaggerated estimate":

	Con.	Lib.
Ontario	61	25
Quebec	25	40
Nova Scotia	8	10
New Brunswick	4	9
P. E. I.	2	2
Manitoba	9	1
Saskatchewan	2	8
Alberta	2	5
British Columbia	6	1
Yukon (not yet held.)

And here is what happened. Compare it with The World's estimate:

	Con.	Lib.
Ontario	73	13
Quebec	27	38
Nova Scotia	9	9
New Brunswick	5	8
P. E. I.	2	2
Manitoba	8	2
Saskatchewan	1	9
Alberta	1	6
British Columbia	7	0
Yukon (not yet held.)

It is stated in Ottawa that the Hon. Mr. Fielding is to be found a seat in Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. Mr B. B. Law, M. P., who had 1,200 of a majority, it is said, is to retire in his favor.

October 1st was the date of the payment of the third quarter of the building instalments. The committee were patiently waiting for this payment, as their resources were more than taxed. A large number have promptly responded, but the committee are sorely in need of all funds now due. The lathing is about finished. The plastering and glazing will be in progress next week. The sewer is proving to be expensive and rocky.

Mr. F. E. Dinguian, the new physical director, arrives this evening, and will be given a reception at eight o'clock. Dr. McCulloch will be in charge. Directors and members are requested to be present.

The grounds are in good shape for the sports to-morrow. Should the rain not continue over night there will be no necessity of postponing them for a week. The baseball game has been called off and will be substituted with a football match between the D. and D. Institute and the High School.

INPORTANT STATEMENT

Mr. H. K. Carroll, LL.D., of New York, in addressing the Ecumenical Conference now holding its sessions in Toronto, made the following startling statement:—

"There is a decline in the last decade of Methodist adherents of 437,562 It is so large that it startles us.

"The fact that 10,000 more preachers, 14,000 more pulpits and two and a quarter million more members produced a smaller increase by 400,000 in the last ten years than in the decade ending in 1891 is of momentous concern.

"The revival is no longer known to us. There are Moodys but no Moody successes. . . And it is significant that few regrets are uttered."

The average man has more ambition than ability.

COTTON REPLACING OPIUM

Chinese Farmers Exported the Latter to the Value of 28,141,234 taels

The opium traffic in China is now practically suppressed, and the opium growers have taken to the cultivation of cotton in order to recoup themselves for the losses sustained by the cessation of opium culture. The new agricultural venture has given splendid results, judging from the magnificent crops to be seen in the different provinces. According to official statistics to hand, China last year exported cotton to the value of about 28,141,234 taels to Russia and America. The year before, the export of Chinese cotton only amounted to a third of this sum. This extraordinary increase in quantity exported is [illegible]e or less attributable to the bad [illegible]erican crops, which afforded the [illegible]ese exporters a splendid chance to dispose of their merchandise at very advantageous prices. The Imperial Government is doing everything possible to encourage the growth of cotton throughout the Empire.

There is more or less hypocrisy in the smile a man generates when he loses.

This is due to the fact that most people want to get in on the ground floor.

WOMEN FAILURES

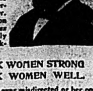
Though 1910 was a year of good trade in England, and the number of failures was the lowest for twenty-six years, there was an increase in the number of failures among women, according to a return issued. The greatest increase, it is added, was among widows. Altogether 495 women failed, as compared with 436 in 1909. Of the total, 201 were married, 153 were widows, and 87 were single. Their total liabilities were $1,544,850.

Among the women who failed were 49 milliners, 42 drapers, 40 grocers, 33 lodging-house keepers, 23 confectioners, 17 publicans, 7 farmers, 7 butchers, 6 school-mistresses, 5 carriage-builders, 1 engineer.

WHAT SHOWERS DO

Many folks complain when showers are frequent, but few seem to know the good that these same showers do. To begin with, rain purifes the air, beating down the minute particles of dust with which it is usually laden, and driving away many millions of germs. Rain is a great fertilizer, as it contains a large quantity of carbonic acid, which it collects from the air, and further absorbs mnay chemical substances from decaying vegetation lying on the surface of the earth.

It's always safe to judge a woman by the kind of hero she worships.



Honored by Women

When a woman speaks of her silent secret suffering she trusts you. Millions have bestowed this mark of confidence on Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. Everywhere there are women who bear witness to the wonder-working, curing-power of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription —which saves the suffering sex from pain, and successfully grapples with woman's weaknesses and stubborn ills.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG
IT MAKES SICK WOMEN WELL.

No woman's appeal was ever misdirected or her confidence misplaced when she wrote for advice, to the WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets induce mild natural bowel movement once a day.

The Haunted Chamber

"She evidently shuns me," he says in an aggrieved tone to her one evening, sinking into the seat beside hers. "Except a devotion to her that is singularly sincere, I know nothing about me that can be regarded as an offence. Yet it appears to me that she dislikes me."

"There I am sure you are wrong," declares the widow, tapping his arm lightly wtih her fan. "She is but a girl—she hardly knows her own mind."

"She seems to know it pretty well when Adiran addresses her," he says, with a sullen glance.

At this Mrs. Talbot cannot suppress a start; she grows a little pale, and then tries to hide her confusion with a smile. But the smile is forced, and, Arthur Dynecourt watching her, reads her heart as easily as if it were an open book.

"I don't suppose Adrian cares for her," he goes on, quietly. "At least" —here he drops his eyes—"I believe with a little judicious management, his thoughts might easily be diverted to another channel."

"You think so?" asks Mrs. Talbot, faintly, trifling with her fan. "I cannot say that his intentions to her have been in any way particular."

"Not as yet," answers Dynecourt, studying her attentively, "and if I mgiht be open with you," he adds, breaking off abruptly, and assuming an air of anxiety—"we might perhaps mutually help one another."

"Help each other?"

"Dear Mrs. Talbot," says Dynecourt softly, "has it never occurred to you how safe a thing it would be for my cousin, Sir Adrian, to marry a woman who understands the world and its ways—a woman young and beautiful, certainly, but yet conversant with the convenances of society. Such a woman would rescue Adrian from the shoals and quicksands that surround him in the forms of mercenary friends and scheming mothers. Such a woman might surely be found. Nay, I think I myself could put my hand on her, if I dared, at this moment."

Mrs. Talbot trembles slightly, and blushes a good deal, but says nothing.

"He is my nearest of kin," goes on Dynecourt, in the same low, impassive voice. "Naturally I am interested in him, and my interest on this point is surely without motive; as, were he to never marry, were he to leave me heir, were he to die some sudden death"—here a remarkable change spreads over his features—"I should inherit all the land you see around you, and the title besides."

Mrs. Talbot is still silent. She merely bows her head in assent.

"Then, you see, I mean kindly toward him when I suggest that he should marry some one calculated to sustain his rank in the world," continues Dynecourt. "As I have said before, I know one who would fill that position charmingly, if she would deign to do so."

"And who?" falters Dora Talbot, nervously.

"May I say to whom I allude?" he murmurs. "Mrs. Talbot, pardon me if I have been impertinent in thinking of you as that woman."

A little flickering smile adorns Dora's lips for a moment, then, suddenly remembering that smiles do not become her, she relapses into her former calm.

"You flatter me," she says sweetly.

"I never flatter," he responds, with telling emphasis. "But, I can see you are not angry, and so I am emboldened to say plainly, I would gladly see you my cousin'e wife. Is the idea not altogether abhorrent to you?"

"No. Oh, no!"

"It is perhaps—pardon me if I go too far—even agreeable to you?"

"Mr. Dynecourt," says Mrs. Talbot, suddenly glancing at him and laying her jewelled fingers lightly on his arm. "I will confess to you that I am tired of being alone—dependent on myself, as it were—thrown on my own judgment for the answering of every question that arises. I would gladly acknowledge a superior head. I would have someone to help me now and then, with a word of advice; in short, I would have a husband. And" —here she lays her fan against her lips and glances archly at him—"I confess too that I like Sir Adrian as —well—as well as any man I know.

"He is a very fortunate man"—gravely. I would he knew his happiness."

"Not for worlds," says Mrs. Talbot, with well-feigned alarm. "You would not even hint to him such a thing as —as——". She stops, confused.

"I shall hint nothing—do nothing, except what you wish—Ah, Mrs. Talbot"—with a heavy sigh—"you are supremely happy! I envy you! With you fascinations and"—insinuatingly —"a word in season from me, I see no reason why you should not claim as your own the man whom you—well, let us say, like; while I——"

"If I can befriend you in any way," interrupts Dora, quickly, "command me."

She is indeed quite dazzled by the picture he has painted before her eyes. Can it be—it is possible, that Sir Adrian may some day be hers: Apart from his wealth, she regards him with very tender feelings, and of late she has been rendered at times absolutely miserable by the thought that he has fallen a victim to the charms of Florence.

Now, if by means of this man her rival can be kept out of the way, all may yet be well; and her host may be brought to her feet before her visit comes to an end.

Of Arthur Dynecourt's infatuation for Florence she is fully aware, and is right in deeming that part of his admiration for the beautiful girl has grown out of his knowledge of her money-bags. Still, she argues to herself, his love is true and faithful, despite his knowledge of her dot, and he will in all probability make her as good a husband as she is likely to find.

"May I command you?" asks Arthur, in his softest tones. "You know my secret, I believe. Ever since that last meeting at Brighton, when my heart overcame me and made me show my sentiments openly and in your presence, you have been aware of the hopeless passion that has been consuming me. I may be mad, but I still think that, I might make myself at least tolerated by Miss Delmaine. Will you help me in this matter? Will you give me the chance of pleading my cause with her alone? By so doing," he added with a meaning smile "you will also give my cousin the happy chance of seeing you alone."

Dora only too well understood his insinuation. Latterly Sir Adrian and Florence have been almost inseperable. To now meet with one whose interest it is to keep them asunder is very pleasant to her.

"I will help you," she says in a low tone.

"Then induce Miss Delmaine to give me a private rehearsal to-morrow in the north gallery," he whispers, hurriedly, seeing Captain Ringwood and Miss Villiers approaching. "Hush not another word! I rely on you. Above all things, remember that what has occurred is only between me and you. It is our little plot," he said, with a curious smile that somehow strikes a chill to Mrs. Talbot's heart.

She is faithful to her word, never the less, and late that night, when all have gone to her rooms, she puts on her dressing-gown, dismisses her maid and crossing the corridor, taps lightly on the door of Florence's apartment.

Hearing some one cry, "Come in," she opens the door, and, having fastened it again, she goes over to where Florence is sitting while her maid is brushing her long, soft hair, that reaches almost to the ground as she sits.

"Let me brush your hair to-night Flo," she says gayly. "Let me be your maid for once. Remember how I used to do it for you sometimes when we were in Switzerland last year."

"Very well—you may," acquiesces Florence, laughing. "Good-night Parkins. Mrs. Talbot has won your release."

STOMACH TROUBLE CURED

If you have suffered for 20 years with dyspepsia and stomach trouble and then found a remedy that gave you instant and permanent relief, you too, would be as pleased as Mrs. R. J Noble, of Oxbow, Sask., to let the world know of it. She says: "I suffered for twenty years with dyspepsia and stomach trouble and consulted with physicians in different parts of America, but never got any permanent relief until I began treatment with Mi-o-na. The food I eat would distress me and sour on my stomach and form gas. I could not sleep. Since I have used Mi-o-na I can enjoy a good night's sleep—I have a good appetite and have gained fifteen pounds. You may refer any person to me regarding the above statement."

Mi-o-na cures by strengthening and invigorating the flabby stomach walls and after a course of Mi-o-na treatment, constipation, if there is any, will entirely disappear. You take no risks; Mi-o-na Tablets either cure you of acute or chronic indigestion and stomach trouble or your money back. All druggists 50c. a box, or post paid from the R. T. Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 5.—There was no improvement in the foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat, and as buyers and sellers continue considerably apart in their views as to prices, little or no business is doing. The local market for oats is firm under a fairly good demand for car lots.

A good business is passing in spring wheat flour for local account, but we hear that some large contracts have beed made with bakers recently at a cut in prices of 20c per barrel, but this is by no means general. There is a good enquiry from foreign buyers, but the prices bid are little out of line. Demand for bran and shorts is good, which is still scarce and very firm.

Toronto-Ottawa

The following article from the Ottawa Journal of the 4th inst. contains so much that is of interest to the people of Belleville that no excuse is needed for giving it a place in our editorial columns:

> The opening of the Toronto-Trenton division of the Toronto-Ottawa Canadian Northern Railway line, coupled with Sir William Mackenzie's announcement in Monday's Journal to the effect that another year would see the complete Toronto-Ottawa division in active operation, brings materially nearer a time when Ottawa will be a good deal better off than it is at present as regards touch with the second largest Canadian city.
>
> The new Canadian Northern line is a few miles shorter than the present C.P.R. line. That, however, is not the important element in the expected improvement. The Canadian Northern, like all modern roads, is keeping its grades and curves down to a minimum standard. On the new Ottawa-Toronto line the greatest grade is .5—that is, a raise of six inches in a hundred feet. At a couple of points on the C.P.R. the present grades are 1.5—that is, a raise of eighteen inches in a hundred feet. In justice to the C.P.R., however, it should be stated that at the present time a large portion of this line is being rebuilt, grades are being reduced, curves straightened out, and the time is rapidly approaching, too, when it will be able to oger a better service than the present one.
>
> An Ottawa business man having business in Toronto, at the present time can leave here, say, Sunday night, arriving in Toronto on Monday morning. He has his interview, transacts his business, and leaves for home Monday night, arriving here Tuesday morning. But with the average man the two successive nights in the train is sufficient to render him useless for very much effective work on the following day.
>
> The C.P.R. covers the 250 miles between here and Toronto in eight hours, a fraction over thirty-one miles an hour. The Canadian Northern line, because of its easy grades and curves and its expected saving of fifteen miles, expects to put on a six-hour Toronto-Ottawa service, covering the distance at forty miles an hour. About that there is nothing startling or impossible. The New York-Chicago run is daily made at close to sixty miles an hour. Thus, under the new conditions, an Ottawan having business may leave this city at seven in the morning, arrive in Toronto at one o'clock, have two hours for business with the banks open and two hours afterwards, and leave for home at five o'clock the same afternoon, arriving here about eleven that evening. Thus in future Toronto will be in a business way to Ottawa what Montreal is now. A business man will be able to leave and get back home the same day.
>
> When the C.P.R. line was built the importance of easy grades and curves was not understood in the same way as it now is. Harriman educated the railwaymen of America to the point where it is now, the enterprising thing to spend scores of thousands in making a trunk line run on as near the level and with as few curves as the configuration of the country to be travelled permits. No Canadian road is more enterprising to learn than the C.P.R., and it is not only in the Toronto-Ottawa line, but all over the big system, that hundreds of thousands of dollars are being annually expanded in short cuts, the straightening of curves, the cutting away of hills, and the filling in of valleys. Probably by the time the C.N.R. is ready to open its Toronto-Ottawa branch the C.P.R., too, will be in a position to add ten miles an hour to the speed of its trains, and by a more convenient timing place Ottawa and Toronto in as favorable a position to each other as the newer line is prepared to do.

One important point which our contemporary has failed to note in connection with the C.P.R. is that that company has undertaken the construction of a new line from Ottawa to Toronto, the surveys for which are now being made. This line will diverge from the present route at Glen Tay, sixteen miles west of Perth, and will be run across the head of the Rideau Lakes to Belleville, thence touching all the towns along the front, to Toronto. This line, it has been given out officially, will be of the highest standard of construction, suitable for fast passenger and freight service, and may not improbably be double tracked. Work on this line is expected to be commenced before the snow flies.

Cause of the Turnover

The Montreal Witness asked for short letters from its readers giving the reasons why the political revulsion was so pronounced. Here are two short letters which we reproduce, as they are from gentlemen in our own locality:

Sir,—You ask for letters of a hundred words re the cause of the turnover in the election. First, the Liberal papers did more harm than good to their cause; they abused everyone that did not see eye to eye with them. Second, every man that read both sides could see that the best arguments were against reciprocity; also that the aggressiveness of Rome lately had something to do with the vote of Ontario. I think you will side with me when I say it is a hopeful sign of a country to see so many independent voters who are not tied to any one party.

OLD LIBERAL.
Tweed, Ont., Sept. 29, 1911.

Sir,—I consider Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his followers traitors and rebels, and if the pact had carried it would have been far worse for the British nation than the Boer War. Mr. Maynard, the most intelligent man in Cloyne, says he has taken the Witness over forty years, but wants no more of it if you still keep on. As Mr. Taft says, we have come to the parting of the ways. An American here made one of the grandest speeches I ever listened to. He said Canada had everything to lose and he thought too much of Canadians to see them give themselves away. A young man working on the Hill road, writing to his folks in Brockville, said they made no secret of it, if they got reciprocity they would have a railway from Winnipeg to the Gulf of Mexico, with warehouses on the other side. No time for more now.

ORIS COLE, Snr.
Cloyne, Sept. 30, 1911.

Cabinet Guessing

The Intelligencer has not given much time to foreshadowing or guessing who is to constitute the new Cabinet in Ottawa. That is a task which Mr. Borden has to solve, and which in good time we shall all be informed on. In the meantime, we are informed by the Montreal Gazette's Ottawa correspondent, one of the best informed in the capital, that there is to be a "surprise," which means that some one is to be taken into the Cabinet who has not appeared in the race for the coveted prizes. The Gazette's surmise is that "Mr. W. T. White, of Toronto, one of the famous eighteen Toronto Liberals who plit from their party on the reciprocity issue," is to be the lucky man. Canada will soon know, as the new Cabinet must be formed ere many hours have passed.

The Gazette's correspondent gives the following gratifying news:

"Mr. Pugsley," he says, "has not succeeded in getting his big project for St. John harbor through. The tenders were opened and the Department of Public Works recommended the acceptance of the bid of an English firm to the tune of $7,000,000, but the matter is said to be left over for the coming minister to deal with."

It is evident the Governor-General put his veto on this attempt of Pugsley to feather the nest of some one.

Alfalfa Pasture for Hogs.

Henry Coates, one of the most successful hog raisers of Kansas, claims that hogs on alfalfa pasturage, fed on a small grain ration, will do far better than those fed on full feed of grain in dry lots. Mr. Coates says:

"Twenty-five years of pasturing hogs of all ages on alfalfa has proved to me conclusively that a fourth to a half grain ration while they are on such pasture will produce greater growth per day than when they are kept in dry lots and fed on full rations of corn. Hogs will maintain a reasonable growth, but not fatten enough for market on alfalfa pasture alone, therefore it is better to feed them with some grain while running on green alfalfa in order to make them profitable.

"If it is desired to full feed hogs they will make a rapid fattening growth from increasing the grain ration while they are on the pasture, and with this grain and alfalfa combination, the meat will be nearly as firm as that of the hogs kept in the dry lot and fed on nothing but grain. I find no distinction on the market between alfalfa fed swine and those purely grain fed and they sell price and price alike. The general health of the alfalfa fed hog is equal to that of those maintained on any other feed and they are prolific."

For the cotton gowns the predilection is for colored embroideries. The colors of the embroideries are pink, rose, old blue, light blue, lavender and yellow.

Money Wasted

At a meeting of architects, held in Montreal the other day, the question of government expenditure in Ottawa was severely criticised, particularly in the erection of public buildings in that city. As a result two resolutions were carried embodying advice to the Federal authorities.

The first resolution was to the effect that the council of the Royal Architectural Institute be instructed to approach the Federal Government with a view to having the matter of departmental buildings about to be erected in Ottawa reconsidered, both as regards site and design.

A second resolution, moved by Mr. H. B. Gordon, Toronto, and seconded by J. H. G. Russell, Winnipeg, declared: "That whereas the Federal Government spent money with the laudable intention of beautifying Ottawa, but without any comprehensive interest or plan of the whole possible scheme of improvement, and whereas much has been done that was unsuitable and inadequate; therefore the Royal Architectural Institute, in convention assembled, petition the Federal Government to appoint a commission of five, with artistic or technical knowledge, to act without remuneration as an advisory body; and further petition the Government to give this commission power to employ such technical help as may be required, and to consult specialists, the Federal Government to pay the expenses of the commission."

HERRING FISHERIES OF SCOTLAND

Saturday, September 19th saw the end for all practical purposes of the herring fishing season on the east coast of Scotland, and at Shetland, and Orkney. Local crews at the larger centres, such as Fraserburgh, Peterhead, Wick and Aberdeen, and at Lerwick, in Shetland, and Stronsay, in Orkney, may continue for a week or more to gather in the leavings, but the stranger boats which follow the herring all round the coasts have cleared out, and are working south with a view to putting in a week or two at Blyth, Scarborough, Grimsby, or other of the intermediate resting ports, previous to the start in earnest of the East Anglian fishings at Yarmouth and Lowestoft in October.

The catch for the season on the east coast of Scotland, from Wick to Eyemouth, is in round figures 700,00 crans (the cran is 37 1-2 gallons, and contains about 1,000 average sized fish), as compared with 810,000 crans at the corresponding period of last year while on the Northumberland coast, which for Fishery Board purposes is included in the Scottish returns, the catch was 130,000 crans, against 210,000 crans at last year's corresponding date. The catch at Shetland for the season is about 385,000 crans against 400,000 last year, while Orkney is the only centre which has held its own with last year's catch. The total for the districts mentioned is 1,333,000 crans, as compared wtih 1,576,000 at last year's corresponding date, or a shortage for the current season of 243,000 crans.

When is was remembered that last age one, it will be seen that the shortage one, ti will be seen that the shortage this year is serious, and this, notwithstanding the fact that the season has been continued since the beginning of May—a month earleir than usual—and that the fleet of steamers and sailors prosecuting the fishing is the largest and best equipped for catching purposes in the history of the herring trade. Indeed, most of the practical fishermen are agreed that it is the early start of the season which is responsible for the short fishing. The shoals, they allege, were broken up and scattered before they had properly formed, and there is a movement amog the leading fishermen to have mass meetings next month at Yarmouth and Lowestoft, with the view of introducing a close time in 1912 for the east coast and Shetland.

The fishermen, however, have suffered less by the shortage of the catch than the merchants, particularly those merchants who cure the herring for the export trade, which represents about two thirds of the whole. With the early start and the large fleet operating, the curers had made more extensive preparations for a big fishing than usual in the way of laying in stock and engaging extra work people and the result was, when the short fishing came on, prices at the auction sales of the fresh fish were run up to exceptionally high figures, the great bulk ofthe fish going out from 20s to 37s a cran, according to the quality.

An all-round average price of 25s a cran would be an underestimate, but even at that figure the total for the season's catch would be £1,666,000, or about £110,000 more than last year, when the average was estimated at 20s a cran. These figures represent only the money paid to the fishermen for the herrings on the first landing. Every cran landed is said to produce 5s to 6s worth of work to shore hands, so that, without making any allowance for the turnover in trade, the herring season all round in the districts mentioned means something like two million pounds sterling paid out in wages. The prices of the cured article on the Continental markets were also high, but not high enough to leave a margin to the merchants on this side, and this, along with a great loss of fish by the extreme heat in Germany during July and August will mean, it is to be feared, that those in the herring trade who can make ends meet will be exceptionally fortunate.

The number of barrels cured in the districts to which reference has been made is 1,300,000—most of which are exported to Russia and Germany, where, by the way, import duties of 13s and 3s per barrel are respectively imposed—representing 971,000 crans of the total catch, the balance, 362,000 crans representing the quantity traded in the home marqets. Including the West Coast of Scotland, where some 66,000 barrels were cured, this season, there is a shortage over all in the number of barrels of 280,000 as compared with last year's cure.

Big Stick For Coalers.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Attorney-General Wickersham yesterday by filing a brief in the Supreme Court of the United States began his fight before that tribunal to have the principal coal carrying railroads and coal owning companies in the anthracite coal region adjudicated to be in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. An entirely different attack was made on the corporations from that in Pennsylvania, where the Government lost on nearly every point.

A CAUCASIAN MARRIAGE.

A Piece of Sugar Put to Lips of Bride to Sweeten Tongue.

In the Caucasus the marriage ceremonies everywhere are of the greatest extravagance in regard to length and the amount of feasting. In Mingrelle large tents are erected for the wedding guests, and the smallest number invited comes to two or three hundred. An interesting and pretty ceremony is the going forth of the bridegroom's mother to meet the bride, to whose lips she puts a piece of sugar, wishing her happiness and joy, and hoping that her tongue may always keep the sweetness of sugar. In the marriage procession all the goods and wealth of the family make an appearance. An elderly lady, generally the bride's nurse, plays an important part throughout the ceremonies. She sits by the bride, who neither laughs nor eats during all the merriment and feasting. A meal is served in the nuptial chamber, to which the matron conducts the bride. The bridegroom is refused admission until he buys his entry from the matron. This old lady remains a week in the house, and when she departs the bride breaks into loud lamentations. For a year the young couple are full of respect and attention for their parents, never sitting down in their presence and submitting to their wishes in everything.

REMOVAL OF BIRTHMARKS.

Carbonic Acid Snow Treatment Proving Generally Successful.

In less than a year the carbonic acid snow treatment for birthmarks, warts, and rodent ulcer, first introduced at Charing Cross Hospital, has gained an accepted place in modern therapeutics.

The early experiments with the new remedy, described in these columns last June, have been so successful in suitable cases that now practically every hospital in the country, as well as thousands of general practitioners and skin specialists, is making use of the new medicament.

The snow is prepared by allowing a thin spray of carbonic acid gas, liquefied under pressure, to escape into a felt covering slipped over the tap of the iron cylinder containing the gas. The gas is deposited on the felt as a very fine powdered snow at a temperature of about 100 degrees below zero. The snow is then solidified into an icy pencil by being tightly packed into a hard rubber cylinder with a plunger.

Treatment consists of pressing this intensely cold pencil of carbonic acid ice for a few seconds against the birthmark, wart or rodent ulcer to be removed. The resulting intense cold freezes the part, setting up severe local inflammation, which leads to a breaking down and absorption of the frozen tissues. There is very little pain and the wound heals naturally in a few days, leaving the skin practically normal.

RUSSIAN GRAIN KING.

Was Queer Character, But His Business Integrity Was High.

Of a peculiar stamp was the man of millions, Nicholas Boukhroff, the Russian grain king, who recently died. In his externals he was a mujik merchant. He wore the top boots, the trader's kaftan—coat and overcoat in one, fitting close up to the neck and reaching to the knees—and the embroidered cotton shirt without starched collar, which are the historic garb of the Volga traders, men who carry as much as 50,000 rubles in notes stuck in the leg of a boot and who distrust the documentary machinery of credit. Boukhroff's great fortune compelled him to handle investments and bank paper, but he was in sympathy with the old simple ways. He was in fact an Old Believer and a devout churchgoer who lived his religion.

In his housekeeping he lived on much the same scale as an ordinary hand worker in comfortable employment. He gave away millions of rubles in charity, but was close fisted in personal outlays. The porters at Nijni-Novgorod and elsewhere avoided him when they saw him step from a train. He would never pay them more than 10 cents for carrying his baggage. When he met great personages he "thoued" them, as he did everybody else, keeping to the Old Believer, Quakerlike form of address. His integrity in business was of the highest.

He would lecture men in his employment if they spent five kopeks needlessly. His patriarchial ways had sometimes a welcome side. He exacted unquestioning obedience to his instructions; but every now and then a man who served him well for some years would receive a draft for 25,000 or 50,000 rubles with no further remark than:

"Thou shalt now be a Man, too. I know that thou wilt make good use of the money."

Canada Buys a Holman Hunt.

The national art gallery at Ottawa has been enriched by a painting by Holman Hunt, of the British Academy. The painting is a portrait of Henry Wentworth Monk, who was born in the Ottawa Valley and who was known as "The Apostle of Peace." He was an intimate friend of the artist, who painted the picture while with Monk in Palestine. The painting was secured from Mrs. Holman Hunt at a moderate price.

"Very clever, isn't he?"
"Yes."
"I'm told that his three older brothers are mentally weak."
"Yes, he's the original sane fourth."

"Shoots Wife Before Children," says a newspaper headline. That's a matter of precedence.

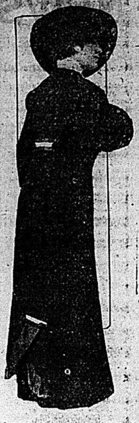
MY LADY'S COLUMN.

BEST IDEALS OF DRESS

Perfect Symmetry Comes Only When Every Part Is Tempered and in Harmony.

"Why is it that modern clothes are so unbeautiful?" asks a writer, and then proceeds to answer her own question. "I think it is because the very first essential of beauty is elegance or fitness. That means there must be intelligence in the creation which ensures a sense of unity and symmetery as well. After all, the purpose of our garments is to clothe us, and protect us, and yet to allow easy and harmonious movement. Personally I think there is something rather naive and charming in the desire most people have to keep abreast with the 'fashions.' Who doesn't enjoy the feeling of being absolutely newly-clothed, with everything fresh and gay, and with all the last year's dusty, out-of-date furbelows thrown away — quite, quite done with? But, while the instinct is right that makes us like to feel as clean and bright and pretty as the ever-changing flowers and leaves, we have been given intelligence, and we really ought to use it if we are to attain to the best possible ideals of dress. Exaggeration, excess for the sake of excess, is only a reflection of the lack of self-control and self-restraint which is, alas, rather in evidence in modern life. To achieve perfect symmetry every part must be duly tempered and in harmony, so that one only receives the impression of a perfect whole. It is in this appreciation of beauty as a whole that we are inclined to be careless and short-sighted. We see our face in the glass against the background of one of those enormous hats, and think the effect is rather picturesque and pleasing; we go to our tailors, and are again attracted by the novel slimness of the newest skirt. But we don't think of the ridiculously disproportionate effect that a large roof has on the top of a pedestal which narrows as it descends, and ends in scarcely any base at all."

Europe's Latest



Longer skirts will be fashionable this fall, and in accord with this decree of fashion long cloaks are due. A garment as shewn is perhaps a trifle long for every day wear, but in Taupe color looks well. It is trimmed with silk of the taupe shade; dabs of white velvet are set on bands of the silk. The back of this garment is draped and the sleeves are roomy.

About Neck-Wear

At the present moment neck finishes play a very important part in our toilette, and there never was such a selection of the kind as one finds in the windows of our drapery establishments to-day. Many of these are of the kind that the girl with quick, deft fingers can easily fashion for herself, out of the oddments she is sure to possess. There is, too, a use for many of those little lawn and lace trifles which our grandmothers treasured, and were perhaps worked by their own fair hands, and very proud are those fortunate ones who possess one or more of these embroidered fichus, and cambric collars, and lace sleevelets, as they can all be worn with great effect with the costumes and frocks of to-day. The side or Directoire frill is very popular, some of them being immensely wide, and fastened on the shoulder by jewelled pins. The very newest ones, however, are made of a triangular piece of Irish crochet, bordered with lace or a tiny frill. The Quaker note is as insistent as ever, and the rever-shaped affair of crochet is the latest idea in the way of a neck finish to this mode.

FARM AND FIELD

VALUE OF SNOW FENCES

Better Crops Result When the Farmer Holds the Winter's Snow on his Fields.

The progressive observant nature of one of the Neepawa farmers is revealed when he makes known his intention to build snow fences to hold the next winter's snow on his fields. During the past year his observation showed, that in places where the snow had blown off in the winter the stand of grain this season is very poor. Whether it is the absence of snow that is responsible for the poor crop in spots is not the question for consideration, although many farmers observe that in years when the snowfall is heavy the crop following is usually a very good one.

The suggestion of erecting temporary fences will solve the problem of holding snow on the fields. Every year railway companies erect hundreds of miles of temporary fence to stop the snow from blocking their lines of traffic. Why canot the farmer expend a small amount of money in preventing the snow from blowing as it does on the open fields? The work can be done when the farm operations are finished and winter reigns. Any observant person knows the places on which the snow will be likely to blow off, and by erecting some fence can probably save a piece of land from being bare of snow.

Feed the Laying Hen

The poultryman in charge of the poultry experiments made by the Massachusetts experiment station says that the free use of fine-cut clover in winter is profitable. Animal albuminoids are preferable for feed instead of those derived from vegetables. Some form of dry animal food is a satisfactory food for egg production. It is best to feed mash in the morning, but if given in too large quantities the fowls become inactive. If given whole grain, for which they must scratch among the straw, hens get the necessary exercise.

In 10 years 36 different experiments have been made to determine the results of a combination of feeds with relative wide and narrow nutritive rations. The object was to throw light upon the general question as to the extent to which corn may be safely used as the principal grain for laying hens. Wheat has been largely used in comparison with corn. The first has a wide nutritive ratio and the latter a narrow ratio.

Summing up, it is found that the wide nutritive value has given the greater number of eggs in 18 out of the 36 experiments, and the narrow has given the greater number in 17 experiments, so that there is little difference in the number of eggs produced.

These experiments have been on the whole confirmed by the experiments at other stations. The conclusion is that corn and corn meal may safely be made prominent in the ration of laying hens. It is necessary, however, to use with the corn a liberal amount of animal food.

Whitewashing the Hen-Run

A house which is constantly used, and always contains its full complement of birds, should be whitewashed every three months. This is not too often, especially if the ordinary preparation of lime and water only is employed. Although the lime and water answers fairly well, it quickly rubs or flakes off, and it is advisable therefore to prepare a rather more elaborate mixture—one that lasts at least twice as long. Some unslaked lime is dissolved in water, and is thoroughly stirred for five or ten minutes, in order that the latter may take as much lime as possible into solution. To every four gallons of the liquid there is added half a pound of soft soap and a pint of paraffin oil; the former prevents the preparation rubbing off on to one's clothes or flaking off by the constant banging of the door, while the paraffin oil kills all insects. The soft soap in the above mixture makes it a suitable one for outdoor work, as it takes a long time for the rain to make any impression.

It is an excellent plan to have some water in the harvest field for the use of the horses. Where several harvesters are at work in the same field and a thresher's tank is at hand, fill it partly full of water and draw it to the field, for the horses' use. You will find that your horses will stand thirty degrees more work if given a small amount of water at intervals during the day.

LINGERIE PILLOWS

Girls of Today are Getting Strong on this Class of Home Ornamentation.

Many girls have come to the conclusion that they cannot have too many lingerie pillows. Time was when the girl who had one found it sufficient; but now she wants half a dozen. They are in all sizes and in all designs. Some are heart-shaped, others oblong many square and some of the new ones are circular.

All of these are flat, and the cases are made separately, with buttons and buttonholes about an inch from the edge and the under side. The lining, or rather the covering of the pillow itself, is in one's favourite colour. Pink, blue, and shades of lavender are usually chosen.

Some pillows are heaped on the bed, others on one's lounge in the bedroom, and some are tied to the tops of an easy chair. The girl who travels this summer must take at least one with her for she wants to make sure that she will be comfortable in whatever bed she sleeps. It may be scented with sachet powder or, if perfume is objectionable, she may simply use orris root, powdered and sprinkled, in the cotton filling.

One girl has made several artistic lingerie pillows by using the ornate front of blouses that were not serviceable last winter. A gown that had gone hopelessly out of fashion was also brought into play, and contributed its best part toward making the outer slip.

A Pretty Summer Frock.

High waist dresses are still as fashionable as they have been throughout the summer, and some of them are, indeed, very smart and becoming. One of the latest and most charming models has the blouse cut all in one, low in the neck, and with cool, short sleeves and the skirt just the popular width. The blouse and skirt are made up separately and joined together afterwards, a cord being sewn round to hide the seam. Another length of cord is sewn down the side of the dress, and buttons are placed along the edge to indicate a fastening.

For material there is nothing better than cool, soft tussore, or some of the many good imitations, which have been worn so much during the summer. Delaine of even zephyr or linen could, however, be used quite well, with collar and cuffs of either lace or embroidery.

Best in the World.

Montreal, Oct. 4.—The Senators and members of Parliament for the Island of Montreal and representatives of the councils of the Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce, and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association were taken for a tour of the harbor on the harbor commission's tug, Sir Hugh Allan, at noon yesterday.

About seventy business men of the city accepted the invitation of the commissioners.

The tour was in conformity to the plan of the harbor board to enable the business leaders of the city to understand what is being done to develop the harbor and river.

Chairman George W. Stephens said the commissioners' ambition was to make the harbor the best in the world.

BALD HEADS NOT WANTED

Baldness is too Generally Considered a Sign of Advanced Age.

A bald headed person does not have an equal chance with one blessed with a healthy head of hair, because baldness is too generally accepted as an indication of age. Many large corporations have established an age limit, and refuse to take men over 35 years of age as new employees.

Probably 65 per cent. of bald-headed people may regain a good head of healthy hair if they will follow our advice and accept our offer. We have a remedy that we positively guarantee to grow hair on any head, unless the roots of the hair are entirely dead, their follicles closed, and the scalp has become glazed and shiny. We want people to try this remedy at our risk, with the distinct understanding that unless it does exactly as we say it will and gives satisfaction in every respect we will make no charge for the remedy used during the trial.

We know exactly what we are talking about, and with this offer back of our statements, no one should scoff, doubt our word or hesitate to put our remedy to an actual test.

We want every one in Belleville who is suffering from any scalp or hair trouble, dandruff, falling hair, or baldness to try our Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We want them to use it regularly—say until three bottles have been used— and if it does not eradicate dandruff, cleanse and refresh the scalp, tighten the hair in its roots, and grow new hair, we will return every cent paid us for the remedy for the mere asking. There is no formality expected, and we exact no obligation from the user whatever.

We are established right here in Belleville, and make this offer with a full understanding that our business success depends upon the sort of treatment we accord our customers, and we would not dare make the above offer unless we could substantiate it in every particular. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store.—J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

DECLINES IN GROWTH

Methodism Needs an Awakening Says English Pastor

Rev. Mr. Johnson of London, Eng., Declares That the Duty of Church Is to Find the Cause of the Weakening and Rectify It—Social Unrest Is Another Large Factor In the Life of the Movement.

Toronto, Oct. 6.—After the spiritual uplift and fraternizing of the opening day the sessions of the fourth Eeumenical Methodist Conference yesterday were devoted strictly to business. It was a time of stock-taking, and the progress of Methodism in the world in the last ten years was compiled and reviewed, along with the place of Methodism in the Church Universal.

Speaking for the western section in the morning, Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, and for the eastern section in the afternoon, Rev. Simpson Johnson, London, pointed to a decline in the growth of the church. For the first five years of the last decade there had been a splendid gain in numbers, but at the end in America the progress had fallen below that of the previous decade; in Great Britain the net result was a loss. This was not due, as Mr. Johnson pointed out, to a lack of equipment or organization, and the church was on its mettle to find the real cause. There was a call for a great spiritual awakening, a return to the old principles of Methodism with an application to new conditions.

The serious nature of the discussion developed in the afternoon, when objection was made to a disposal of the subject when a motion to adjourn was made on account of the civic reception. "This is too important to let go," was the invariable comment. Before the discussion was closed Rev. C. Ensors Walters pointed out the significance of the social unrest in England. The great mass meetings of workingmen on Sundays called for attention. This affected the life of the church. While these meetings are not held in the name of Jesus Christ, they reflect His spirit. This has demonstrated that the mass of the artisans may be gathered in Methodist halls in the interests of the Master. "I know of no more hopeful view in Great Britain to-day than this," he said, "that on Sunday afternoons you can find hard-headed, intelligent workingmen meeting together who are interested in the Kingdom of God."

Another feature of equal importance was the statement of Rev. Dr. Mason, who pointed to the control which the negro had exercised in the face of injustice. He voiced a loud protest against industrial or higher education. "What the negro wants, what the negro must have," he declared, "is ethical and moral training. To be given fair play as a man."

Two Indian delegates faced the large audience in the evening to give their brief testimony to the spread of the Gospel among their race.

Russell and the Pinkertons.

Montreal, Oct. 6.—Pinkerton detectives were much in evidence at yesterday's session of the Russell conspiracy case trial. The entire afternoon was taken up with the testimony of Allan Pinkerton himself, Supt. Doughtery, head of the Pinkerton New York office during the time in which the alleged conspiracy against Mr. Russell was being planned, and Mr. McNamara, Montreal manager.

Most of the evidence consisted in straight denials of the charges of conspiracy. All the Pinkerton men denied any knowledge of any conspiracy and the only other feature was Mr. Dougherty's description of the Plaza conference, to which frequent reference has been made during the trial.

After having asked twenty or more persons, he met a couple of men who pretended to know his son, and took him to a house where they relieved him of his money and a gold watch. The police are looking for the thieves and will do all in their power to help the old gentleman find his son.

IS SENT ON FOR TRIAL

Brown, the Manitoba Kidnapper, Arraigned at Morden.

Desperado, Who Took Miss Gladys Price Out With Him Into the Woods at Snowflake, Man., Will Go to Assizes — Preliminary Hearings Taken on Charges of Abduction and Attempting to Kill Hotelman.

Morden, Man., Oct. 6.—The postponed preliminary hearing of the case against George Brown held at the provincial jail here, charged with attempted rape on the person of Mrs. Frank Patterson, formerly Miss Gladys Price, the Riverdale school teacher, and also the attempted murder of William Adams, the Snowflake hotel proprietor, came up before Police Magistrate Lake at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Patterson gave a clear and vivid description of her connection with the case, never faltering throughout her evidence.

Charles McMillan, who followed Mrs. Patterson on the stand, and to whom it was first reported the prisoner had confessed when arrested at Hannah, N.D., stated what the prisoner had told him, practically corroborating the evidence given by Miss Price and, conclusively showing that the prisoner had had no improper connection with the former witness.

Magistrate Lake, after summing up the evidence of the abduction case, committed the prisoner to stand trial at the fall assizes, which are to be held here on the twenty-fourth of October. The case of attempted murder was then dealt with. William Adams, the first witness, in giving his evidence, stated that he could not identify the prisoner as the party who shot him during the time of the man-hunt in the Snowflake district, but he gave a description of what occurred during the night of the shooting.

The magistrate, after hearing the evidence in the shooting case, directed that the prisoner be sent upon the shooting case as well as that of attempted rape and that he be confined in the local jail until the assizes.

A Lucky Convict.

Berlin, Oct. 6.—Oswald Grosser, a man who is serving ten years' imprisonment for shooting the clerk of the Supreme Court at Leipzig, and wounding one of the judges in 1908, has become a multi-millionaire through the suicide of his brother, Dr. Grosser, of Bonn, who felt that he could not survive the death of his wife.

Oswald Grosser was the black sheep of the family, and was totally disinherited by his father, a Berlin millionaire. He went to America as a pauper, and many years afterwards disputed his father's will. When he finally lost the case he drew two revolvers and fired blindly at the judge's bench. Now he inherits the vast fortune and magnificent villa left by his brother.

Heirs to $85,000,000?

New York, Oct. 6—The missing heirs of the co-called Churchill estate in Newfoundland, said to be worth $85,000,000 are believed to have been found, according to a New York attorney. For almost a hundred years these heirs, known as the Halfyards, have been sought for. Mrs. Elizabeth Halfyard was the daughter of John Churchill, whose descendants, it is contended, own all the City of St. John's and other properties on the island.

A woman of sixty years of age, and of evident refinement, has just arrived in New York with the announcement that she is Mrs. R. B. Stevens, nee Halfyard. With her is a niece, Edith Halfyard, the daughter of Samuel Halfyard. They come from Montreal.

CHARITY FREIGHT FREE.

Austin Sufferers Are Befriended by Railroads.

Austin, Pa., Oct. 6.—In a day's work of overhauling the wreckage here, due to the breaking of the dam last Saturday, and the resultant flood, five additional bodies were accounted for yesterday. Four complete bodies and the nether limbs of an adult female, supposed to have weighed about 200 pounds, are in the morgue, in such condition that their immediate disposition has been ordered. The dead recovered to date number 50, with about 25 more to be accounted for, according to the more or less accurate census by which the casualties are checked off.

Of the bodies recovered yesterday three were children, one a two-year-old boy with white hair, and Clarence Barnes, aged 5, and Herbert Reese, aged 3 years. The only adult found was Mrs. Ann Fitzgerald. All had been washed some distance below the village, down the valley toward Costello.

Commissioner of Health Samuel G. Dixon last night received notification from Philadelphia that the Pennsylvania Railroad has sent out a circular to all its representatives and agents to accept and forward without charge all goods directed or consigned to the relief committee at Austin.

All day long yesterday the crush of falling buildings resounded over the debris-strewn plain where Austin stood before it was swept by the disastrous flood of Saturday. As fast as the buildings fell or were torn apart sledges or drays were piled to their capacity and the wreckage drawn away. One of the worst obstacles is the thousands of cords of hemlock slabs or pulpwood that were swept down from the Bayless Pulp & Paper Mill, where the dam that gave way and caused the flood, was located.

MURDER TRIAL NEXT WEEK.

Arthur Sheridan, Who Stabbed a Man, Comes Up at Barrie Assizes.

Orillia, Oct. 6.—The trial of Arthur Sheridan, charged with the murder of Ross Ford, will take place at Barrie next week at the Fall Assizes, before Chancellor Boyd. The assiges open on Tuesday.

The trial will occupy two or three days. The crown will present over 25 new witnesses, in addition to those who testified at the preliminary trial here, and will endeavor to disprove that Sheridan killed Ford in self-defence, as Sheridan claims. Sheridan will be defended by J. T. Mulcahy of Orillia, while Crown Attorney Cotter will prosecute.

The tragedy occurred on the night of August 9, at a country dance held at George Duff's, about four miles north of this town. They had been on bad terms, but left Duff's together, coming down the road towards Orillia. About 100 yards from Duff's gate Sheridan stabbed Ford several times with a knife. Sheridan walked up the road, and meeting others coming down, said, "Come quick, I have killed Ford." They found Ford lying on his face in a pool of blood, still alive. When asked if he was dying, Ford replied, "No. Sheridan stabbed me. Send for a doctor." He expired in less than five minutes.

Sheridan made an effort to escape, but was captured after a chase lasting 36 hours. He claims Ford attacked him first, hitting him in the eye and knocking hom down.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Failure of conflicting interest in the Chicago & Milwaukee Electric Road controversy to agree on a draft of a decree in the U. S. AUTO KILLS WOMAN.

Toronto Street Is Scene of a Motor Tragedy.

Toronto Oct. 6.—Owing to the sudden and unaccountable shearing through of a tiny pin which controls the feed of gasoline and, therefore, the speed of the car, a motor car driven by Roy F. Brintnell, ran amuck on Yonge street at 5.40 last night, striking Mrs. Elizabeth Salter of Oshawa, who had come to Toronto with her husband for a day's shopping, and was walking in the street with him. Mrs. Salter died a few minutes later in the hospital. John Skerrett, a passerby, was severely shaken.

The account of the accident given by Mr. Britnell and by several witnesses who told of it to the police differ.

Mr. Britnell says that he was driving south and was running at a safe and sane rate, when suddenly the pin controlling this sheared through and his heavy touring car leaped forward almost upon a wagon which was being driven directly in front of him. He says that he immediately applied the emergency brakes and that this swerved his car to the curb, where it struck a post and came to a stop.

Mrs. Salter, he says, was struck as she stepped into the roadway and the boy whose wheel was destroyed was riding close to the curb.

The motor car drove away almost immediately after the accident, but both Mr. Britnell and the young man who was with him in the car turned up at the General Hospital shortly after the woman's arrival there. There Britnell was taken into custody and a charge of manslaughter was laid. He was later baled out by his father upon a $2,000 bond.

Acting County Crown Attorney Monahan was notified and the matter was referred to Coroner J. M. Cotton, who will open an inquest at the morgue this afternoon, where the body was removed last night.

The boy who was struck was not severely injured, but his bicycle was demolished.

EXPLORERS KILLED BY CANNIBALS

MELBOURNE, Oct. 5.—The graphic account of a conflict which occurred between a party of Australians and cannibals of Northern Papua has just been received here.

A prospecting party consisting of thirty members, recently started out to explore the country of Northern Papua. They chartered a smlal steamer, which they left at the coast, and then proceeded into inland and mountain regions. The natives, who accompanied the expedition from the coast were quiet until they were several days' journey up the river. Then they became aggressive and in the ensuing fight shot poisoned arrows, killing several of the adventurers. The natives afterwards made a horrible feast of the remains of the victims.

The survivors of the prospecting party fought bravely. They escaped through the entangled undergrowth, and succeeded after marching day and night in reaching the river. Here they hastily made a raft of logs, working under a constant flight of arrows shot by the natives who had pursued them.

Finally they took to the river in darkness. Their raft was carried down the stream by the swift current to the coast, where they found that their little schooner had in the meantime been buffeted by bad weather and foundered. All hands were, therefore, compelled to skirt the coast to reach the nearest settlement, at which they arrived, almost starved and their clothing torn to rags.

OSHAWA WOMAN KILLED IN TORONTO

Automobile Jumps Over Bicycle to Sidewalk and Crushes Her.

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—Struck by an automobile which jumped from the roadway to the sidewalk at the corner of Louisa and Yonge Streets at 5.40 o'clock last evening, Mrs. Henry Saulter received injuries from which she died within a few minutes. The automobile was in charge of Roy L. Brintnell, of 419 Queen Street west, and was coming down Yonge Street at a good rate of speed, when suddenly it swerved from its path, and passing over a bicycle, jumped to the sidewalk. Mr. and Mrs. Saulter happened to be passing at the time, and the auto struck them. The lady was thrown to the ground with considerable force, and, when picked up, was unconscious. She was carried to a nearby store, and afterwards taken to the General Hospital in A. W. Miles motor ambulance.

Called an Ambulance.

Immediately after the accident Brintnell offered to take the woman to the nearest hospital in his automobile, but it appears that the people present insisted on an ambulance being called, as the injuries were serious. A. W. Miles responded, and took the woman to the General Hospital, but it was too late, and she died ten minutes after being admitted.

When Roy Brintnell saw that his assistance was not required, he immediately returned to the garage at 419 Queen Street west. There he saw his father, Mr. George Brintnell, president of the Brintnell Motor Car Co., and told him of the accident. The young man was immediately sent out in another car to the General Hospital to ascertain the extent of the woman's injuries.

Arrested in Hospital.

While he was there, a policeman from the Wilton Avenue Station walked into the hospital and placed him under arrest on a charge of homicide. He was soon reelased, however, on bail of $3,000, to appear this morning in Police Court.

Deceased was 57 years of age, and lived at 552 Simcoe Street, South Oshawa. The body was taken from the hospital to the morgue, where an inquest will be opened to-day by Dr. J. M. Cotton.

The explanation given by the accused and the people in the garage is that something went wrong with the steering-gear, and the accident was unavoidable. The police secured an expert to make a report, and it may be produced in police court today.

TELLS HER STORY OF ABDUCTION

Western School Teacher, Detained 30 Hours, Testifies Against Assailant.

MORDEN, Man., Oct. 5.—The postponed preliminary hearing of the case against Geo. Brown, held at the provincial jail here, charged with assaulting Mrs. Frank Patterson, formerly Miss Gladys Price, the Riverdale school teacher, whom he kept for 30 hours in the bush, and also the attempted murder of William Adams, the Snowflake hotel proprietor, came up before Police Magistrate Lake at three o'clock this afternoon. Mrs. Patterson gave a clear and vivid description of her connection with the case, never faltering throughout her evidence.

Chas. McMillan, who followed Mrs. Patterson on the stand, and to whom it was at first reported the prisoner had confessed when arrested at Hannah, N.D., stated what the prisoner had told him, practically corroborating the evidence given by Miss Price. Magistrate Lake, after summing up the evidence of the abduction case, committed the prisoner to stand trial at the Fall Assizes, which are to be held here on the 24th of October.

The case of attempted murder was then dealt with. William Adams, the first witness, in giving his evidence, stated that he could not identify the prisoner as the party who shot him during the time of the man-hunt in the Snowflake district, but he gave a description of what occurred during the night of the shooting. McMillan, who followed Adams, stated that the prisoner had told him that he had shot Adams, and that he was sorry that he had done so. He had not meant to kill him, but only wished to stop him in trying to catch him. The magistrate, after hearing the evidence in the shooting case, directed that the prisoner be also sent up on the shooting charge. The prisoner throughout the proceedings showed his usual indifference.

TREATING FOREST AS A CROP

The progress of the Conservation policy of Canada, as applied to forest resources, depends more upon the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior than upon any other organization. Upon the technical knowledge and executive ability of the officers of the Forestry Branch depends the future of the forest on 16,000,000 acres of Dominion Forest Reserves, as well as upon the large area of non-agricultural forest land in Western Canada, which for the good of the country, may yet be set aside as permanent forest reserves. In addition to looking after Dominion lands the Forestry Branch is now being asked by eastern landowners to furnish advice as to the best means of securing at the earliest date a profitable crop of timber on waste land or woodlots. The proper administratoin of forest lands requires a special knowledge of trees best adapted to each region, of their uses, and of the markets. Further, there is needed knowledge of all trees especially of the merchantable species so that it may be known how rapidly they grow, how they produce their seed, when and under what conditions the seed germinates, and in what way the seedlings and young trees are affected by their surroundings. Such knowledge is gained only by long study and expereince. In order that the new Rock Mountain Forest Reserves may be administered according to the latest scientific knowledge and the best experience, the Forestry Branch is now making detailed studies of the habits of the merchantable species of trees on the Eastern slopes of the Rockies in Alberta and has sent one of the men in charge of the work to study the systems of forest management practised by the highly developed United States Forest Service during the past few years in the National Forests of Montana. The United States foresters have spent large sums of money and availed themselves of the expereinces of many men in developing plans of lumbering but which ensure the protection and production of the forest and the Canadian Forestry Branch intends to benefit largely by their experience.

WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The National Commission to-day decided to play the first of the world's baseball championship games at the Polo grounds here, Saturday, Oct. 14. The choice was determined by the toss of a coin.

The following schedule for the games was adopted: Oct. 14, 17 and 19 at New York; Oct. 16, 18 and 20 at Philadelphia. Should any of the games be postponed the visiting nine shall remain until it can be played. The seventh game, should it be necessary to decide the championship, will be played in New York. In the event of a tie the game must first be played off on the same grounds.

Tim Murnane, the Boston critic favors Athletics. He says:—"I am inclined to think that both Mathewson and Marquard will be discovered by the Quakers. When it comes to hitting, left-handed pitchers there is nothing to it, and Marquard has been thumped rather freely during the last month. I look for one or two of McGraw's second string men to make the most trouble for Connie Mack.

"If New York and the Athletics were in the same league the Quakers would have little trouble in beating out the Giants in my estimation. I believe they are stronger to-day than ever. I feel sure the Quakers will upset the dope and play the classiest kind of ball under pressure.

"The infield of the Athletics covers ground like a sprinkling cart. McInnis is a better man at first base than Harry Davis was last season while Collin, Barry and Baker will set the fans wild with their brilliant fielding. Both are fine hitting teams starting with the catchers. The New Yorkers are the fleetest base runners The Athletics will call the turn on the play five times where the Giants will twice. The club that wins the first game will have a valuable edge, and should this club be the Athletics it will seriously affect the Giants, while the Athletics are one of the best come-back clubs in the game.

"I look for the Athletics to play a waiting game, while the Giants will dash in and take chances in the hope of discovering the vital place in the Quakers' line-up. Baker, Barry, Collins and Thomas are new men to the McGraw line-up, rather sensitive fellows, and McGraw will try and take their minds off their work at times. McGraw is a past master in this line of work."

Acting Manager Doolan, of Philadelphia, says of the series:—"Our club has never had any trouble beating either Giants or Athletics. I know both teams like a book. Daring base running is the secret of the New York team's success; good pitching is Connie Mack's ace in the hole. Luck will be a big factor in the big series. Connie Mack had the luck with him when he beat Frank Chance last fall. This year New York may get the breaks, and if the Giants are lucky they'll win in a walk."

BOXING

Matt. Wells, the English lightweight champion, who is on this side of the herring pond in quest of bouts with Packey McFarland and Ad. Wolgast, the world's champion, knocked out Fighting Jack Donovan, of Passaic, N.J., in the fifth round at the Olympic Club, Toronto, last night. Wells has beaten Abe Attell and "Knockout" Brown since landing in New York, and looks like a logical aspirant for Wolgast's crown.

"Gentleman Jim" Corbett, who is showing at Shea's Theatre this week was an interested spectator, and expressed his admiration of Wells in strong terms.

Frank Judge and "Young Indian" of Buffalo boxed a six-round draw at 105 pounds. Herman Smith of Buffalo, knocked out George Forbes, of Toronto, in less than half a round The boys met at 126 pounds.

Harry Westerbee, one of the most popular of local boxers, put Tommy Linn, of Buffalo, out in the second round of their mill at 122 pounds. Westerbee is going strongly at present, and would make a great bout with Frankie Fleming. The management gave an added attraction to the card by unexpectedly putting Fleming and Jack McCracken on at catch weights. Frankie toyed with McCracken for three rounds.

The blow which sent Donovan into the land of dreams was a short right jolt. The Passaic man crumpled up rolled over on his back and was clean out. His seconds had some difficulty in "bringing him to," and the most solicitous man in the defeated boxer's corner was Wells himself.

Wells was far from being the equal of Donovan in height or reach, but one look at the Englishman, and his changing, shifty style, was enough to explain how he got a decision over Abe Attell in New York, where he must have had a margin of points a mile wide to be conceded the better of the bout. Wells was in and out like a flash, hitting hard with either hand, and was a puzzle to Donovan on the defensive. In the first three rounds he contented himself with solving Donovan's awkward style, and once he had sized up his man, he went at his task in a workmanlike manner. He looks like a hard nut for McFarland, Wolgast and any other eligibles to crack.

SUGAR A NECESSITY FOR YOUNG CHILDREN

Thrashings Administered for Stealing Jam a Monument to Ignorance, Says a Doctor

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Commending the raids of children on jam-pots and sugar bowls as obedience to instinct implanted by nature, the New York Medical Journal says we are a sugar-loving people, and the American public has become devoted to candy and other sweets. The writer adds that it is wise to give plenty of pure sugar to the young.

"There was a story written about 1865," says the writer, "by a then celebrated English author of tales for boys in which the hero returned to his school, Eton, after graduating from the university. Among the things he found to criticize was the lack of appreciation of sound claret among the schoolboys (!) and an unmanly taste for sweets.

"The amiable author, who was thus voicing his own ideas, died only some twelve years ago, probably a very bewildered old gentleman at the changes in taste and point of view that were taking place about him. A schoolboy of the present day who should manifest a critical attitude toward the bouquet of wine would be the object of acute interest to old ladies and alienists alike.

"A. Hopewell Smith, in his communication to the British Medical Journal on "The Abuse of Sweetmeats," still seems to retain the hostile British attitude toward candy; his statement that "sweetmeats as a food are practically of no benefit to the nation" is in direct contradiction to the opinion of modern physiologists and dietitians.

"Hutchinson, in the latest edition of the authoritative work, "Food and Dietetics," speaks highly of the value of sugar as a muscle food and recommends it to captains of football teams as a promoter of endurance. He says indeed, that it should not replace vegetables in the child's dietary, and thinks there is an increase in the number of cases of diabetes owing to its abuse, but his general tone is most favorable to the free use of sugar.

"We are only beginning to realize that the love of candy and jam in children is an instinct implanted by nature. The thrashings given to the children is an instinct implanted by pantry cupboard form an ugly monument to our ignorance of one of nature's beneficent plans. Sugar is a valuable muscle food as well as a necessity to the child's large proportion of adipose tissue. It is wise to give pure sugar to the young, avoiding simply the purchase of the cheaper kinds of candy, which contain adulterants added to give consistence and color. The best time to give it is immediately after a meal.

"Coincident with the general abandonment of alcoholic beverages or the substitution of moderation for excess in their use, the American public has become devoted to candy and other sweets. Our chefs now yield to none in the preparation of delicious ice and other desserts and second courses while our candies are exported to Europe. London, it is said, is being taught to love our ice cream soda our 'sundaes' and similar interesting if somewhat cloying mixtures.

"The connoisseur of wines and whiskies is never a candy lover; in some way the alcohol does the duty of sugar in his organism. Sugar and chocolate form part of the soldier's ration, and since the abolition of the sailor's daily grog, Jack has become such a lover of candy that tons of it are carried in the ships of the navy and a large part of his pocket money goes in the purchase of wholesome bon bons.

"A sherbet before the game is usual at our dinners, the demand for sugar refusing to be delayed until the end of the meal. Fortunately the cost of sugar has been greatly lowered during the past few decades, and sugar is no longer a luxury on the farmer's table while penny candies of harmless barley sugar are to be found in every village grocery and stationer's shop.

"Whatever effect sugar may have on the teeth is probably local, and is to be counteracted by careful brushing. The system resents too great a supply by a curious sense of repletion, and the child that eats obviously too much candy should be made the subject of clinical examination."

A Year Ahead of His Time.

Luxembourg was not so long ago a scene of an incident savoring decidedly of comic opera. When the late ruler of the Grand Duchy was Duke of Nassau he was officially informed of the death of his cousin, the King of the Netherlands, and promptly journeyed from Vienna to Luxembourg, to which state he was next in succession owing to the operation of the Salic law. A ceremonial entry was made into the capital, and the new Grand Duke had already received personal congratulations from many of his most prominent subjects, when he heard that King William's physicians had been misled by a cataleptic trance, and that, so far from being dead, he was on the road to recovery. So Duke Adolphus had to return to Vienna, and when, a year later, the King really passed away, several weeks elapsed before the new ruler of Luxembourg assumed the reins of government.

FEW DEFENDERS DEAD

Bombardment of Tripoli Was Not Very Disastrous.

Unconfirmed Reports Tell of a Series of Bombardments at Benghazi and Derna and Another Rumor Says an Italian Battleship Has Been Blown Up—Italy Continues to Summon Her Reserves.

London, Oct. 6.—The Italian flag floats over Sultana fort at Tripoli, which is occupied by landing parties. Part of the fleet is anchored in the harbor and the other warships lie a short distance from the dismantled fortifications. Few bodies of Turks have been found among the ruins of the forts, and apparently no great number of Turks were killed by the bombardment.

According to a Constantinople report, not yet confirmed, the Italian warships yesterday bombarded Benghazi and Derna. Various rumors concerning a naval engagement in Turkish waters, an attack against Mytileno and the blowing up of the Italian battleship Conte di Cavour at Tripoli have not been confirmed from any quarter.

An interesting report is current from Constantinople that while Germany favors the adoption of the Italian ultimatum as the basis of peace negotiations, Great Britain proposes that Tripoli shall become a privileged tributary Turkish vilayet under joint Turco-Italian administration, thus retaining the suzerainty of the Sultan.

Volunteer For Service.

Rome, Oct. 6.—Five thousand soldiers, natives of Erythraea, the Italian protectorate in Africa, have offered themselves for service in Tripoli.

Senator the Duke Carafa d'Andio has re-entered the army as a captain of cavalry.

Prince Prospero Colonna, who was formerly mayor of Rome, and is now a senator, has returned to the service as a major of cavalry.

The Giornale d'Italia says that detachments of marines have been landed at Tripoli to protect the consulate, the Italian church and hospital.

Aviators To Be Sent.

Naples, Oct. 6.—Nine military aviators with eight monoplanes and two biplanes will be sent to Tripoli. The aviators will be commanded by Capt. Piazza, who won the air race from Bologne to Venice.

To Mobilize Reserves.

Athens, Oct. 6.—Besides calling out the reservists in Epirus on Oct. 3, the Government proposes to mobilize part of the reserves in Thessaly. The number will be limited to a few thousand—sufficient to protect the frontier against any attempted coup on the part of Turkey. A circular will be sent to the Powers.

Changes His Mind.

Corfu, Oct. 6.—The ultimatum of Vice-Admiral, the Duke of Abruzzi, threatening to bombard Prevesa, has been withdrawn.

Italians Landing.

Malta, Oct. 6.—Fugitives from Tripoli who arrived last night, say that small parties of Italians are landing all along the coast from Tripoli to Benghazi. It is believed, however, that there will be no landing in force until the main expedition arrives. Small bodies of Arabs skirmished with the landing parties.

Called From Switzerland.

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 6.—Six thousand Italians living in Switzerland have been called to the reserves, but a large proportion of them have refused to go. Meetings of protest have been held, and some hundreds have declared that they will renounce their nationality and become Swiss subjects, rather than serve under the colors.

Make Him a Farm-Lover

Your hired man is now with you for the harvest. He can have his sleeping quarters in the hay loft or the caboose, as he ought to want nothing better. Should he show unusual readiness for work, this is a quality which should be encouraged, and 18 hours should be got out of him a day. Get him to work right after each meal, as a hired man has no business to fear indigestion, and he can get his rest at night. If he's inexperienced at farming, an ocacsional sneer when he makes a mistake will brace him up, and prevent him from repeating the blunder. Give him as many chores to do as possible, especially on Sundays, or he might get into idle ways. Try and prevent him from running off to town on Saturday nights, too, where habits of dissipation might get hold of him. A couple of hours' relaxation with the bucksaw will stop this. A policy like this will put any hired man in love with farming and with you too.

Horses and Swamp Fever

At present the exact cause of swamp fever is not known, but the veterinary officials of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, and the United States Bureau of Animal Industry have the disease under investigation, so we may be enlightened as to the cause, prevention, and possibly its treatment at an early date. However, there are many plants which horses and cattle eat, that are of a poisonous nature. Hemlock is one, but the symptoms of poisoning from the ingestion of these plants have no resemblance to those of swamp fever. But it is a fact that horses having access to swamps are very liable to become victims of the fever. The theory is that they are bitten by some blood-sucking insect, for instance one of the many species of mosquito, which in biting the horse inoculate him with the germ or parasite that produces the disease. It is best to keep horses away from sloughs if possible.

All young animals quickly learn to eat ground oats. It makes profitable gain at small cost compared with many other foods.

Mrs. Pankhurst Coming Back.

Southampton, Oct. 5.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Miss Mary Pethick sailed on the steamer Oceanic yesterday for New York, to make a suffragist tour. The train that brought them here was decorated with the suffragist colors. They were given a demonstrative send-off on leaving London yesterday morning.

AGED WOMAN READ BURIAL SERVICE AS SHE ENDED HER LIFE

She Sat Before the Picture of Her Soldier Husband and Took Gas—Was Dressed in Her Best Gown—A New $100 Bill as a Present to Her Landlady—Left Strongbox Supposed to Contain Fortune

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Many times in the last year, since the death of her husband, Charles Maier, who was one of Gen. Franz Sigel's civil war veterans, Mrs. Mary M. Maier, his aged widow, had told her landlady, Mrs. Margaret Maynes, that she was weary of living without him in their little home on the second floor of 359 Linwood Avenue, East New York. She had no children and few relatives called to see her. Mrs. Maynes who lives on the ground floor, used to go up occasionally to comfort her, and cheer her up. But the venerable woman remained disconsolate. Mrs. Maynes told the neighbors she seemed as heartbroken as a bride over the death of her husband, and kept her eyes continually upon his portrait in the living room showing him in his uniform of wartime days.

Mrs. Haynes noticed that the apartment overhead seemed quieter than usual yesterday, and in the afternoon she went up stairs to investigate. Almost immediately she detected a very strong smell of gas and hurried into the flat. The doors were unlocked, and she entered, finding the gas fumes dense.

In the dining room, seated in a rocking chair at the table, just opposite the picture of her old soldier hero, sat Mrs. Maier, dead. A tube leading from the gas jet overhead was tied in her mouth with her apron strings. In her stiffened fingers she held an open German prayer-book, and the passage she had been reading when death crept over her was the Lutheran burial service. She wore her finest gown, and in her white hair she had thrust a bright sprig of flowers.

There were several letters in envelopes on the table beside her. All were addressed in German, and one of them was addressed to Mrs. Maynes. This one the landlady read, but she mailed the rest without reading even the addresses.

The letter to Mrs. Maynes inclosed a crisp, new $100 bill, and bade her accept that as a token of the old woman's appreciation for kindness shown to her in life. The letter also contained these words:

"I have waited patiently for death, but it would not come. Now I seek it. Dress me like a bride, for I am going to meet my dear husband. I want my body to be kept for three days and three nights in this room where he and I were so happy. Drape the rooms in black, though, for our happiness is dead and only a memory now."

There was also on the table a black tin box, securely locked ,and this was referred to in the letter to Mrs. Maynes as "the strong box." The letter contained the request that this box be not opened until all the dead woman's relatives—nephews and nieces were the nearest, she said—were present to witness the ceremony. The box was taken charge of by the police.

What it contains remains a matter of conjecture, but Mrs. Maynes said last night that the aged woman had frequently given her to understand that she was comfortably provided for and had between $50,000 and $75,000, mostly in bonds, with some cash and jewelry. Several times, too, the landlady said, pension checks had been mailed to Mrs. Maier by the War Department, but she invariably sent them back, saying that she had no use for the money and it might be needed more by other pensioners.

The police were unable last night to locate any of Mrs. Maier's relatives but believe that the letters which Mrs. Maynes says she mailed will bring them out in a day or two.

CANADA ADVERTISED TO EARTH'S END

After more than six months in Great Britain and Europe, Hugh Maitre, private secretary and general confidential agent of John Hendry, returned to Vancouver yesterday.

At the Hotel Vancouver this morning Mr. Maitre declared that abroad a man's Canadian citizenship was worth all the passports and credentials in the world.

"Canada," said Mr. Maitre, "is on the lips of the financial men of the British Isles and of every country on the continent. British Columbia is regarded as the favorite province of the Dominion."

Discussing the election results, Mr. Maitre declared that he believed that the reciprocity fight is worth to western Canada about $100,000,000 annually. Discussion throughout the world in the magazines and newspapers, printed in all tongues, on the issues of the last election took the form of a general advertising campaign of the resources of Canada that could scarcely be purchased with money, he said.—Vancouver World.

BORDEN THANKS WEST HASTINGS

On Friday, September 22, the day after the general election, Mr. Stanley Vandervoort, as President of the West Hastings Conservative Association, sent a message of congratulation to Hon. R. L. Borden. The following reply has been received from the Premier-elect:

House of Commons,

Dear Mr. Vandervoort,—

Many thanks for your kind telegram of the 22nd, inst. Will you kindly convey to our West Hastings friends my hearty thanks for their congratulations. I am more than pleased to learn that West Hastings has again returned my good friend, Porter, with a handsome majority. He well merits the confidence of West Hastings.

With kind remembrance, believe me,
Yours faithfully,
R. L. BORDEN.

HIGH ALBANIA DESCRIBED BY CORRESPONDENT AS A WILDERNESS

LONDON, Oct. 6.—A woman writing on June 11 at Zatrijebac, a village on the Montenegrin frontier, says that the need of Albanian refugees is even greater than that of the Macedonians after the rising of 1903. She says in part:

"High Albania is now a desolate wilderness. All the women and children, with a few exceptions who have been burned in their houses, being too infirm to escape, are refuging here. They are now faced with starvation. In this district are 2,144 persons, in all Montenegro some 20,000. Numbers here are scattered in caves and holes on the mountainside, the rest crowded into any possible hut.

"The bulk of the refugees have nothing whatever. Many of them are in rags that hardly hold together. Were it not for the charity of Montenegro they would not now be alive. A child died of starvation a few days ago. A woman came in last night weeping and praying for a scrap of bread for her child. Unless help be forthcoming quickly the mortality will soon be terrible.

"Great relief and terror r[illegible] for the Turkish army has a[illegible] two months hard fighting cut its way through the mountains, and the tribes of the district are thus cut off from all help before their women have had time to escape.

"Turkish vengeance is wrecked on the churches, which are desecrated in every possible way. The object of the army seems to be to expatriate the Catholics from the land. When I was in Scutari (Albania) last year the Young Turk officers were already boasting that in a few years time all Christians would be forced to keep Ramazan and shut their shops on Friday. They appear to be keeping their word.

"The constitution, of which they (the villagers) hoped so much, has done nothing but betray them from the beginning. A long series of imprisonments without trial and of foolish and tyrannical measures has destroyed all hope and faith. As things now stand, the desperate band of insurgents declare that death is preferable to further life under the Turk. They had fought and are fighting against terrible odds with the greatest courage, the courage of despair. If the civilized world could but see the way in which the Turks are introducing 'reform' into this empire it would stand aghast—a 'reform' which creates a wilderness and calls it peace.

"No corn has been sown or can be sown in the whole of the devastated district this year. Little has been sown in Montenegro, as a large proportion of the able bodied men of the country are on duty as frontier guards. Every day the process of devastation is going on and the want is increasing. In a short time unless foreign help is forthcoming a large part of the Albanian nation must perish."

"I have just returned from seeing refugees on mountain. They are reduced to chopping asphodel leaves and stinging nettles and boiling them in petroleumn cans. Starvation has set in and disease. There are 50 families on the bare mountain side. Torrential rains pour every few days. The soaked and miserable creatures are crying for food. Be quick or you will be too late."

A FAMILY RECORD.

The death of Mrs. Daniel Tripp in the township of Hillier, the other day, brings out a wonderful family record. Deceased is survived by a family of ten children, forty-eight grandchildren, and thirty-four great-grandchildren. Mrs. Tripp was aged eighty-four, and her husband, still living is a few years her senior.

DANGER FROM FIRE.

The season of the year when artificial heat is required for comfort in this country is now here. Canada suffers enormous loss from the effects of accidental fires, and Belleville has been no exception to this rule. A good scheme is being introduced in Illinois. Governor Deneen of that state has asked the people to observe the fortieth anniversary of the Chicago fire as Fire Prevention Day. It will be at once a day for cleaning up and for taking account of provisions against fire. Citizens are urged to give personal attention to the removal of all rubbish and debris from their premises, to set their heating appliances in safe and proper condition for winter use, and to see that all chimneys and flues are carefully examined.

THE LAST SAD RITES.

Under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity the funeral of the late ex-Alderman Green took place this afternoon from the family residence, James street. There was a large turnout of the members of the craft and citizens generally to pay the last tribute of respect to one who in life had many friends. An impressive service was conducted at the house by the Rev. R. C. Blagrave, Rector of Christ Church. At the house and the grave a Masonic service was also held. The floral tributes were many and beautiful in design. The bearers were members of the craft, namely, Bros. W. Webster, J. M. Farley, S. Curry, A. R. Thompson, Mayor Ackerman and E. G. Porter, K. C. M. P. Interment took place at Belleville cemetery.

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

A memorial service for the late James Turner will be held in the S. A. Citadel to-morrow evening at 7.30.

THE FIRST SNOW.

This section of the country was yesterday afternoon visited by the first snow storm of the season, and it was certainly a good one for the first effort, evidences of it being upon buildings at an early hour this morning.

COLLISION IN G.T.R. YARD.

At three o'clock this morning a collision took place in the G. T. R. yard here which fortunately was not of a serious nature. A double header train was coming into the yard from over the Grand Junction division, when a light engine which was taking a cross switch collided with the incoming train. A box car was badly damaged and a brakeman was thrown to the track, but escaped with slight bruises.

AGGRAVATED ASSAULT.

A man named Brooks will on Tuesday next be tried here before Judge Deroche on a serious charge, preferred by Mrs. Wm. Wright. The offence occurred on Monday last at Marmora, and the Herald has the following to say of the case:

The affair took place near the south end of Forsythe street, where Mrs. Wright was going for milk. The man came up behind her and putting his arms around her attempted to throw her into the bushes. He was unsuccessful in this, but Mrs. Wright fell against the edge of the sidewalk and began screaming for help. Her assailant then attempted to choke her, and hit her in the face. Finding that he could not overpower her, and fearing that her cries would attract attention he left her and evidently started to leave town for Deloro, but he was soon captured by Constable Gillen.

WM. THOMPSON BURIED.

The remains of the late Mr. Wm. Thompson were interred this afternoon and many were present at the obsequies. The impressive burial services of the Anglican church were conducted at Christ Church by the Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, who also officiated at the grave in Belleville cemetery. Upon the casket were placed a number of floral tributes. The bearers were: Messrs. W. Carter, H. McIninch, P. Meagher, J. Harris, R. McCormick, and C. Rathman.

RABBITS STOLEN.

It was reported to the police that two rabbits had been stolen from a pen on Alexander street. The police are endeavoring to ascertain where the bunnies have gone. A boy was the owner of them and prized them highly.

TO CELEBRATE THEIR VICTORY.

The Northumberland Club of Cobourg have extended to their friends here a cordial invitation to be with them on Tuesday evening next, October 10th, to assist in celebrating the grand victory of the Conservative party in the country, and in West Northumberland in particular. The celebration will strt with a torchlight procession through the main streets, also fireworks, and conclude with a public meeting in the Victoria Opera House at 8 p. m., where short addresses will be given by a number of prominent speakers.

TO BUILD NEW SHIP.

To test her speed under new engine equipment, the Str. Geronia made a special trip to Kingston last Saturday afternoon and established a satisfactory speed limit. She averaged 16 miles an hour on the run. The trip was made the occasion of the presentation of a new set of flags to the new steamer. The colors were the gift of the town of Picton. Presentation has been delayed from the summer time. In accepting the colors on behalf of the company, B. R. Hepburn, M. P., president and general manager, thanked the citizens of Picton for this gift. He made the important announcement that a sister ship to the Geronia would be built within the next couple of years by the company.—Gazette.

HIS NARROW ESCAPE.

A rumor became quite freely circulated upon the street this morning that William Hughes, an employee of the Dominion House, had been found dead in bed. Whilst such proved not to be the case, William had a narrow escape from death by asphyxiation. It appears that when he retired last night he turned the gas off in his room and then evidently turned it on again. Escaping gas caused an investigation to be made with the result that Hughes room was entered and he was found in an unconscious condition. Restoratives were applied, with the result that the victim was revived. Later in the day he was able to be about. The window in Hughes' room being partially up, no doubt saved his life.

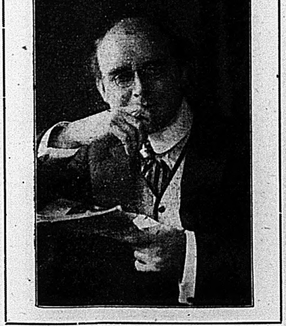
KINGSTON MEN MEET

Wherever one goes in Western Canada he will meet a former Kingston man. Here is an example: Recently in the city of Saskatoon, Sask., a druggist was tried for selling liquor without a license. He was formerly of Kingston. The prosecutor was a former Kingston lawyer, and the Police Magistrate was also both a Queen's graduate and a Kingston lawyer.—Whig.



GATTY SELLERS,

England's greatest organist and composer, ranks among the best musicians in England appearing with Agnes Nichols, Kirby Lun, Albani, Marchesi, Paderewski, and Dr. Hans Richter, etc. Mr. William Short, the King's trumpeter, is a marvel. The valve trumpet is much finer and more brilliant than a cornet, and in the hands of Mr. Short, the tone will carry far above the largest organ in the world. Hear these musicians at the Tabernacle Church, Wednesday evening, Oct. 11th. o7d2t

CONVICTS PLAY BASEBALL.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 5.—The first ball game between the east cell house team and the west cell house team at the Atlanta Federal Prison was played yesterday. The silence rule was lifted, and the bleachers rooted as though a world's championship were at stake.

Behind the players, in front of them, on either side, stretched the dingy gray walls. But the men on the sward kept their eyes on the ball. The west cell house won by a score of 12 to 7.

The game was made possible by the coming to Atlanta of R. V. Ladow, Superintendent of Federal Prisons, who arrived here yesterday from Fort Leavenworth ,Kan., and in his honor an "off day" was announced at the prison.

The umpire also was a convict, but no one threatened his life; neither was he called "robber" or "thief."

IMPRISONED IN A STEAMSHIP HOLD

SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 6.—Alfred Stiles, a longshoreman of this place, is believed to be confined in the hold of the tramp steamer Pathan, now on its way to Liverpool, and it is feared he will be dead when the ship reaches its destination. At midnight, Saturday when the steamer left Savannah, a count of the longshoremen who had been loading the Pathan revealed the fact that Stiles was missing.

It is believed that he fell asleep in the hold and that the hatches were battened down without waking him.

The Pathan is not equipped with wireless. It is not believed that Stiles will be able to make his presence known to the crew of the steamer.

SHOT WITH GOLD BULLETS

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 3.—Bullets of gold were used by Yaqui Indians in fighting against the Porfirio Diaz regime in the recent Mexican revolution according to the passengers arriving here yesterday on the steamer Curacao from Mexican ports.

In Mazatlan hospitals, where many wounded were operated upon, discovery of the golden pellets, it was said, was an ordinary occurrence, although few patients had received enough of them to pay the doctors' bills.

LAURIER CABINET HAS RESIGNED, MR BORDEN TO FORM MINISTRY

He Officially Undertakes to Form a New Government,

In a Historic Afternoon's Work at Ottawa Sir Wilfrid Laurier Goes to Earl Grey and Resigns Position of First Minister—Mr. Borden Is Immediately Summoned and Asked to Take Charge—Cabinet on Monday.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—The Laurier Administration is no more, and Canada to-day is without a Government. At three o'clock yesterday afternoon Sir Wilfrid Laurier left his office in the east block, drove out to Government House ad formally tendered his resignation.

The next step was a message from His Excellency to Mr. Borden's secretary asking the leader of the Conservative party to come to see the Governor-General.

Mr. Borden drove out to Rideau Hall and from six to seven o'clock was closeted with the representative of the crown.

He was asked to form a Government and undertook the task.

There was little of the dramatic about the final scenes. The members of the Liberal Cabinet met at 10.30 yesterday morning and remained in session until 1.30.

It was the final meeting, and at its close Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues left the council chamber for the last time.

The outgoing Premier appeared to be in high spirits and was chatting gaily with Mr. Paterson and Mackenzie King.

To the newspaper men gathered outside the room, he cheerily announced his intention of visiting Earl Grey in the afternoon. He waved his hand and with a brief "good-bye boys," he entered his cab and drove home.

Shortly after three o'clock Sir Wilfrid Laurier drove up to Rideau Hall. He was immediately ushered into Lord Grey's presence, and the formality of tendering the resignations took but a brief space. Then the outgoing Premier chatted with the King's representative for some time, and took his farewell.

At 4.30 Arthur Sladen, Earl Grey's private secretary, called up Mr. Borden on the telephone, and asked if it would be convenient for him to wait upon the Governor-General at six o'clock. Then a more formal message was se[illegible] over [illegible] hand [illegible] was ready for the final act in the drama.

Just before six o'clock Mr. Borden passed out of the door at his residence on Wurtemburg street and entered the waiting cab. Mrs. Borden smilingly watched him leave, and also Hon. Frank Cochrane, who happened to be with the new Premier when the vice-regal messenger came.

The old gardener stopped sweeping up the autumn leaves as the carriage went by and said, "Good luck, sir." "Thank you, John," was Mr. Borden's smiling reply as the cab whirled away to Rideau Hall.

He accepted the task of forming a Government and asked for a day or two's delay—the customary request. Within an hour he was back at his home.

Now Mr. Borden has formally undertaken the work matters will move swiftly. The official slate will be given out on Monday.

There is likely to be a shake-up in the distribution of portfolios. Thus Mr. Foster is generally slated for Secretary of State and Minister of External Affairs, while Marine may go to British Columbia. Mr. Doherty is conceded to have the right of way to the portfolio of Justice.

In a few days the ex-Ministers will have scattered to all points of the country. Sir Fred Borden has sold his fine residence. Mr. Fielding will continue to reside here for some time.

Monday will see the official list of the men who will assist Mr. Borden in the Government of Canada.

T. W. Crothers, of West Elgin, is now suggested as the probable speaker of the House

May Re-enter Politics.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—Hon. Geo. P. Graham will likely re-enter public life and go back to the House of Commons. The ex-Minister of Railways is in Toronto at present, attending the ecumenical conference.

Mr. Graham says his friends are very anxious to have him go back to the House, and already he has been offered two seats in Ontario and several in Quebec.

There are also some flattering offers in the business world waiting for him if he cares to abandon public life, but Mr. Graham will hardly persuade himself to leave his old love. He prefers to re-enter the fight, though he does have to sit in the cold shades of opposition. Hon. Mr. Graham says there is a possibility that he may spend the first short session in the press gallery. He thinks it would be an enjoyable occupation, for a little while at least.

CURRENT COMMENT

A horse named Frog Legs won a race at Baltimore. He ought to be a good one over the jumps.

A chauffeur who ran over and killed a boy in New York, escaped to Texas, was brought back and sentenced to from seven to twenty years in state prison, has had his sentence affirmed by the Court of Appeals. The lesson is needed.

United States Senator Stephenson, of Wisconsin, is being investigated by a committee of the august body to which he belongs and has stated that his election cost him $107,793. He does not think that any of the sum was used for bribing the people who voted for him. If no one was bribed he had better try and ascertain who stole the money.

The returns show that on election day in Chicoutimi and Saguenay 9,428 ballots were cast. In 1908 the total was just under 4,500. This increase, the Montreal Gazette says, shows the result of Quebec diverting the attention to the agricultural possibilities of that region of the country. It would be well, before forming an opinion upon that point, to ascertain how many names were on the voters' lists.

Hon. Mr. Graham alleges that those big contracts that the defeated Government have taken upon themselves to let, were all right. If so, why not have left it for the incoming Administration to deal with them? The people having condemned the former administrators of their affairs, those gentlemen ought not to have performed any administrative act following their condemnation, other than those of timely moment.

"My eye!" exclaimed an admirer of the Laurier Naval Policy, "Is Canada not lucky in having a genuine war navy of its own." "Certainly," exclaimed an unbeliever, "here is our first experience: The Canadian warship, Niobe, ran ashore and is now undergoing repairs at a cost to the country of $400,000. Would it not be well, as the ship was not new when she was bought for $1,000,000, and as she will never again be a first-class vessel, even when repaired, to scrap the ruins and start the navy afresh?"

Just prior to the election cheese in Canada sold at a record-breaking price and just after the election it took a slight drop. Of course the rattled Liberal editors shrieked that it was a Tory political plot. The Tory organization was pretty good, but how in the name of heaven, it could control the prices of cheese only a Grit editor could conceive. However, it may reassure the Liberal editors to know that cheese is still maintaining its high price with Mr. Borden in power, strange as it may seem to them.—Brockville Times.

The chief Analyst of the Department of Inland Revenue says that for the last thirty-three years, forty per cent of the pepper used in Canada has consisted of substances which have no legitimate right to pose as pepper. Ground olive stones, it appears, is the most common of these adulterants, but wheat husks, powdered cocoanut shells and a dozen other different kinds of cheaper grains have been used to give variety. So well recognized, in fact, is the olive stone preparation, that it has come to be known as "poivrette" or "little pepper."

A real student of human nature can do no better than to talk with a man who understands the book business from whom he learns practically all the human indiosyncrasies, limitations affectations and all other remifications of these. "A cover should be red," said one of the cult to us the other day, "because it sells better; it is more attractive to people. If we dress our window in mauve, grey or some other genteel color, we attract no one. On the other hand, if we dress our window in red books, we have a side-walk audience in two minutes." We're a funny tribe, aren't we!

Reports from Vancouver state that an agent of the Duke of Sutherland has obtained options on nearly thirty miles of agricultural lands on both sides of the South Thompson river, extending eastward from near Kamloops. A great deal of this area is under cultivation. The major portion will not be productive until an irrigation system is installed. The purchase price will exceed $500,000. While it is gratifying to know that English capitalists are investing largely in this country, it is questionable whether it is in the interests of the Dominion that any one man should own and control so large a tract of land. Much better to have it occupied by hundreds of families.

The Montreal Gazette says: "The Attorneys-General of the provinces were not ready to proceed before the Supreme Court with the case that will settle the question they raised about the right of the Parliament and Government of Canada to grant corporate powers to commercial companies. More noise was made over the matter a year or so ago. It was alleged that the creation of a company by federal letters patent was an infringement of provincial rights. When the federal authorities prepared a case that would have brought forth a ruling decision, the provinces hung back, and still hang back. It will look to some as if they did not expect any good to them would come from pressing forward." This important point should be pushed to a conclusion by the Minister of Justice. It is of too serious a character to be left dangling.

Parents who are at great pains to inform themselves about the books young people read often give no thought to the plays they see.

A bad book is harmful enough, Heaven knows, luring youth to hide for a debauch in indecency. But from such an experience youth returns soiled and shamed, certain that decent people would not countenance such performances.

But a bad play! There vice enacts itself in the public gaze; with many supposedly decent people in the audience.

Youth is wide-eyed. Instantly it suspects that indecency can not be the sporadic, exceptional thing youth has been taught to think it. It must be general. Maybe it is universal. Maybe everybody is bad. Is purity only pretence? Is innocence only unsophistication? Is it manhood and womanhood to know and do such things?

You see what infinite possibilities for harm lurk in a bad play, and why we ought to keep plays wholesome and helpful.

Nothing can be so helpful as a good play, just because it does intimate the universality of purity and nobility: just because it does inspire youth to emulate the best.

Proud Rome promptly fell into doddering senility when her youth learned only of gluttony and the luxuries of bath and bedchamber from the fathers and mothers.

If Canada is to keep her proper place, the fathers and mothers must have a care of plays and literature and their own lives and ideals.

What was it the Master said? Better a millstone about your neck than offend a child. Playwrights and managers, and book and magazine writers and publishers, are under the most insistent obligation to look to that responsibility.

Grit Press Demoralized

The Liberal press is badly divided on the result of the recent election, and as to whether the party should bury reciprocity for good and all. As we intimated some days ago, there is strong resentment felt towards the Globe, are rising in protest. These party to its debacle.

Not content with this, the leading Liberal organ seeks to nail reciprocity to the masthead of the party and it has been seconded in that endeavor by lesser lights of the party.

Conservatives will hope that such advice will be taken by the Liberal party, whose wanderings in the wilderness of Opposition are likely to be thereby indefinitely prolonged. But saner counsels are not wanting. The more virile sections of the Liberal party, newspapers which speak for themselves, and not as an echo of the Globe, are rising in protest. These declare that reciprocity as a plank in the Liberal platform should be smashed to kindling wood and consumed in a red hot fire.

The Ottawa Free Press, for instance, after pointing out that what the electorate objected to was what they regarded in the nature of a dangerous entanglement with the U. S. goes on to say:

> If the Toronto Globe is to be interpreted as advocating the maintenace of the reciprocity plank in the Liberal platform, the Free Press asserts that it is out of touch with Canadian and Liberal opinion.

The Montreal Herald speaks better for Liberalism when it says:

> "That this particular proposition for a trade bargain with the United States should be nailed to the masthead by the Liberals is uncalled for by loyalty to any principle, and a grave political mistake will be made if the project is not dropped from the Liberal agenda."
>
> "Reciprocity with the United States by agreement is dead in Canada—and dead, we believe, for all time to come."

From these differences of opinion it it quite evident that the Liberal party's emancipation from its reciprocity shackles is not going to be brought about in a year or a few years. Entered into heedlessly, it will prove a difficult thing to shake off.

A Candid Confession

The Montreal Witness, although an ardent supporter of the Laurier Government, whilst they were in power, has, since the defeat of its party, been decidedly more candid than it was before the landslide of September 21st. In its issue of the 6th inst., it says:—

> A name persistently proposed for the succession to Mr. Parent's position as head of the Transcontinental Railway Commission is that of Sir Thomas Tait, than whom none could be more worthy or more acceptable to the country. Sir Thomas has as much and as varied railway experience as any man of his years, and his successful career proves his natural capacity. This would not be a political appointment, like that of his predecessor, who was no expert in such matters, and who never convinced the world of his capacity therein to protect the public interests. Sir Thomas will not, if we judge him right, stand for political appointments under him, a process by which every public service is vitiated. Many of our best engineers, who have proved their powers in foreign lands, have been exiled from Canada by this abominable system of political pull.

What the Witness says, as above quoted, is as true as gospel. Previous to September 21st it was as true as it is now; but the Witness had not up to that time expressed the opinion which it now does.

However, the political appointee, who is truly "no expert in such matters," is about to resign. The Witness will no doubt be delighted to learn that hereafter "political pull' will not cause the exile of our best engineers, that the Commission will be conducted on business principles, and that there will be a searching investigation into the charges made in connection with the construction of the Transcontinental, which inquiry was blocked by the partizans in Parliament of the Laurier Government.

What Are Their "Principles?"

The Calgary "Albertan" is whistling to keep its courage up. It whines out the following:

> "The defeat of the Liberal party upon a question of principle has been an inspiration to the Liberal party, which really is in a better position now than at any time in recent years. With Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Opposition, fighting for the cause of Liberalism, the party will continue the battle of Liberalism."

It would be exceedingly interesting to learn what the "principles" of the so-called Liberal party are. They preach one thing out of office and practice another in office. The fact is they have but one abiding principle and that is "office."

That Offer

It will be remembered that Mr. Mikel deposited with The Intelligencer during the election contest $25, challenging Mr. Jas. Anderson, of Ameliasburg, to cover it with a similar amount, and that if Mr. Anderson could prove the farmers of the United States were opposed to the reciprocity pact, Mr. Mikel's $25 was to be handed over to the Belleville Hospital, and that if he failed to do so, Mr. Anderson's $25 was to be disposed of in like manner. Mr. Anderson having failed to meet the challenge, Mr. Mikel's $25 has been handed back to him and the hospital fund suffers to that extent.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

APPEAL TO THE KING

Turks Ask British Monarch to Intervene in War.

Telegrams of Protest Are Sent to Parliaments All Over the World and to All Organizations Interested in the Preservation of Peace—Battleship San Marco Returns With the Story of Shelling of Tripoli.

Constantinople, Oct. 7.—At a meeting held yesterday in the Mosque of St. Sophia a telegram of protest against Italy's declaration of war on Turkey was formulated and sent to all the Parliaments of the world, peace and arbitration societies, universities, Socialist organizations and The Hague Peace Trbunal.

The telegram says the occupation of Tripoli is unjustified and that Italy is unworthy of a place among the great Powers. It asks whether western civilization has considered the effect upon the eastern mind of Italy's brigandage.

The meeting also sent the following message to King George of England.

"How can a power like England, ruling between 80,000,000 and 90,000,000 of Moslems, regard wih complaisant silence the declaration of war against the Ottoman nation and the blockade of Tripoli? Is such policy in harmony with the present and future interests of England."

Annoy the Italian Officers.

Rome, via Frontier, Oct. 7.—Rear Admiral Borea d'Olmo, who has been appointed Italian governor of Tripoli, is a distinguished naval officer and son of the master of ceremonies at His Majesty's court. He commanded the cruiser Elba, which participated in the blockade of Venezuela and witnessed the battle off Chemulpo during the Russo-Japanese war when he rescued 200 Russian sailors after their cruiser Variag was destroyed.

Captain Umberto Cagni, who was made commandant of the landing parties, is president of the international polar commission and was a companion of the Duke of Abruzzi on the latter's Alaskan and North Pole exhibition. He was one of the few officers at Messina at the time of the great earthquake, who remained calm when others lost their heads.

The intention of the Italian Government to avoid further incidents on the Albanian coast was frustrated either because Captain Biscaretti, in command of a section of the torpedo boat flotilla had not received the instructions on this point or being provoked by the Turks assumed responsibility for his action.

In order to avoid a repetition of such an occurrence, the Admiralty Office, upon the suggestion of Vice-Admiral the Duke of the Abruzzi has recalled all the ships cruising along the Albanian coast and adopted another plan to protect Italian steamers from attacks by the Turks. This plan is kept secret.

It is understood that Rear Admiral Aubrey is manoeuvring in the Aegean Sea, intending to have his warships so placed that he can capture without destroying the whole Turkish fleet if it dares to emerge from its hiding place.

How the Turks Were Fooled.

Syracuse, Italy, Oct. 7.—The Italian battleship San Marco arrived here yesterday from Tripoli. She steamed throughout the night without lights, in order to avoid detection by Turkish torpedo boats, which are still cruising with surprising audacity, about the Italian fleet. During the trip the San Marco stopped a steamer, which proved to be British-owned. It was allowed to proceed.

The officers of the battleship described the bombardment of Tripoli as having been arranged with great care in order to spare the enemy as much as possible. At the last moment Vice-Admiral Faravelli decided not to bombard even the palace and so the governor was left undisturbed, though the batteries adjacent were silenced.

The Turkish soldiers gave proof of extraordinary courage. Frequently they exposed themselves unnecessarily. It appears from statements made by prisoners taken that the Turks did not at first realize their inferiority. The Government of Constantinople and the local authorities had instilled in them the conviction that Italy was an insignificant country and weaker than Greece.

When they saw the imposing fleet assembled off the coast they were assured by their officers that the vessels were not Italian, but British warships, which had been ordered to Tripoli to prevent its occupancy by the Italians. Notwithstanding this deception and the subsequent disillusionment the Turkish gunners responded bravely to the attack and made a good fight considering the equipment at their disposal.

Factories To Be Established Here.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 7.—Irving Schaffer, secretary-treasurer of the Richelieu Securities Co., Buffalo, fiscal agents, yesterday about completed negotiations for the establishment here of a branch of the American company, manufacturing vacuum-cleaners. He said that a plant would be in operation by the spring. He is also negotiating for the establishment here of a Canadian branch of the Stotts Railway Signal Co.

"I know of at least a score of large American concerns that will establish branches in Canada. They did not finally decide to locate in Canada until the pact was turned down," said Mr. Schaffer.

Died of Injuries.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—After lying in a semi-conscious condition in St. Joseph Hospital, Parry Sound, as the result of being struck by a falling log, Joseph Patnote, 222 Wellesley street, succumbed to concussion of the brain. Mr. Patnote was directing the removal of a boom of logs when one struck his head. Another man was also injured, but will probably recover.

His Second Misfortune.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—It turns out that Roy Brintnell, whose auto killed the woman on Yonge street Thursday, was also in charge of the auto which, in December, two years ago, struck Mr. Donald Gunn, who was alighting from a car. Before he died, Mr. Gunn exonerated the driver from any blame.

Buffalo Centre, Iowa, Oct. 7.—The Pennsylvania I. Pilot balloon, in the James Gordon Bennett Cup race, has landed near here. It encountered a storm. Neither occupant was injured

WANTED TO VOMIT

A Condition Involving Both Liver and Stomach that was Quickly Cured By Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"The doctors told me my sickness was caused by complications of the stomach and liver," writes Mrs. E. P. Fourraine, well known in Williamsport. "The least little error in eating would cause nausea, and after a time actual vomiting was easily excited. I grew very thin, pale, with dark lines under the eyes; my strength so failed that even light housework exhausted me. Of course, with a large family I could not afford a doctor all the time, and when in deepest despair I tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills. From the very first they acted wonderfully, and I experienced a desire for food and ate my meals with a relish. After a while my system became quite regular, and that horrid sick feeling only came now and again. This made me persevere, and it was a good thing I did so, because the continuation of Dr. Hamilton's Pills was the means of giving me my health again, and I am now the happiest woman I know."

Every person with stomach trouble can be cured with Dr. Hamilton's Pills—refuse any substitute. At all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Mr. Thomas D. Stanley, magistrate of St. Mary's, is dead.

The big freighter Corunna ran aground on Welcome Island.

Afanasi Lesnick, a Russian, stabbed a fellow-countryman to death on Higgins avenue, Winnipeg, Thursday night.

The Winnipeg Council has decided to drop negotiations for the purchase of the street railway and allied interests.

Following a heavy rain yesterday afternoon the weather turned cold, and snow fell for a couple of hours a Brockville.

Three young children of Alex. Lachance of Fersol, Quebec, were burned to death in a fire that destroyed the family dwelling.

A heavy earthquake occured in Hayti at 5.30 yesterday morning. No damage was done. There were three shocks at Turk Island.

One man was shot and probably fatally wounded late Thursday night when a party of Illinois Central strikebreakers were fired upon at New Orleans.

William Burnisky of Carthage, N.Y., was yesterday sentenced to two years and six months in the penitentiary for importing white slaves from Oxbow, N.B.

Percy G. Call, a Montrealer, was sentenced to Central Prison for one year for forgery. He cashed bogus checks for $45 at the Russell House in Ottawa.

Mikail Mordkin, the Russian dancer, has been operated on for appendicitis in a New York hospital. It will be several weeks at least before he can resume rehearsals.

It is reported that Col. Sam Hughes will be appointed honorary aide de camp to the Duke of Connaught, and it is believed that more than one A.D.C. from each province will be appointed.

Henry Hace, a young Finlander, is being sought by the provincial police on a charge of having murdered Andrew Samanen, another Finlander. Samanen's body was found in the bush near Fort Frances.

Farewell to the Duke.

London, Oct. 7.—The Duke and Duchess of Connaught left Euston at 11.55 on a special train, attended by Lieut.-Col. H. C. Lowther, military secretary; Captain Walter Long, aide-de-camp; Lieut. Hon. A. Ramsay, of the navy, attending the duchess, with Miss Pelly and twenty servants. Their Highnesses occupied the semi-royal coaches, decorated with carnations, chrysanthemums and roses. Luncheon was served on the train.

The duke's special desire was that any unnecessary fuss attending the departure should be avoided, nevertheless the scene at Euston demonstrated the extreme popularity of Their Highnesses with the general public of London. There is a confident belief among Canadians on both sides of the water and dwellers in all parts of the Empire that the new Governor-General will have a brilliant period of office.

The platform was entirely reserved, but a large party of guests was present, and outside a large crowd witnessed the royal arrival.

Russell Case Closing.

Montreal, Oct. 7.—It became evident at yesterday's session of the long drawn out Russell conspiracy case, that the trial is drawing to a conclusion. As outlined to Judge Archer at the close of the afternoon hearing, the arrangement is now that the defense will close its case on Monday morning, when McNamara, Montreal manager of the Pinkertons, and one of the defendants, will be continued. Then the plaintiff's side will take up evidence in rebuttal, and it is likely that one of the witnesses will be Moses Cochenthaler, whose name has figured so prominently in the testimony of previous witnesses.

In all probability the hearing of evidence both main and in rebuttal will be concluded Monday, and Tuesday may see the end of the case.

The defendant McNamara was on the stand the greater part of yesterday afternoon. The greater part of his evidence consisted of details as to accounts, but some major issues were reached.

Brothers-in-Law Quarrelled.

Chatham, Oct. 7.—Orlando Arnold came to his death through injuries received on July 13, according to the verdict of a coroner's jury Thursday night. On that date he had a quarrel with his brother-in-law Thomas Griffith.

Witnesses told of hearing Griffith say: "I hit him and I guess he will stay hit for a while," and "I knocked him down and he will be there yet if someone hadn't picked him up."

Griffith came before the magistrate yesterday for a preliminary hearing on a murder charge.

Freight Cars In Splinters.

Brampton, Ont., Oct. 7.—At an early hour yesterday morning a Grand Trunk freight train entering Brampton from the west ran off the track just above the station. About twelve cars were derailed but no person was hurt. It is not yet definitely known how the train left the rails. Flour, lime, cement stone and other commodities are strewn about the track in inextricable confusion and the cars are reduced to matchwood. The line was cleared about ten o'clock, but it will take many hours to clear up the wreckage.

Just a Fairy Tale.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—In reference to the reports from St. John's, Nfld., that the steamer Kits, returning from a prospecting expedition to Labrador and Baffin's Land, had brought back with her rich samples of gold quartz, and that her sailors were carrying in their pockets nuggets of almost virgin gold, the officials of the Geographical Survey state that when Dr. Low of that department explored Labrador he made no important mineral discoveries.

Awarded $6,600 Damages.

Brantford, Oct. 7.—Lewis Martin, former night yardmaster in the Grand Trunk local yards, who lost both his legs in an accident last November, was awarded $6,600 damages by the jury yesterday.

APT TO GET INTO EARS, CAUSING DEAFNESS, OR TO REACH THE LUNGS AND END IN CONSUMPTION.

You Can Cure Catarrh in any Stage By Breathing the Healing Balsamic Fumes of Catarrhozone, and here is Proof

Mr. Ulric Berault, a young man who lived for years in Sweetsburg, Que., inherited catarrh from his mother. The disease spread through his system until he was a physical wreck.

"As a child," said Mr. Berault, "I was prone to ulceration of the mucous lining of the throat and nasal passages.

"I grew pale and emaciated, lost all desire for food, and got into such a condition that my friends said Catarrh was fairly eating me up.

"Every organ of my body seemed affected, and the doctor said it was the first stage of consumption. He advised Catarrhozone and I inhaled it ten minutes at a time every few hours, and was rewarded in a few days by a wonderful improvement

"Catarrhozone pleased me and the doctor so well that I used it continually an dtook Ferrozone after each meal to build up my strength. In about three weeks I was quite recovered, and the doctor says no remedy but Catarrhozone could work such a miracle.

Perks Talks of Canal Plans.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—Sir Robert Perks, British financier and head of the Georgian Bay Canal Co., announces that at an early date the canal scheme would be laid before the incoming Government, though it was not expected there would be any pronouncement from the Cabinet for some time.

While Sir Robert would not say that the passage of reciprocity would have obviated the necessity for the ship canal, as was alleged during the campaign, he stated that the result of the election was undoubtedly a declaration for east and west trade and the Georgian Bay Canal was the natural sequence.

Eat More Bread

Few people eat enough of what is rightly called "the staff of life"

FOOD authorities declare that wheat is the KING of all foods. It is the best food for growing children, the best for old age, the best for every age of life. It is best chiefly because it contains most of the life-building nitrogen combined with the proper degree of starch.

Of all the forms in which wheat may be eaten, bread stands at the top. There is no food yet created that can take the place of good bread—"the staff of life."

The better the flour you use, the better, more wholesome, bread you'll make. And better bread means the use of PURITY FLOUR.

The bread will be better, higher-class, because PURITY FLOUR consists exclusively of the high-grade portions of the best Western hard wheat. There are no low-grade portions of the hard wheat berries, nor no soft wheat flour, in it. It is all high-grade—a strong, vigorous flour. The loaves will be more nutritious, because they contain the high-quality nitrogen, gluten, starch and phosphates—the blood-enriching, body-building and life-sustaining elements of the world's strongest wheat. Think of the added enjoyment of eating bread you know is so chock-full of wholesomeness. Think of the good it will do your children, your husband and yourself. Think of the wisdom of eating lots and lots of it, for it is a fact known to the medical profession, that few people eat enough of "the staff of life."

Of course PURITY FLOUR will cost you slightly more than ordinary flour. It's worth the difference. And it will make "more bread and better bread" for you than you can obtain from the same weight of ordinary flour.

And the pastry PURITY FLOUR makes! It's more delicious too, if you take the precaution to add more shortening than is required with ordinary flour. The extra strength of PURITY FLOUR requires the addition of more shortening for best pastry-results.

Think of the PURITY trade-mark when you buy flour.

Add PURITY FLOUR to your grocery list right now.

GEORGIAN BAY CANAL SCHEME

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—Greater hope than ever before for the early building of the Georgian Bay Canal was expressed in an interview to-day by Sir Robert Perks, who is a guest at the New Russell while on a brief visit to Ottawa. Sir Robert is in Canada attending the Ecumenical Methodist conference at Toronto.

"The proposition of the Montreal Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal Company will be laid before the new Government as soon as it is ready to receive it," said Sir Robert. "I believe the building of the canal in the near future is now assured. The people of Canada by their repudiation of reciprocity in the recent election have decided in favor of improving the trade east and west in this country.

"In that connection the Georgian Bay canal would be one of the important factors, a factor which cannot be overlooked. The Americans will complete the Panama Canal in 1913, and will make desperate efforts to divert Canadian trade to Canada's western ports, to the detriment of this country's eastern ports.

"When the Georgian Bay canal is built Ottawa will become a port during the months of the year when the canal is open," said Sir Robert, "in much the same way as Manchester became a port through the building of the Manchester Ship Canal. It would take but five years to build the canal from the St. Lawrence to Ottawa."

Since Sir Robert Perks was in Ottawa last, one year ago, he has not been idle. He and his partner have completed the new port works in Buenos Ayres at a cost of six million sterling, and finished the Trans-Andean Tunnel through the Andes for twelve miles, 12,000 feet above the sea level, at a cost of two million sterling. They have just taken the contracts for the docks in the new harbor at Havana, Cuba.

TOM LONGBOAT WON.

STRATFORD, Ont., Oct. 5.—Tom Longboat won a popular but mighty close race from A. E. Wood at eight miles at the Roller Rink to-night. Fully one thousand people watched the race, which was fast all the way. The first mile was ripped off in 4.32 and the eight in 41.22½. Early in the race the Indian made a futile attempt to lose the Englishman, and thereafter to the finish it was almost neck and neck. Longboat sprinted away in the last lap and finished about fifteen feet to the good.

MARKET PRICES REMAINED HIGH

The market to-day was not as largely attended as upon previous Saturdays, owing to the fact that a fair was in progress at Roblin's Mills. While a considerable quantity of farm products was offered for sale, there was by no means a decrease in prices, but, on the contrary, some articles brought a higher price.

Fresh butter was rather scarce and sold readily at 30c. and 32c. per lb.

Fresh eggs sold at 25c. in basket lots and in some cases 27c. was paid for dozen lots.

Dressed poultry commanded good prices, as will be noted in the quotation of prices.

The hog market at present is on the downward track, $6.25 being the highest paid for live porkers.

Potatoes sold readily at $1.50 and $1.60 per bag, which is an exceptionally high price at this season of the year.

There were no changes to note in prices for other products.

KINSMEN KILL DEPUTY SHERIFFS

JONESVILLE, Va., Oct. 6.—Intrenched in a mountain dwelling, kinsmen of a young woman wanted as a murder witness, fought off an attacking posse, killing two deputy sheriffs, wounding two and taking captive one of the two sheriffs who led the assault. The other shrieval chief fell wounded by one of the mountaineers' shots.

From Lee County, Virginia, and from across the State line, in Bell County, Kentucky, expert riflemen are being rallied to undertake a new assault on the law defiers' stronghold. More desperate fighting is expected when the second attack is made, as the woman's defenders, now that they have slain two men, are expected to fight to the last rather than surrender.

All the approaches to the besieged house are guarded and warnings have been given by the family garrison that no one will be allowed to pass.

One humane incident not less thrilling than the encounter itself followed the engagement. After the wounded sheriff had been carried by his captors into the fortress he had tried to storm, it was seen that he was dangerously wounded. At the risk of his life a brother of the young woman for whom the fight was waged rode over the mountains and brought a physician to attend the sufferer.

The battle occurred around the home of George Smith, near Gibson's Station, Va. The posse went to take into custody Mrs. Zirelda Denny Barnett, wanted at Pineville, Ky., as a material witness against her brother, Charles Denny, accused of a murder that occurred near Middlesboro, Ky., several months ago.

It is said the young woman was willing to go with the officers, who held a requisition for her, but her kinsfolk, the Smiths, objected. When officers attempted to force their way into the Smith home the battle commenced.

Vol. 45 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1911. No. 277

The Haunted Chamber

Parkins having withdrawn, Dora takes up the ivory-handled brush and gently begins to brush her cousin's hair.

After some preliminary conversation leading up to the subject she has in hand, she says carelessly:

"By the bye, Flo, you are rather uncivil to Arthur Dynecourt, don't you think?"

"Uncivil?"

"Well—yes. That's the word for your behavior toward him I think. Do you know, I am afraid Sir Adrian has noticed it, and aren't you afraid he will think it rather odd of you—rude, I mean,—considering he is his cousin?"

"Not a very favorite cousin, I fancy."

"For all that, people don't like seeing their relations slighted. I once knew a man who used to abuse his brother all day long, but if any one else happened to say one disparaging word a pretty rage. And after all, poor Arthur has done nothing to deserve actual ill-treament at your hands."

"I detest him. And, besides it is a distinct impertinence to follow one about from place to place as he has followed me. I will not submit to it calmly. It is a positive persecution."

"My dear, you must not blame him if he has lost his head about you. That is rather a compliment, if anything."

"I shall always resent such compliments."

"He is certainly very gentlemanly in all other ways, and I must say, devoted to you.He is handsome, too, is he not; and has quite the air of one accustomed to command in society.?"

"Has he paid you to sing his praises?" asks Florence, with a little laugh, but her words so near hit the mark that Dora blushes painfully.

"I mean," she explains at last, in a rather hurried way, "that I do not think it good form to single out any one in a household where one is a guest, to show him pointed rudeness. You give all the others acting in this play ample opportunities of rehearsing alone with you. It has been remarked to me by two or three that you purposely avoid and slight Mr. Dynecourt."

"So I do," Florence admits, calmly, ading. "Your two or three have great perspicacity."

"They even hinted to me," Dora goes on, deliberately, "that your dislike to him arose from the fact that you were piqued at his being your stage lover instead of—Sir Adrian!

It costs her an effort to utter these words, but the effect produced is worth the effort.

Florence, growing deadly pale, releases her hair from her cousin's grasp, and rises uickly to her feet.

"I don't know who your gossips may be," she says slowly, "but they are wrong—quite wrong—do you hear? My dislike to Mr. Dynecourt arises from very different feelings. He is distasteful to me in many ways; but, as I am undesirous that my manner should give occasion for surmises such as you have just mentioned to me, I, will give him an opportunity of reciting his part to me, alone, whenever he wishes."

"I think you are right, dearest," responds Mrs. Talbot, sweetly. She is a little afraid of her cousin, but still maintains her position bravely. "It is always a mark of folly to defy public opinion. Do not wait for him to ask you again to go through your play with him alone, but tell him yourself to-morrow that you will meet him for that purpose in the north gallery some time during the day."

"Very well," says Florence, but her face still betrays dislike and disinclination to the course recommended. "And, Dora, I don't think I want my hair brushed any more, thanks; my head is aching so dreadfully."

This is a hint that she will be glad of Mrs. Talbot's speedy departure; and, that lady, taking the hint, Florence is soon left to her own thoughts.

The next morning, directly after breakfast, she finds an opportunity to tell Mr. Dynecourt that she will give him half an hour in the north gallery, to try over his part with her, as she considers it will be better, and more conducive to the smothness of the piece to learn any little mannerisms that may belong to eitho rof them.

To this speech Dynecourt makes a suitable reply, and names a particular hour for them to meet. Miss Delmaine, having given a grave assent to this arrangement, moves away, as though glad to be rid of her companion.

A few minutes afterwards Dynecourt, meeting Mrs. Talbot in the hall, gives her an expressi[illegible]ance, and tells her in a low voice [illegible] he considers himself deeply in [illegible]ebt.

CHAPTER III.

"You are late," says Arthur Dynecourt in a low tone. There is no anger in it; there is indeed only a desire to show how tedious have been the moments spent apart from her.

"Have you brought your book, or do you mean to go through your part without it?" Florence asks, disdaining to notice his words, or to betray interest in anything except the business that has brought them together.

"I know my part by heart," he responds, in a strange voice.

"Then, begin," she commands, somewhat imperiously, the [illegible] insolence of her air only gives an addition to her touch of extreme beauty and fires his ardor.

"You desire me to begin?" he asks unsteadily.

"If you wish it."

"Do you wish it?"

"I desire nothing more intensely than to get this rehearsal over," she replies, impatiently.

"You take no pains to aide your scorn of me," says Dynecourt, bitterly.

"I regret it, if I at any time treated you with incivility," returns Florence, with averted eyes and increasing coldness. "Yet I must always think that, for whatever has happend, you have only yourself to blame."

"Is it a crime to love you?" he demands boldly.

"Sir," she exclaims, indignantly, and raising her beautiful eyes to his for a moment, "I must request that you never speak to me of love. There is neither sympathy nor common friendliness between us. You are well aware with what sentiments I regard you."

"But why am I alone to be treated with contempt?" he asks, with sudden passion. "All other men of your acquaintance are received graciously by you, are met with smiles and kindly words. Upon me alone your eyes rest, when they deign to glance in my direction, with marked disfavor All the world can see it. I am signaled out from the others as one to be slighted and spurned."

"You forget yourself," says Florence contemptuously. "I have met you here to rehearse our parts for next Tuesday evening, not to listen to any insolent words you may wish to address to me. Let us begin"—opening her book. "If you know your part, go on."

"I know my part only too well; it is to worship you madly, hopelessly. Your very cruelty only serves to heighten my passion. Florence, hear me!"

"I will not," she says, her eyes flashing. She waves him back from her as he endeavors to take her hand. "Is it not enough that I have been persecuted by your attentions—attentions most hateful to me—for the past year, but that you must now obtrude them upon me here? You compel me in plain words to tell you what my manner must have shown to you only too clearly—that you are distasteful to me in every way, that your very presence troubles me, that your touch is abhorrent to me!"

(To be Continued.)

"BUCK" O'BRIEN

O'Brien the pitcher recently transferred from Denver to the Boston club has won 24 games out of 2 this season. He is also 24 years old.

OLD MEN MADE YOUNG

"An old man's game" used to be the scornful comment on the game of bowls. If ever there was truth in the jibe there is none now. Bowling, which has an ever-increasing bunch of followers in Canada, is still played by old men, and played by them at its best, but there are many young men who find on the velvety green as keen enjoyment and physical refreshment as are to be found in any other sport. Few games offer greater opportunities for social intercourse. Bowling is one of the games in which the players can "let themselves go" without detriment to the play. Excepting always curlers — who, indeed, are of the same breed — bowlers when on the green mingle with the varying fortunes of the game more of jollity and good fellowship than is possible in almost any other pastime. And thus old men are made young again.

Must Have Diet Change

They were telling baseball yarns when Dr. Mark E. Baldwin, famous old States' National and Brotherhood pitcher, pushed this one over the plate: "You all remembers Mike Kelly, one of the greatest baseball players the game ever knew. Sure you remember Mike. Well, one day he wasn't feeling any too good and called on a doctor. The latter, after an examination, turned to Mike and said: "Mr. Kelly, you have been drinking too much." This was too much for the grand old catcher, and after a minute's reflection he came back at the doctor with "That's all right, doc; but do you expect a fellow to eat all the time.""

CANADIAN WOMEN AND THEIR WORK

By MARJORIE MACMURCHY

It used to be said, and is said still, that Nova Scotia and New Brunswick head the other Canadian provinces in the making of poets. One province does not seem to be favored more than another in the work of Canadian women writers. Miss L. M. Montgomery of Prince Edward Island, who as Mrs. Ewan Macdonald, the wife of a Presbyterian minister, is changing her home this autumn to Leaskdale in Ontario, is the best representative we have of a Canadian woman writer whose native province by itself furnishes her with ample material for her charming stories. Miss Marshall Saunders has travelled much both in the Old world and the New, but she is as individual a citizen of Halifax and as characteristically a Nova Scotian as any Canadian loyalist. "Marian Keith", Mrs. MacGregor of Orillia, is as unmistakably an Ontarian as Miss Montgomery is native to Prince Edward Island and Miss Saunders to Nova Scotia. Mrs. Elizabeth Roberts Macdonald, sister to Charles G. D. Roberts, is a true New Brunswicker and her verses reflect Frederickton and the province round about as faithfully as a looking-glass. Mrs. McClung was born in Ontario, but she was taken as a child to the West, and her stories are completely, triumphantly Western. Mrs. Murphy, author of "Janey Canuck in the West", also a native of Ontario, would never have written in exactly the same vein as she does if she had not lived in Edmonton, Alberta. Mrs. Isabella Ecclestone MacKay, who was born in Woodstock, Ontario, is now a resident of Vancouver. Miss Agnes Deans Cameron is a native of Victoria, British Columbia, where she taught school for many years and where the style of "The New North" must have been formed; its author is now writing and lecturing in England, with head-quarters in London. Such a list as this should convince anyone that Canadian women writers are not to be reckoned last among the forces which are building Canadian nationality.

MARJORY MACMURCHY

Mrs. EWAN MACDONALD

The two best known Canadian women novelists are Mrs. Everard Cotes and Miss Lily Dougall. Mrs. Cotes was born in Brantford, Ontario. She won her first recognition as a writer for The Toronto Globe, using the pen name, "Garth Grafton"; she went round the world when the journey was something of a novelty for a woman, and wrote a series of articles on her experiences for "The Queen." These articles appeared later in book form as "A Social Departure". The delicate clear style in which "A Social Departure" was written and its delightful humor have made it one of the most widely known and the best liked of all Mrs. Cotes' writings. Shortly after its publication, its author, Miss Sara Jeannette Duncan, married Mr. Everard Cotes of the Indian Civil Service. Since then she has spent most of her time in India, with long visits to London and journeys to Canada every few years. Mrs. Cotes visited Canada this year after finishing an English political novel which is to appear serially in "The Queen." The best known of Mrs. Cotes' novels are: "An American Girl in London", "Those Delightful Americans", "A Daughter of To-Day", "The Crow's Nest", "The Pool in the Desert", "The Path of a Star", "The Imperialist", "Set in Authority", which appeared serially in The London Times, and "The Burnt Offering", an able novel dealing with East Indian affairs. Mrs. Cotes in a thorough [illegible] influence on the women writers of Canada who have begun to write since Mrs. Cotes made her name as a novelist is all in the direction of perfecting what the writer at first may be prone to consider her best.

Miss Lily Dougall was born in Montreal and belongs to the well-nown Dougall family who have made The Witness a household journal throughout the Dominion. Miss Dougall's first success as a novelist was "Beggars All". From 1891, the year in which "Beggars All" was published, Miss Dougall lived in England until 1896 when she returned to Canada. In 1903, she was compelled to return to England on account of her health. Miss Dougall spent the present summer with her relatives in Canada and will this autumn change her residence in England from Exmouth to Oxford. Her best known novels are: "What Necessity Knows", "The Madonna of a Day", "The Mormon Prophet", "The Earthly Purgatory", "The Spanish Dowry", and "The Paths of the Righteous". "The Paths of the Righteous", which deals with the position of the Non-Conformists in England, contains a striking and beautiful portrait of an elderly Canadian who as the possessor of great wealth goes to England to discover the character of the relative whom he means to make his heir.

This novel is Miss Dougall's finest work so far and indicates that we have still much to expect from its author.

Miss Agnes Maule Machar, a native of Kingston, Ontario, has influenced tion of the study of Canadian history. Miss Laut once said that Miss Machar had given her an early impulse towards the study of history. Miss Machar has written both in prose and verse. Her "Lays of the True North" and "The Story of Old Kingston" are amongst her best known work. Miss Machar's father, The Rev. John Machar, D.D., was second Principal of Queen's University, Kingston. Miss Machar has had several notable friendships with people who have influenced Canadian character. Principal Grant of Queen's University, The Rev. D. J. Macdonnell of St. Andrews' Church, Toronto, and Professor Romanes of Oxford, have been among those who have received sympathy and counsel from Miss Machar.

VALANCE PATRIARCHE

Canadians apparently have a gift for the writing of verse, and in this gift Canadian women share equally with men. Miss Isabella Valancy Crawford was born in Ireland. She came to Canada with her people while she was still a child. For powerful imagination and genius of utterance, Miss Crawford's poetry has scarcely been equalled in Canadian literature since her death. Her work was almost unrecognized during her lifetime and she died as she had lived in poverty and obscurity. There is a grocery-store on the south-east corner of King and John Streets, Toronto, where in a single room up-stairs Miss Crawford lived with her mother. Here she died. She had published a small volume of poetry in 1884. About twenty years after her death, her Collected Poems were edited and published by Mr. J. [illegible] Carvin.

ISABEL ECCLESTONE MACKAY

Among Canadian women writers who have published several volumes of verse are Miss Wetherald, Miss Coleman, Mrs. Blewett, Mrs. Harrison, Miss Pauline Johnson, and Mrs. Elizabeth Roberts Macdonald but the last named of these verse writers belong to Ontario. Miss Wetherald lives near Fenwick, On-second schoolmaster, principal of the Rockwood Academy. Miss Wetherald's books of verse include: "The House of Trees", "Tangled in Stars", "The Radiant Road" and "The Last Robin".

Miss Helena Coleman who lives in Toronto and whose brother is the Canadian geologist, Professor Arthur Coleman, has published one volume of poetry, "Songs and Sonnets", a publication which brought her immediate acknowledgement as a gifted writer. Mrs. Jean Blewett is a writer of verse which joins common sense and feeling in such a happy fashion as to have made her one of the most popular of Canadian poets. She also is a resident of Toronto and is a frequent contributor to such publications as The Toronto Globe. Her books of verse are "The Cornflower" and "Heart Songs". Mrs. Harrison published a good many years ago "Pine, Rose and Fleur de Lys", a volume of artistic verse in which The Habitant made what is possibly his first appearance in Canadian poetry. Mrs. Harrison is the author as well of a novel, "The Forest of Bourg Marie", a French Canadian romance. Mrs. Harrison is interested in music. Her husband is organist and choir master of St. Simon's Church, Toronto. Miss Pauline Johnson is an Indian poetess. Her "White Wampum" and "The Song My Paddle Sings" are likely to remain the most successful expression which the world possesses of the Indian's love of nature. Miss Johnson, who is a Mohawk and was born near Brantford, is now living in Vancouver. Canadians will regret to hear that this woman of genius is in extremely poor health. Reference has been made to Mrs. Elizabeth Roberts Macdonald's work. Her home is in Frederickton, New Brunswick. She shares the poetical gift of the Roberts family. Her earliest published work in poetry appeared along with verse written by two of her brothers. Since then she has published a book of her own work, "Dream Verses and Other Poems".

Mrs. McLUNG

Besides these writers, many Canadian women write charming verses which appear frequently in the best Canadian magazines and in the foremost magazines of the United States. Among these should be mentioned: Miss Marjorie Pickthall, who has a rare imaginative gift, Miss Warnock, whose work as book reviewer of The Mail-Empire, Toronto, is signed "Katherine Hale," Mrs. Sheard, one of whose poems was published in a recent issue of Scribner's Magazine, and Mrs. MacKay of Vancouver who writes successfully in prose as well as in verse. Other writers might be named But this list should serve to give an idea of how many Canadian women are visited frequently, if not constantly, by the magic vision of the poet.

ELIZABETH ROBERTS MACDONALD

Mrs. Traill and Mrs. Moodie should be named with the earliest women writers of Canada. Their connection with the famous Strickland family removed effectually any impression of the amateur from their writings Several women have accomplished good work in the writing of Canadian history. Miss Agnes Laut has written several historical novels and a number of readable historical works which have appeared serially in Scribner's Magazine and other publications. Miss Jean McIlwraith, author of "The Curious Career of Roderick Campbell" wrote the volume on Haldimand in The Makers of Canada series. Miss Laut who was born in Sterling Ontario, and Miss McIlwraith, who is a native of Hamilton, Ontario, are now living in the United States. Miss Emily P. Weaver, who has written a child's history of Canada and several stories for young people does a good deal of magazine work in history. Miss Agnes Deans Cameron's work has already been mentioned, "The New North" is a cheerful, buoyant, and interesting account of a woman's travels in the north of Canada.

VERA SHEARD

Mrs. JOHN LANE

Miss Alice Jones, daughter of a Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, in "The Night Hawk", wrote one of the most readable and exciting of Canadian novels. It is a tale of the blockade runners at the time of the American Civil War. Miss Jones is the author of a number of other novels, all well written and dramatic Mrs. Guy Carleton Jones of Ottawa has written a number of excellent short stories which have appeared in The Atlantic Monthly under the pen name of "Guy Carleton". Mrs Jones' novel, "Out of Drowning Valley" was published by Holt and Company in the spring of this year. For purely artistic merit, "Tales of Old Toronto", by "Suzanne Marny" is in the opinion of the present writer far ahead of other work in prose by Canadian women at least of recent years. Mrs. Patriarche of Winnipeg has written a promising little book of humor, and "The Opinions of Mary" by Mrs. Townley of Vancouver is full of humor and common sense as well. The names of other women writers of Canada might readily be mentioned. Miss Adeline Tesky of Welland, Ontario, is the author of several studies in village and rural life, such as "Where the Sugar Maple Grows," and "The Village Artist".

AGNES DEANS CAMERON

If any Canadian wishes to offer proof of how sound and simple, wholesome and optimistic Canadian life is at its core, he should refer the inquirer to the work of a group of Canadian women. It is impossible not to be struck with the singular unanimity of feeling in such stories as "Anne of Green Gables", "Lizbeth of the Dale", "The Second Chance", and Mrs. Murphy's conversational book of Western experiences, "Janey Canuck in the West." Miss Montgomery, Mrs. McGregor, Mrs. McClung and Mrs. Murphy, with Miss Marshall Saunders who began writing stories a good many years ago and who has written one story of apparently perennial popularity, are more gifted than the average Canadian woman, but their work reflects very faithfully the happy domestic life of Canada. They are all true patriots. They write of human nature with understanding, affection and gajety. From the good use of such powers comes much wholesome enjoyment.

A WONDERFUL CRICKETER

Lilley, Recently Retired, Most Prominent Wicket-Keeper England Has Ever Produced.

A. A. Lilley the famous English cricketer who has just retired from the game commenced his wonderful career appropriately enough against the Australians at Edgbaston in May, 1888. He had gained recognition by the skill and ability displayed for the Bournville Cricket Club, and Mr. Blackham, the famous Australian wicket-keeper, prophesied a great career for the Warwickshire lad, and was so impressed with his work that he made him a present of a pair of wicket-keeping gloves. The accuracy of Mr. Blackham's judgment has been abundantly justified, for no English wicket-keeper has ever figured so prominently in English cricket as Lilley has done. At the outset of his career he was but an indifferent batsman, but thanks to the advice of the late Arthur Shrewsbury, he applied himself to acquiring the art of run getting, and his performances, both in international matches and county matches, show how well he has succeeded. For a number of years he ranked as one of the most reliable batsmen in the Warwickshire eleven, and his batting feats for England against Australia constitute cricket history. No batsman in the English team showed greater nerve and resource when the game was going against his side. His capital efforts at Manchester and Kennington Oval in 1902 will not readily be forgotten. Lilley, who was born in Birmingham on November 18th, 1867, was undoubtedly one of the finest wicket-keepers of the day, and his magnificent batting in combination first brought him under the notice of the authorities responsible for the selection of the international teams. He first went to Australia with A. C. MacLaren's team in 1901-, and with the M.C.C. team in 1903-4. He represented England against Australia in England on 22 occasions — three times in 1896, four in 1899, five in 1902, five in 1905, and five in 1909, and on ten occasions in Australia. He also played for England v. South Africa three times in 1907, and appeared for the Players against the Gentlemen in 1895-8, 1900-1-2-4-5-6-8-[illegible], being honoured with the captaincy on several occasions. It is worthy of note that whereas his batting average in 1888 was 8.72, it was 40.58 in 1901, his progress having been steady, and last year he batted 27 times, scored [illegible]98 runs, and finished up with an average of 31.92 for his county. Up to the end of last year he had made 627 catches behind the wicket for Warwickshire, and stumped 198 batsmen.

Queenstown Pudding

Ingredients — One cupful of fine breadcrumbs, one pint of new milk, four eggs, small pot of jam, half a tea-spoonful of essence of vanilla, sugar to taste. Well butter a pie-dish, and screen with Demerara sugar. Pour a pint of boiling milk over a tea-cupful of fine bread-crumbs, that has been sweetened to taste, and flavoured with vanilla essence. When nearly cool, pour into it four well-beaten yolks of eggs, reserving the whites. Set it into a moderate oven to cook, but do not allow the mixture to boil. When ready and quite set, screen the pie with a pot of greengage jam. In the meantime, beat the white of the eggs to a high froth, adding a little castor sugar from time to time, in all a dessert-spoonful. Arrange the snow in an ornamental shape over the jam. Put it again into the oven to set, care being taken that the oven is only just the heat to colour the snow a golden ray. Send the pie to table, in the dish in which it was

SYDNEY MINES, N.S., Jan. 25th, 1910.

"For many years, I suffered tortures from Indigestion and Dyspepsia. Two years ago, I was so bad that I vomited my food constantly. I also suffered with Constipation. I consulted physicians, as I was afraid the disease was cancer, but medicine gave only temporary relief.

I read in the 'Maritime Baptist' about 'Fruit-a-tives' and the cures this medicine was making and I decided to try it. After taking three boxes, I found a great change for the better and now I can say 'Fruit-a-tives' has entirely cured me when every other treatment failed, and I reverently say "Thank God for 'Fruit-a-tives'."

RACE COURSE GAMBLING

Harness Racing Will Be Still Better When All Betting Is Eliminated Says Track Authority.

Harness racing is undergoing a process of evolution.

Time was when stories of racing on the grand circuit were chiefly about the immense sums wagered by certain followers of the game.

The day of the plunger is past, even though the anti-gambling laws are not enforced in many sections and betting is legalized in a few.

The majority of the people now go to the races to enjoy the spectacle, rather than to wager on the result and this is a sure sign the sport is being raised to a higher plane.

The enforcement of laws against pool selling at certain meetings temporarily injures the sport in a way, for many stables refuse to enter these meetings; as a consequence the entry suffers and this, combined with the loss of revenue from the sale of speculative privilege, makes the meeting a financial loser.

I believe the time is coming, says Tommy Murphy, when pool-selling and book-making will be unknown on harness tracks. The change will no doubt temporarily injure the sport, but it has recovered from hard knocks in the past and in the end will be placed on a more firm basis and will be cleaner than it has been heretofore.

Harness racing is different from the thoroughbred game, which rested upon the gambling element; wherever that element was eliminated the sport went down like a house of cards; with the harness horses the speculative end is incidental, not over one in ten of the occupants of the grand stand giving it a thought.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

"DENVER JACK" GEYER

Geyer, who is anxious to get a chance in top notch class, broke into the game when he won the amateur heavy-weight title at the Denver Athletic club tourney in 1909. He turned professional. He joined Jack Johnson's training camp, remaining with the colored fighter until he knocked out Jim Jeffries.

ATHLETICS IN HOT WEATHER

Daily Exercise Gives Increased Nervous Energy in all Kinds of Weather.

It is a great mistake to suppose that athletic games or other vigorous exercises are intolerable in the hot weather, just because it is hot. This is a notion entertained only by those who exert themselves as little as possible, and who suffer with the heat. Those who participate in active athletic pastimes know better, if they stop to think about it, but in most cases they are almost unconscious of the fact that it is so terribly, dreadfully hot.

Not only does one feel so much better and possess so much more nervous energy when taking a certain amount of daily exercise, either in summer or winter, but he may keep cooler in times of excessive heat by so doing. This is due partly to the directly cooling effect of the evaporation of perspiration, and partly to the fact that in his exercise he consumes a certain percentage of the heat energy of the body, or we might say, at least the surplus heat energy. This makes for comfort during the rest of the day. We know that such heat energy is consumed in vigorous exercise. Running always makes one very warm, yet Marathon runners, after covering some twenty miles, often experience such chilliness that they call for their sweaters to wear during the last few miles. The strain of Marathon running is not to be recommended for the average man, but certainly an hour or even a half hour of truly active and vigorous exercise each day will make one almost immune against suffering from hot weather. Naturally it will help to do this also by giving him increased functional energy and vital resistance against ill-health.

This is a pointed and practical suggestion. If you prefer, run one or two miles, or take your other exercise, whatever it is, the first thing in the morning, when it is still sufficiently cool to enable you to thoroughly enjoy it.

The other special advantage of hot weather athletics lies in the fact that when the muscles are thoroughly warm they are capable of much greater activity. They act more quickly and with a more powerful contraction, or in other words, they are then capable of expressing their full strength. Every one knows how little he is able to do when he feels cold, in which case his muscles are more or less stiff and incapable of their greatest contracting power. The athlete or the gymnast knows that under ordinary circumstances it is necessary for him first to go through some preliminary exercises to get "warmed up," before he can do his best in competition or accomplish his more difficult feats of strength. To attempt a hard lift or a sprint when the muscles are stiff with cold is actually dangerous, for one is liable to strain himself or seriously injure a tendon. In the very hot weather, however, one may go right into his games without the necessity of "warming up" preparations to get his muscles in condition. This is true in running, tennis, baseball, or any other pastime in which one desires the maximum of muscular efficiency, and he will therefore do his best and most keenly enjoy the sport. The best athletic records are usually made in hot weather. Boys can play baseball with more alertness and energy in hot weather, when they are not too lazy to try. Sportsmen know that the fastest horse racing records are made on hot days.

It is better to be wrecked through over-zeal than to rot from over-caution.

THE BELFAST CHICKEN

With a fame extending to wherever boxing is known, Bill Clark, familiarly christened "The Belfast Chicken" has

THE BASEBALL FAN

Humorously Told Tale of How the Scoffer Gets Dragged into the Ranks of Rabid Enthusiasts.

The lure of baseball is continuous, says an athletic writer, and the ranks of the devotees swell with each recurring season.

The man who is not yet converted can't see anything in baseball. "Why go out there to see some galoots knocking a ball around while a few thousand more galoots yell themselves hoarse about it?"—that's his question. "But—the sport of it," you protest, "the excitement, the zest, the vim, the recreation of it." "Yes," say he, "but you don't play ball yourself, do you? You just sit there and watch the other fellows — you take your exercises by proxy." "But, man," you plead, "it isn't the exercise it's the glorious, riotous tension of tight plays, the appropriated delight of seeing your favorite do the stunts you would like to do. You really feel as if you were doing it yourself. It's the attack and strategy, the defense and counter-charge, the—oh, hang it all! It's the game, man! It's the game!" After all you feel that your argument is lame. There is something you can't convey. The virus is in your blood—you know that; but you also know that the man who has never fanned doesn't know, and the worst of it is he never can know, until he becomes infected. You might as well try to argue the yellow fever into a man as to try to argue his apathy toward baseball out of him.

There is only one cure—drag him to the game. Once there, he is in a vortex of electrical enthusiasm to which only a wooden tub would not respond. He is caught in a network of emotions, he breathes the breeze of daring, the nostrils of his soul scent the battle atmosphere from afar. Human batteries before him, beside him, behind him, play upon him with irresistible power. Watch him! Watch him! Who let out that whoop? Why, it was your friend, of course. It doesn't matter that he cheers at the wrong time or bellows encouragement to the out-of-town club. He's up in his seat. He throws his hat. He groans at the umpire. He shouts incoherent advice to the players. He sits like a man on a wire while a player crouches away from a base to make a record steal. He fairly exudes sympathy when a gallant attempt fails. First thing you know he's beginning to distinguish the players and call them by their first name. Rather proud of that, he is, and works it to the extent of his limited knowledge. He is experiencing his first intoxication by baseball. Between innings he gets into conversation with someone and learns something about "standings and averages," and on the way home on the car he lets casually drop a few of the choice slang phrases of the game.

ABE ATTELL

Featherweight Champion Boxer

Pugilism vs Baseball

The superiority of pugilism over baseball has been shown, among other ways, in this — the great value attached to its strikes. Here is a case in point. The other day, while playing and defeating Detroit, Johnson, Washington's pitcher, struck out nine men. This remarkable striker-out will have to go right on working all summer, and possibly the nearest he will come to fame will be a paragraph in the newspapers in the autumn stating that he has gone back to his home on the farm in order to get up the winter's stove-wood. Another Mr. Johnson, bearing the usually respectable name of John, struck out just one man about a year ago, and since then he has done nothing but attend theatres, ride in automobiles and live in hotels and in jails. It is such inequalities as these that threaten the foundation of our social system.

C. W. DANIELS

CHAMPION SWIMMER

LEARNING TO SWIM

Fear and Lack of Confidence are the Greatest Stumbling Blocks.

It is really very easy and simple to learn to swim. Just a little will power, a short period of application, and the thing is done. And once a swimmer, always a swimmer; one never forgets.

Fear and lack of confidence are the great stumbling block in the path of the beginner.

Once these are overcome it is all plain sailing. The first thing for the would-be swimmer to do is to get rid of the feeling of dread that so many, and particularly women, experience at the start. This feeling should be fought, for it is senseless. It is an excellent practice to stand in shallow water and get used to the sensation of it splashing about the mouth and eyes by ducking the head beneath the surface, and trying to look about under water. Don't be afraid of getting your hair wet, it will soon dry; and after you have acquired confidence it is child's play to learn the supporting and propelling movements.

ATHLETICS AND THE CHURCH

Speaking, recently, on the subject of athletics Rev. Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus of Chicago, who, as pastor, author, and orator, has a wide popularity, said the value of physical culture as an adjunct to the work of the pulpit was beginning to be more and more recognised.

Wholesomeness of the body is closely allied with wholesomeness of the mind and indeed with the spirituality of the soul. Such wholesomeness can only be attained by the practice of what may be called athletic hygiene, a term that includes all things that have to do with the welfare of the physical being. Therefore, it is the privilege and should be the duty, of the church to do all that it legitimately can to encourage clean athleticism among those who come within the scope of its influence. I speak more particularly of our young men and women, although for that matter, there are a good many older people filling our pews who would be none the worse and much the better if they would at times seek recreation with the help of golf-clubs or fishing-rods; horse or afoot, instead of invariably trying to find it in library or club, dining-room or theatre.

First Game in New York.

New York, Oct. 6.—The National Commission yesterday decided to play the first of the world's baseball championship games at the Polo grounds here, Saturday, Oct. 14. The choice was determined by the toss of a coin.

The following schedule for the games was adopted: Oct. 14, 17 and 19 at New York; Oct. 16, 18 and 20 at Philadelphia. Should any of the games be postponed the visiting nine shall remain until it can be played. The seventh game, should it be necessary to decide the championship, will be played in New York. In the event of a tie the game must first be played off on the same grounds.

PRIZE THEIR CLUBS

Golfers Who Carry Round Ancient Clubs, Which are only Introduced as "Last Resource" Superstitions.

Every golfer has at least one or two clubs in his bag which he prizes as much as Wagner, Cobb, Lajoie or any of the great hitters do some of the bats with which they have done so effective work in the past. It is remarkable how golfers will clutter up their bags with wooden and iron clubs which are remnants of other days.

The golfers hate as much to discard an old iron as a crack batsman dislikes to throw away an old bat that has won games. The result is that many a caddie has dropped almost exhausted because he has had to lug around on some hot day anywhere from 15 to 20 clubs.

Superstition has just as much to do with the golfer as the follower of any other sport. He is delighted if by any means he can get hold of some club which was used at some time or other by some well known player, a professional preferred. Every one who goes to Scotland is not satisfied unless he brings home an iron or wooden club made by one of the famous Scotch professionals. Every now and then a player does get possession of a club which is worth while.

George Cook, who for years was regarded as one of the best players in the Philadelphia district, has in his possession a putter which was made in Scotland in 1758. He has had it for 20 years. It is in a wonderfully fine state of repair and every now and then when other putters go wrong the old club is brought into telling use.

SOME AUTO "DONTS"

Don't cross a railroad track anywhere at any time until you have strictly observed the injunction to Stop, Look and Listen.

Don't imagine that you own all the road because you are the owner of an automobile; some other people have rights that you are bound to respect.

Don't anticipate what the driver of the vehicle ahead of you might do; be prepared for any emergency.

Don't drive in the middle of the street unless passing another vehicle.

Don't cross an intersecting street unless you have the right of way.

Don't take it for granted that everybody will get out of the way when you sound the horn.

Don't turn your head to talk with your friends in the tonneau. Keep your attention centered entirely on operating the car.

Don't start on a trip without first making sure that the brakes are in perfect condition; a worn-out brake shoe has been the cause of fatal accidents.

Flapper Shooting

The English have a sport they call "flapper shooting." The flapper shooter takes an able-bodied and effective shotgun and goes out in August to shoot young wild ducks — a pro- [illegible] in the [illegible]. Why such a procedure should be legal, and why any man in his senses should consider it sport, no American, of course, can ever imagine — just as no American can ever solve the mystery of why it is considered fun to sit on a long-legged milking stool and shoot tame pheasants by the hundred as they are driven by.

AFTER 7 YEARS SUFFERING

I Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Waurika, Okla.—"I had female troubles for seven years, was all run down, and so nervous I could not do anything. The doctors treated me for different things but did me no good. I got so bad that I could not sleep day or night. While in this condition I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and began its use and wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. In a short time I had gained my average weight and am now strong and well."—Mrs. Sallie Stevens, R. F. D. No. 3, Box 31, Waurika, Okla.

Another Grateful Woman

London, Ont.—I feel as if I could not tell others enough about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was so weak and tired that I could not rest nights. A friend recommended your Compound and I soon gained health and strength and could not wish to sleep better. I know other women who have taken it for the same purpose and they join me in praising it.—Mrs. Wm. A. Buffy, 905 Dame St., London, Ont.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has surely cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, and nervous prostration.

They Set It Right!

Among "the good old ways" of "Merrie England" is the tendency to democracy prevailing in the great public schools. There there is no pampering, however exalted the boys' rank or great their possessions. A story is told of an Indian official of high rank, calling upon the house master in a famous public school, where a young prince, son of a rajah, was being educated. The official brought a special message from his master to the effect that he wanted no favours or exceptional treatment of any sort extended to his son on account of his exalted birth.

"You may set the mind of the rajah at rest on that score," said the house master, struggling to keep back his smile before the dignified anxiety of the Indian official. "If the authorities were inclined to discriminate in the prince's favour, the boys of the school would set the matter right. Among them generally the rajah's son answers to the name of 'Nigger,' and I understand that with his intimates he is familiarly known as 'Coal scuttle.'"

New Zealand's Sulphur Island.

One of the most extraordinary islands in the world lies in the Bay of Plenty, New Zealand. It is called White Island, and consists mainly of sulphur mixed with gypsum and a few other minerals. Over the island, which is about three miles in circumference, and rises between 800 and 900 feet above the sea, there continually flots an immense cloud of vapour attaining an elevation of 10,000 feet. In the centre is a boiling lake of acid-charged water, covering fifty acres, and surrounded with blow holes, from which steam and sulphurous fumes are emitted with great force and noise. With care a boat can be navigated on the lake. The sulphur from White Island is very pure, but little effort has yet been made to procure it systematically.

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

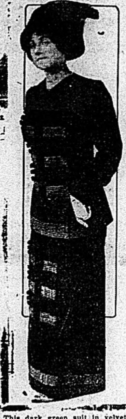
THE MODERN YOUNG WOMAN

Severe Critic Charges She Values Love Only as a Producer of Pretty Clothes and Hats.

The decay of love is a dreadful thing, and yet it attracts no attention. One searches in vain for any attempt to arrest it. Our poets no longer write love-songs. Our novelists are afraid to write love-stories. There is no such thing as true love on the stage. We decline to take love seriously, either in life or in literature. It is treated as the raw material for farce and comedy, but it is not now regarded as good enough for tragedy. Ingenious critics waste much ink on the futile task of proving that Thackeray was not a cynic.

Bless your heart! we are all cynics. And our attitude to love is a proof of our cynicism. In the old days stern fathers and vigilant mothers could not prevent their boys and girls from falling in love. The parent's occupation then was to control the fierce and headlong passions of his brood. Now-a-days, fathers and mothers strive vainly to bribe their children to catch the vanishing disease. The modern young woman does not groan and moan and sob and sigh over her love affairs. She is a practical person. She despises romance. She likes passion to pay a dividend in the shape of pretty clothes and new hats and rhombold bags and jewelled parasols and all sorts of expensive amusements. She values love as a means to all kinds of merry ends.

Madam Fashion



This dark green suit in velveteen is richly trimmed with black silk soutache. The coat which buttons well over to the left, has soutache trimming between the groups of buttons, and has a band of similar material round the bottom. The same idea is carried out on the skirt, but the braid is two inches from the bottom.

A GOOD COMPLEXION

One of the worst enemies of a good complexion is the skin disorder known as acne, or black heads, the black pin point in the skin, which if neglected will develop into a spot, with or without a "head". This kind of thing arises from the condition of health, and is caused by the pores not acting properly. One of them gets clogged, the bead of perspiration cannot then leave the opening, it stays there, and taking to itself the dirt of the atmosphere develops a black head. The first thing for a cure is to get rid of these blacks; they must be got out of the skin. In many cases all that is needed is to press the part between the nails of the finger and thumb, and when the head is out a little eau de cologne should be rubbed on the part to make the pore close again. When the heads are too firm to remove in this way try what a little steaming will do. Get a jug of boiling water and hold your face over it, wrapping a towel round your head to keep the steam in. After ten minutes of this rub your face with a rather rough towel, and then at once try to press out the heads, using eau de cologne freely afterwards. The steaming tends to open the pores. Do not do this too often, because also it tends to relax the skin. Diet, too, is important aid to a cure, everything that is likely to disagree being avoided, while plenty of exercise and much fresh air are needful. Hot water with soap should be used daily, followed by a cold douche, and hot baths should not be neglected, as they induce the free action of perspiration, while in some cases a Turkish bath is very beneficial.

Sympathy must have a moral quality in it if it is to be any good.

GIRLS AND MARRIAGE

The Evolution of Woman During Last Decade Has Changed Views on Matrimony.

The inclination of the girls of to-day towards matrimony is acknowledged to be very different indeed from that of their compeers ten years ago. The evolution of woman during this important period of progression has been every bit as rapid as the development of the motor, wider and further reaching in its results than the birth of the aeroplane.

Elderly women can remember the days when not to be married, or at last engaged, at five-and-twenty, was to be considered hopelessly on the shelf, when spinsterhood was akin to disgrace and "old maid" a term of derision. To so great an extent were women imbued with the idea of "marry—or to be written down a failure" that almost any man who offered an escape from this reproach was regarded as acceptable, and even if ideal happiness might not thus have been attained, the woman had justified her existence — she was a wife!

Although no one denies that the ordained destiny of woman is to wed, the married state is now allowed to be one of individual choice, not of enforced convention. With higher education, a wider sphere of influence, enlarged opportunities for entering both business and professional life, and the acknowledgement of equal mental and physical ability to that of the average man, many women of the twentieth century have come to regard the married state with distaste, as being, perhaps an obstacle to the pursuit of some special career, some dearly cherished ambition, whereas not so long ago it was looked upon as the sole end and aim of feminine existence.

HAIR DRESSING MODES

While Some Still Affect the Fringe the Tendency Is Towards a Plainer Style.

Although the "American" fringe is being exploited by a few Society women, the tendency is to dress the hair without so much as the little curls worn until recently to soften the forehead outline. Not that this fashionable style favours the high bold forehead. On the contrary, the hair waves back from a centre parting in two deep "draperies" nearly reaching the eyebrows, and then carried up sharply to leave the temples uncovered, the hair growing from the temples being arranged in two puffs or "draperies," one on each side of the face. The rest of the hair is caught up at a point some two inches below the crown of the head, and from there is arranged in curl-like puffs, which may, if liked, cover the whole of the back of the head, or may be piled in sets of three on each side of the centre parting in front.

The side-parting is again seen, the hair being then required to form large waves over the top of the head, and to stand out in a thick soft wave at the "parting" side. The ends are caught together at the back of the head, and are formed into curl-puffs. The back hair is plaited into a four or five strand plait and turned up, pinned to the back of the head, and the ends used to form more curl-puffs. This is a style which suits girls with an ample supply of pretty tresses.

During the hot weather the favourite style for school girls showed the hair plaited down the back, and made into two plaits, one at each side, tied with ribbons. If the plaits are short, it is convenient — and still cooler — to turn them up and tie the bows at the tops instead of at the ends of the plaits.

Eye-Water for Weak or Red Eyelids

Put an ounce of orris root, and an ounce of white copperas into three pints of running water — that is, spring or water which flows from a brook or rock. Let it stand for two or three days, shaking occasionally well together. Bathe the eyes with a linen rag dipped in the lotion three times a day. Keep it in bottles, out of the way of children; copperas is poisonous.

FALL MUFFS ARE BIG

Muffs for this winter wear are larger even than last season. This means that they are big, big. While those who have muffs constructed upon the lines of rugs and saddles will undoubtedly carry them when the cold comes. They are made flat and square, closed at the bottom.

Huge tails are employed as a finish to the latest muffs, while others have heads or paws for garniture.

Fancy Work for Spare Time

The girl who likes to keep a bit of work on hand for passing time hot summer mornings on the porch or in the woods will find an embroidered photograph frame useful.

A pretty frame can be made by cutting an opening in the centre of a stamped wreath such as come on many of the new dress fabrics. The opening should conform to the shape of the wreath, and the flowers and foliage can be raised by various stitches in embroidery silks or by a couched gilt outline.

Darned designs in huck are enjoying a revival. One handsome oval frame has a conventionalized wreath of penny leaves across the bottom of the frame and coming up each side where it ends in two large flowers in torch effect; a third flower comes from the top of the opening, at a lower level than the outside ones.

Such a design has the surface darned and the edges outlined. It can be worked in several tones of one colour, the darkest shade being the outline, or the foliage can be darned in green and the peonies in pinks. The leaves are veined in the same tone as the outlines.

Neatly Put!

Men wears clothes as a defence; woman for the purpose of attack.

A girl must be very, very intellectual if she can't tell you what another girl had on.

Man proposes; woman makes him stick to it.

A man who can joke with his wife about her dressmaker's bill must have a keen sense of humour.

The law has no penalty for stealing a heart. The punishment of having it left on your hands is enough.

A beautiful woman is the paradise of the eyes, the hell of the soul, and the purgatory of the purse.

Listening, with most of us, is waiting till the other person has finished.

"All the world loves a lover," especially the jeweller, the florist and the confectioner.

"Judge," said Mrs. Starvem to the justice who had recently come to board with her, "I am particularly anxious to have you try this chicken soup." "I have tried it," replied the judge, "and my decision is that the chicken has proved an alibi."

For the Traveller

The traveller who is fastidious about the boiling of her eggs should invest in one of the egg-shaped boilers of copper, small enough to pack in a trunk. It will cook four eggs.

This lamp is like a huge egg, has an alcohol lamp beneath and a tray with four compartments to hold the eggs erect in the water and make removal easy.

For the girl in an apartment who likes to do light housekeeping such a cooker could be utilized for making cup custards and other dishes cooked in water.

Coffee Recipe

Roast the beans before putting them into coffee grinder, each time fresh. Pack ground coffee tight on top of French coffee pot, and put in one spoonful of water at a time, so that it will drip very slowly. Be sure the water is boiling. Pour it over several times and allow one hour to make good coffee. Never left it stand after it is made.

Hot milk should almost come to a boil, cooking slowly but should not be allowed to stand. Use rich milk for coffee. Never buy ground coffee —or keep your coffee uncovered.

Lemon Cream.

Add the zest of lemon, rubbed on lump sugar, to a pint of cream. Whip it well, and sweeten with sugar and lemon juice to taste. Have ready half an ounce of isinglass which has been dissolved and allowed to get cool. When the cream is thick, which it should be after the lemon juice is added, pour in the isinglass then empty all into an ornamental mould. Other flavourings may be used, such as orange, almond, and maraschino.

To Clean Silver

There is no better or quicker way than to put them into hot, soapy water, and rub them with a soft piece of flannel, occasionally dipping the flannel into powdered and slaked whitening. Dry thoroughly, then wipe with a soft leather. To slake the whitening, pour over it cold water, and set it in a cool oven to dry. It will then be ready for use.

Codfish Rolls.

Boil four potatoes in their skins, peel and mash very fine. Work into the hot potatoes a half-box of shredded codfish, add pepper and salt to taste, and, with the hands, form into rolls or sticks about as large as your finger. Roll each of these in flour, and set in a cold place until wanted. Fry in hot lard to a good brown. Serve with a white sauce into which a tablespoonful of chopped parsley has been stirred.

Sleeves are short in all save the strictly tailored garments, and by short is meant a termination of the sleeve just at or an inch or more above the elbow.

Sashes are worn a great deal with afternoon toilets.

NA-DRU-CO Tasteless Cod Liver Oil Compound

A flickering, yellow flame means you are burning too much gas and not enough air. If this occurs on a McClary Gas Range you can remedy it instantly. Simply adjust the orifice with wrench until enough air is being mixed with the gas to produce the steady, green flame which denotes proper combustion. By adding air you can often save as much as 25 per cent. gas and at same time increase the heat by one-quarter.

Probably, you know from experience that it is really impossible to remove all the dirt and grease from ordinary drip pans. But you can wash and clean the smooth, white enamelled broiler and drip pans of McClary Gas Ranges just as thoroughly as you can an enamelled sauce pan. WEALTH FROM WASTE.

City Garbage and Manufacturers Waste Material are Gradually but Surely Being Brought Into the Useful Class.

The old maxim, "Waste not, want not," in these days of national competition, is being given a new significance, and in every branch of industry all the resources of brain and science available are being brought into operation not only to prevent waste but to make money out of waste products.

Municipal Money Making.

Towns the world over are continually studying the question of how to make wealth from waste. The sorting of a city's refuse in many cases brings money in no mean quantities to that city's finances. Several years ago the New York City garbage department was reformed, and £5000 worth of waste was saved from the streets. This included rags, grease, metal, and unburnt coal. £5000 is something worth saving in relief of rates. Four or five times that amount is paid over annually by the contractors who have the privilege of sorting the dirt captured by the public brooms of New York, and taking out the bottles, pocket knives, old boots, buttons, rubbers, wire, and the thousand and one other items of waste which may be converted into wealth.

More than that. British inventors have solved the problem of how to use the very "clinker" left in destructors. In very few towns of any importance now is the old method of dealing with house refuse still in vogue. Formerly it was the practice to pile such refuse on plots of vacant land and there to destroy itself by decomposition — and occasionally to cause epidemics of disease, and in one case we know of, a plague of rats. Processes have been invented whereby all the fatty parts which household refuse must necessarily contain may be extracted for various uses; another method is to pulverise the refuse and to apply it as a stimulant or manure to land. Even then the residue is taken to the destructor, and its very destruction by fire turned to profitable account in the generation of electric power. The very clinker that is left after fire destruction is in some cases utilised under a new process to make paving for roads. It is pulverised, mixed in a special way with asphalt, put under pressure, and turned into paving blocks of remarkable wearing properties, with the additional virtues of being noiseless and dustless.

A Lesson to Children.

A few years ago the school children of Brussels were given a practical illustration of how things usually regarded as waste may be converted into wealth. They were asked to gather up, as they went to and from school, seemingly valueless objects which are to be found in the streets of nearly all towns, and in this way in nine months they collected and handed over to their teachers nearly 3000 pounds weight of metal ware—tin foil, metal scraps, bottle capsules, old paint tubes, and so on. All this stuff was sold for such a handsome amount as was sufficient not only to send 100 sick children to recuperation colonies but completely to clothe 500 of the poorest children of the city.

A Natural Mistake

A little girl was rather given to exaggerating and would tell wild stories of her adventures, for which she was duly punished on the grounds of telling naughty stories.

One day after her walk in the park she ran to her mother, exclaiming "Oh, mummy, as nurse and I were walking in the park a great big lion sprang out and would have eaten me up if nurse had not pulled me aside."

"You naughty child!" said her mother. "Go to your room, and stay there until you are sorry for telling such wicked stories, and ask your good angel to forgive you for telling such a naughty story about the lion."

Half an hour later her mother went up, and found her looking very penitent.

"Well," she said, "have you asked your good angel to forgive you?"

"Yes, mummy,' 'was the reply. "I did ask, and he said, 'Don't mention it, Miss Brooks; I've often mistaken those big yellow poodles for lions myself."

Learn of the Cat.

In the study of aviation the flying men have neglected the scientific investigation of the anatomical and muscular structure of the domestic cat. Although there are fewer falls from the clouds than there were — in proportion to the number of airmen — it would be very useful to know how to leave an aeroplane hurriedly in mid-air and effect a comfortable contact with mother earth. The common or household cat knows how to do it. Quite an ordinary untrained pussy was the other day poised on a third storey windowsill admiring a sparrow, and, trying to follow it, she fell into the street. Hastily, and with tears, one of the women folk employed at the shop rushed downstairs to pick up the remains. She found the cat unhurt, looking pathetically up to the distant window, and wondering how on earth she was to get back. Such a faculty of descent should be cultivated by every aspirant for the certificate of the pilot aviateur.

The Only Thing Left

There is a man who is the head of a large family, nearly every member of which is a performer on some kind of musical instrument.

A friend who was visiting the house of this man referred to the fact, remarking that it must be a source of great pleasure to the family, but to this observation the father made no reply.

"Really," continued the friend, "it is remarkable. Your younger son is a cornetist, both your daughters are pianists, your wife is a violinist, and, I understand, the others are also musicians. Now what are you, the father of such a musical combination?"

"I," replied the old man sadly—"I am a pessimist."

Peace often costs more than a fight.

A woman isn't necessarily of the bold faced type because you can read her like a book.

FARM AND FIELD

THE MEDICINAL FRUIT-TREE

Nature's Remedies At Hand for Many of the Ills that Afflict Mankind.

Ripe apples eaten raw and thoroughly masticated are excellent for digestive troubles.

The pear shares the medicinal qualities just recited, and in addition, is somewhat more easily digested by weak stomachs than is the apple. The quince is only used in the form of preserves, as a rule. It is said that owing to its excessive astringency when raw, it is employed by the peasantry of Europe to stop hemorrhages by placing slices of it on wounds.

The curative powers of the grapes are established facts, as the history of the "cures" in which the vine plays the chief part, testifies.

COL. FRED WHITE,
The North-West Farmers' Friend

Rhubarb, owing to the large proportion of oxalic acid that it contains, is a capital anti-scorbutic. In the case of minor forms of scurvy it acts as a curative. The young plant when stewed and eaten at breakfast is of great assistance to the constipated. Its laxative qualities in general are well known.

Bananas should be used with caution by the constipated.

The fig possesses laxative powers of a high order. This is also true of dates and tamarinds.

Peaches, apricots, and nectarines have marked laxative effects.

The plum, greengage, damson, and so forth, all have medicinal qualities.

Blackberries, raspberries, huckleberries, and most other berries act as blood purifiers and laxatives.

HOGS WITH SORE-BACK

Sore-back on pigs is a very common trouble where the swine are allowed to run on rape pasture. The sores are caused by the dampness on the rape getting on to the pigs when pasturing; a form of irritation or burning takes place, which causes the pigs to rub a great deal. The irritation and rubbing, combined, cause the skin to become nearly raw, and the hot sun then burns it, and cracking and even bleeding then takes place.

This trouble is not usually serious, and can be prevented by not allowing the pigs to run out in the wet rape. An excellent method for feeding rape is to have the pigs in movable pens, and these can be moved every day. It is peculiar that white pigs are more susceptible to this body burn than pigs of other colors, but it is known to affect all colors at times, but not as badly as occurs to white ones. The uneasiness caused by the pain of the sores will cause the swine to fail rapidly, so it is important to prevent the pigs from running in wet rape.

The Cheapest Egg Food

Corn contains 86 per cent. fat and heat elements, hence is no egg food. We must not gauge economy by cheapness. Corn may be the cheapest ration as dollars and cents are concerned, in its market value, but it undoubtedly is a dear egg food, for it cannot produce what is wanted, says Dr. G. M. Twitchell. Farmers have the idea that corn will make eggs, and for proof point to the fact that their hens get nothing else, but they forget to note that their stock are allowed perfect freedom, that they gather much in their foraging trips. Worms, bugs, grass, wheat, oats and what not are found on the daily trips of the feathered tribe. So it is not the corn, but the variety of other food the hens collect that makes eggs, and the former gets the credit. The cheapest egg food, then, is that which gives us the most eggs; such a quantity of food, too, as will be thoroughly digested and assimilated.

The Profitable Sheep

No one who has studied live stock will doubt that there is money to be made from herds or flocks of any class of stock, if they are properly handled. Some, of course, live and labor under conditions that render the profit doubtful. The average farmer, however, who takes an interest in live stock can make satisfactory returns from a flock of sheep to say nothing of his gain in the matter of weed destruction.

Sheep are a benefit to the farm in many ways. Weeds are kept down on the summerfallow or around buildings, fences or bluffs. The constant tramping over the fields aids in packing loose soils. In the fall, dollars worth of grain that otherwise would be lost is picked up and turned to good account. It is little wonder that sheep men become enthusiastic.

WHERE BAGGAGE IS SAFE

Notwithstanding a Chaos-Like System Baggage is Safer on British Railroads Than Anywhere on Earth.

Certain strangers in Britain have been wondering at their way of dealing with passengers baggage. How much better the system of other countries, where you get a receipt, and when the bag goes astray the official assures you it is impossible, because there is the receipt! So you go to bed and get up and dress in your bit of paper. British method is insular, and on the face of it chaotic. We throw our baggage to the mercy of some unknown porter. At the end of the journey we find a sort of lucky tub of portable property piled on the platform, and we plunge about and pick out what we want. A hundred people have only to say "That's mine" to a strange porter in order to get it. Thus baldly stated the system looks like chaos and the invitation to a general scramble for other men's goods. In practice it works out well For every one, from porter to passenger, is on his honor, and, this is the point, baggage in England is safer than in any other civilized country.

The Sea Serpent Exposed

The mystery of the sea serpent has apparently been solved by Capt. James Schmidt, master of the Dutch steamship Charlois, of Rotterdam. As the master mariner has spent some time studying the strange denizens of the deep in the Pacific and Indian oceans, as well as the Atlantic, he has arrived at the conclusion that the sea serpent is really a number of whales drifting in single file across the ocean. He says of his conclusions:

"It was our good fortune to observe such a big fish, which had a length of about 500 to 600 feet, on our journey to the United States on July 28. The tail continually beat the water several feet high, and its head, which appeared on the surface every few minutes, threw the water far away. Our course was right on to the serpent, and when we were about 50 feet away from it we shot at it with our small cannon, and hit it right in the middle of its body.

"The blood colored the sea red. The giant fish then cut itself up into four parts and swam away Indian style.

"They were four whales, one behind the other, of which the first one showed its head now and then above the water, the last one beat the water with its tail and the two middles ones lay gently in the water, thereby showing only their backs. The whole looked so much like one fish that we were fooled the first few minutes ourselves."

New Cure for Nosebleed.

When the nose starts to bleed, immediately persuade yourself to believe that you are running with all your might up the steepest flight of steps you can think of, or up a high hill; that is, just think of doing either of these things and doing it fast. Think at the same time that you are carrying a heavy piece of baggage with both hands, and add thoughts of any other bodily exertion. You will be surprised at the quickness with which your trouble ends. The explanation is that when we really start to run more blood is given to the arteries supplying the muscles of the legs than they were receiving while at rest. This has been proved. As the same thoughts in the mind produce approximately the same bodily effects, if one merely thinks to run, but does not run, the blood will go to the legs anyhow, and away from the head, as desired. There are many common experiences of secretions started by thoughts. If one looks at a lemon and thinks of sucking it, his mouth immediately waters, and no doubt many people who read this will make their mouths water from the simple reading

A Lake with a Roof.

The great salt lake at Obdorsk in Europe is nine miles wide and seventeen miles long, yet, except in a few places, it is solidly roofed over with a deposit of salt, which is becoming thicker and thicker each year.

About the middle of the last century salt crystals first began to gather upon the surface of the water Year by year, owing to the evaporation of the water, the crystals became more numerous, and then caked together until this great roof was formed. In 1878 the water beneath this salt-crystal roof found an underground outlet into the Obi river. This lowered the lake's surface about three feet, leaving that distance between the water and the roof, and each year this distance has been diminished by the constant addition of salt crystals to the roof. Many springs surround this lake. Their water flows over the roof and evaporates there, and thus continually adds to its thickness. After many years the springs will probably become choked with their own deposits, and then the whole will become covered with earth, so that a great salt mine will be formed — a treasure for the Siberians hundreds of years to come.

To Increase the Height.

It is pointed out that he who is short may, by judicious exercise, and by living as much in the open air as he can, become, at all events, taller. He cannot alter the course of Nature, but he can help Nature to complete her task. Following are some of the exercises suggested:—Stand upright, and bend the body as far forward and backward as possible. This will stimulate the growth of the cartilage of the spine, rendering it supple and healthy. Stand with body erect, bend sideways, first to the right, then to the left, right, left in quick succession. Stretch arms up above the head, lower them to the sides. Stretch, first, right arm up above the head, then the left, and so on. Stand erect, dip until you are sitting on the heels. Spring up, making a jumping movements in the air.

To take one's troubles home, to eat them at dinner, to brood over them during the evening, and to let them ruin sleep at night, is the kind of "work" that kills. — "Golden Age."

Just to prove that she doesn't lack the sense of humor, the average woman wants to be humored all the time.

ORIGINAL FRUIT SANDWICHES

A Fruit, Cream and Chocolate Sandwich

Neilson's "Original Fruit Sandwiches" are a delight to candy-lovers. They are real fruit sandwiches with layers as clearly divided as a layer cake. A deliciously rich centre of pure cream and cane sugar—a layer of real fruit (Peaches, Pine-apples, Strawberries, etc.)—another layer of the cream and then the "Sandwich", enclosed in a thick coat of Neilson's incomparable chocolate. Just imagine the deliciousness of chocolate, cream, fruit and then more cream and chocolate. It sounds mighty good—and it tastes lots better than it sounds.

This is only one of the 33 differents kinds that Neilson's make. If you can't get Neilson's "Original Fruit Sandwiches" in your neighborhood, send 65c for a pound box.

THE OBNOXIOUS HOUSE-FLY

House and Blue-Bottle Files are Distinctly More Dangerous to Humanity Than the Mosquito.

Some flies, among them our familiar house-fly and the bluebottle fly are really more of a pest and a greater danger to the community in hot weather than their more aggressive cousins, the mosquitos, gnats, etc., for they wander from refuse heaps and decaying matter in all forms to good, wholesome human food, with no pretence of cleanliness in their habits, and on this account they are certainly the most dangerous of all disease carriers. Especially so is this in the case of children, and too great care cannot possibly be taken in keeping their food and milk from contamination by these insect pests. Not only do they carry unwholesomeness in the mouth parts, but also in the peculiar bristly, adhesive pads of their feet, so that the very fact of their walking over food contaminates it; they are also liable to a fungoid disease known as fly mould, and when thus attacked one may see them in hundreds adhering to the window-panes and lying about in odd corners covered with a mouldy-looking grey fur. These dead flies should certainly never be left lying about. The common bluebottle, or blowflies, as they are popularly called, are objectionable and dangerous in a more open manner, for they make no attempt to conceal the fact that they are depositing their bunches of eggs in our food, and especially in meat foods.

He'd Be Mean, Sure

The late Senator Elkins, of West Virginia, was exceptionally good-natured, and spent much of his time trying to redeem promises of jobs and legislation he made when approached by constituents he hated to refuse.

One day Senator Carter said to him: "Steve, why in thunder do you make all these promises and then stew around trying to make good on them?"

"That reminds me of a trip I once made across Iowa by stage," said Elkins. "I rode on the box with the stage-driver and we spent several days getting to Council Bluffs. The driver was acquainted all along the line. He had a dog that usually travelled with him, but on this trip the dog wasn't there. He was asked about the dog at every stopping-place and he explained that she had just become the mother of a fine litter of pups. Each person to whom he made this explanation asked for one of the pups, and in each case the driver promised one.

"When we got to Council Bluffs I said to him: 'My friend, I have heard you promise about forty pups on the way across this state. How many pups did that dog of yours have?'

"'Four,' he replied.

"'Well,' I asked, 'why did you promise to give away about forty?'

"'Mister,' he said, 'did you ever stop to think it's a mighty mean man who wont' promise a friend a pup?'"

Keep the Hands Cool

Cool hands are, to a large extent, constitutional, and usually betoken a healthy system. Habitually hot and moist hands indicate physical weakness of some sort and the need for medical advice.

To cool the hands in hot weather, wash them in hot water to which half a handful of fine oatmeal has been added. The oatmeal not only cleanses thoroughly but also allays perspiration. Dry gently with a soft towel, and finally rub eau de Cologne lightly all over the palms and fingers.

Loosely-fitting gloves of close texture keep the hands cooler than does the open-work variety. Tightly-fitting sleeves are the sworn enemies of cool white hands. Hot red hands often look worse than they might because they are held stiffly and clumsily. When the veins swell uncomfortably there is no harm done by holding the hands up above the head for a few minutes to restore the veins to their normal appearance.

Religious Distinctions

It was Sunday morning at a certain small country inn. The one guest, a commercial traveller who had been unexpectedly detained over the week-end, had finished his breakfast, and had walked over to the proprietor's desk to make some inquiries.

"And another thing I want to know," he said, in conclusion, "please tell me what denominations have churches here."

"We ain't very well fixed here," said the other reflectively. "We've got three churches, countin' 'em all, an' ye can take yer own choice. They's a Reformed Presbyterian, an' a United Presbyterian, an' one that ain't either Reformed or United."

He Had Sufficient

A boy of twelve years of age, with an air of melancholy resignation, went to his teacher, and handed in the following note from his mother before taking his seat:—

"Dear Sir,—Please excuse James for not being present yesterday.

"He played truant, but you needn't whip him for it, as the boy he played truant with and him fell out, and he licked James; and a man they threw stones at caught him and licked him; and the driver of a cart they hung on to licked him; and the owner of a cat they chased licked him. Then I licked him when he came home, after which his father licked him; and I had to give him another for being impudent to me for telling his father. So you need not lick him until next time.

"He thinks he will attend regular in future."

The schoolmaster of a certain village asked his pupils the following question: "Suppose in a family there are five children, and the mother had only four potatoes between them. Now, she wants to give every child an equal share. What is she going to do?" Silence reigned in the room. Everybody calculated very hard, till a little fellow stood up and gave, to the great surprise of the schoolmaster, the following unexpected answer—"Mash the potatoes, sir."

Alfalfa, a Soil Builder

One great virtue of alfalfa, is its ability to increase the nitrogen content of the soil. About 77 per cent of the air is nitrogen. It is estimated that there are 35,000 tons over every acre of land, worth, at the present rate of 18 cents a pound, over $12,000,000, if it could be used. It is taken out of the air into the soil by very minute plants called bacteria, which live in the little nodules found on the alfalfa roots. It takes about 25,000 bacteria to measure an inch.

They take the nitrogen from the air and use it in their life processes and then give it up to the alfalfa plant in another form. Alfalfa plants remove a large amount of nitrogen from the soil, but the bacteria collect so much that a portion is left for other plants that follow.

If the soil is too wet, the bacteria cannot work, and if too hard, the air containing the nitrogen can not get to them.

All plants which have the ability to add nitrogen to the soil, like alfalfa, are called legumes. Some legumes closely related to alfalfa are sweet, red and white clover; some more distantly related are beans and peas.

BREED A SEED GRAIN

Farmers as a rule are paying more attention to the selection of their seed grain since the Canadian Seed Growers' Association commenced its work. As a rule, farmers are too careless in the selection of seed grain. Too many thresh all the grain together and then take what is wanted from the bin for seed. The simplest plan and the best plan is to start before cutting and select the best part of the field, cut, store, and thresh it by itself.

The best method of selecting seed and the one which will give the best results, is to go into the field and select the very best individual plant and breed up a strain of seed from this plant only. Most farmers, however, will not do this. And for them the first plan is the best.

Pigs troubled with a cough should be given powdered licorice in feed two or three times daily.

Our power of sympathy is largely dependent upon our sensitiveness.

About Zutoo Tablets

"I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all, of the so-called "cures" on the market. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a "sick" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effect. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sour" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them at any cost."

ROYAL DURBAR IN DELHI, INDIA

LONDON, Oct. 2.—Although it has been found necessary to curtail somewhat the military portion of the Imperial Durbar to be held in Delhi in December, this great assemblage will afford a spectacle probably never before equalled even in this home of Oriental display.

Delhi has for centuries been the chosen place for all great Indian celebrations. Here the Grand Moguls once held court, and when the British Government after the mutiny decided that it was impossible to continue to rule the country through "John Company," Queen Victoria was proclaimed Empress of India. Her son, King Edward, was thirty years later proclaimed Emperor in the same city, and now comes the turn of her grandson, King George.

He, is is well known, takes a more personal interest in Britain's colonial possessions than did his predecessors, and as a mark of this interest has decided to travel to India with his consort to be present at the ceremony which accompanies his formal assumption of the title of King-Emperor. Thus, for the first time, India is to be visited by a ruling King-Emperor.

The King and Queen travel to India on the new liner Medina, which has been fitted up even more sumptuously than any royal yacht. The Medina will be escorted by four first-class cruisers, the Cochrane, Argyll, Defence and Natal, in command of Sir John Keppel, one of the captains of the royal yachts. This fleet can leave England about the middle of November, reaching Calcutta the first week of December. There will be an official reception at Calcutta and what promises to be a wonderful procession of military and the civil service, with Indian princes, in their spectacular uniforms, along the Red Road to Government House. Two days will be spent here, their majesties taking train as soon as they have rested, for Delhi, where they are due to arrive on December 7.

At Delhi the King and Queen will be received by 150 Indian princes, the Viceroy and Lady Hardinge, by whom they will be accompanied through the city. The royal party will alight at a special station immediately opposite the historic King's Gate, which will be opened for the first time since 1857.

The Durbar proper, or ceremonial gathering, will be held on December 12th. The days preceding that will be given over to the reception of the Indian chiefs and princes, a review of troops, and on the day following the King will lay the foundation stone of the All-India King Edward memorial. The proclamation of the King-Emperor will take place in an arena surrounded by the brilliantly bedecked tents of the princes and other visitors and in the presence of an immense assemblage of English and Indian subjects of King George. There is no srowning of the King and Queen, but in some respects the ceremony will resemble that held in Westminster Abbey in June last. The King and Queen will be seated in a pavilion brilliant in hangings of red, white and blue silk or satin embroidered in gold, in front of which the ruling Indian prices and higher British officials will be seated in a semi-circle, each Indian with his own banner floating over his chair. Each in turn does homage to the King-Emperor with the strictest attention to formalities, which the Indian considers so important. Homage having been paid, the proclamation of the King's coronation will be read and his portrait displayed to the spectators, batteries will belch forth a salue of 101 guns, while the bands of the regiments, camped on the plain, will play the national anthem. The reading of the proclamation, display of the portrait and firing of salutes will be repeated in every town and village throughout India, while the after celebrations will take on many forms. Everywhere in the evening, however, there will be fireworks and illuminations. In Delhi itself the celebrations will extend over five days and include a military tournament, hockey and polo matches, garden fetes, races and many other forms of sports. From Delhi the King will proceed on a tiger hunt, while the Queen will visit a number of places of interest, including Agra. The cost to the Governments of England and India of the Durbar has been estimated at nearly $6,000,000, but this will be but a small portion of the amount that will be spent.

Cholera Epidemic.

Two matters are giving the authorities some anxiety. The first is the danger of an outbreak of cholera, or rather, the spread of that disease. Delhi has been threatened with an epidemic, and officials have been working day and night to prevent it. The other is the protection of their majesties. There are scores of secret societies in India which aim at driving England out of the country. They are very closely watched, so that any organized attack would probably be easily frustrated. The greater danger arises from fanatics, with which India swarms. Scotland Yard has already sent out some of its best men to wor kin conjunction with the Indian secret service, and uniformed police force and spot all dangerous characters and keep the closest guard over their majesties.

Some people think they are entitled to a lot of credit for doing as they please.

"Nautical Almanac" thinks it a notable fact that the sun touched the summer solstice at practically the time the King was crowned. Let us hope however, that his Majesty has a long way to go before his course begins to decline.

THE FAITH OF A LITTLE CHILD.

In his night gown clad, with his wee feet bare,
He knelt in the clear moonlight
And slowly and earnestly said his pray'r
Though keen was the frost that night.

And the moonbeams kissed with a tender grace
The dear little kneeling form;
'Twas a picture for master hand to trace;
Till nurse like a threatening storm

Re-entered the room—"prayers never yet said,"
She forthwith began to scold—
"Such a night as this! quick, get into bed,
No doubt you'll be chilled with cold."

But the child looked at her with sweet surprise,
"Why, nursie, you are so odd!
Don't you know (here tears filled the big blue eyes)
I've just been talking with God!

'And I can't get cold, 'cause He keeps me warm,
I thought, nurse dear, you knew
That He holds the lambs so's they get no harm
And I'm His little lamb, too."

God give us the faith of that little child,
The love that will keep us warm
When the world is cold, when life-storms grow wild,
To feel Thy encircling arm.

ONLY ONE FOR BREAKFAST!

Not Even a Forty Days Fasting Man Could Face More Than One Egg Like This.

The egg of the gigantic extinct bird epyornis, of South Madagascar, has a capacity of two gallons, or 150 times that of a hen's egg. The shell is 1-8 inch thick. Lengthwise it is 32 inches in circumference, and it measures 26 inches around the middle. Though termed a fossil egg, it is not petrified, but is in perfect condition, unbroken, and has a yellow colour. The contents have turned into a fine dust, which comes out, when handled, through a small natural perforation in one side. The aepyornis, like the moa of New Zealand, was exterminated by the hand of man. A few centuries ago it was quite abundant. Several incomplete fossil remains have been discovered, but no complete skeleton has ever yet been found. These show the bird was three-toed, of massive proportion and short winged. The Madagascar natives have for many years used the great egg shell for various household purposes. In fact, the first knowledge of these eggs became known when some Madagascar natives came to the Mauritius to buy rum, bringing the aepyornis eggs with them to hold the liquor. Only three or four of these huge eggs have been brought into civilization.

The Swallows Southward Flight

Nobody can explain why wild birds do certain things, nor why tame ones do, either. A domestic hen in the road is as big a puzzle as a partridge in the woods. But naturalists study facts and tell us what certain birds do, even if they cannot tell how or why. For example, at this season of the year the swallows begin to combine in great flocks. They are to be seen now, in various parts of the country, ranged along the telegraph or telephone wires and in enormous flocks filling the air and actually clouding the sky. They are getting ready for their flight south. But how come these speechless birds to be able to pass the word along to meet? Some call, covering many miles must have gone out to assemble them. Presumably the most of them are young birds, hatched this summer. What do they know of the flight south? They have never taken it. And now they are preparing to go hundreds of miles away to a region entirely strange to them. Who calls them together? Who gives the signal to start? One day they are here and the next all are gone. They go because we have cold weather here, but they go before it becomes cold, and they return here to meet the returning summer and be warm, but they get here before the warm weather is assured. Hence it is evident that cold does not drive them away nor warmth bring them back. The notion entertained years ago by Gilbert White (and not by him alone) that swallows hid themselves in the mud at the bottom of ponds doesn't go, these days.

Jumping Out of Bed.

Our cherished theories are always being upset in these iconoclast days. We have always held it a virtue to be able to jump out of bed in a morning as soon as we have opened our eyes; now we are warned against this practice, on account of possible damage to our hearts. Doubtless many persons doing this have felt a dizziness follow the sudden and violent uprising in the morning; this is owing, so a well-known medical authority has it, to the shock to the vital organs, especially to the heart, as it starts suddenly to pump the blood more quickly. As a doctor points out:—"A kitten stretches out a leg, then the other, when waking; rubs its face rolls over, and stretches its whole body. A baby stretches its arms and legs, rubs its eyes, and yawns, waking up slowly. Even the birds do not fly off from the nest the instant they awake. All these movements are natural, and have a purpose; they are not mere whims or coincidences, but are the healthy and correct way of starting the vital organs into waking working order. So if you feel inclined to stay in bed a few moments, do so; it is the prompting of nature, only take care — don't turn over and go to sleep again.

World's Most Costly Memorial.

The colossal statue of King Victor Emmanuel II., dedicated at Rome June 4, is the most costly and colossal memorial ever erected in honour of a national hero. The statue is itself 0 feet high, and weighs 50 tons. It is in gilded bronze, and stands against the white marble of a portico 500 feet long, which has 16 immense columns, and many fountains, groups of statuary, and gilded decorations. Back of the portico will be a national museum, in which will be placed mementos of Italy's struggle for independence. The entire memorial represents 30 years' work and a cost of twenty million dollars. The monument faces the famous Corso, and the statue may be seen a great distance. The chief criticism made against the memorial is that its newness and bigness make it overshadow the remnants of ancient Rome in the midst of which it stands.

Can the Serpent Fascinate?

Professor Barnard concludes from his personal observation of cobras in Ceylon, that the serpent's traditional love for music is a pure fable, and that the only effect of music is to arouse the reptile's curiosity, which is excited by any loud and acute sound. The cobra protrudes its head from its burrow alike on hearing the snake charmer's flute, the rattling of a chain, or the sounds made by beating the ground with a switch. It appears to perceive only sounds of high pitch, for it pays no attention to the low notes of the flute or the beating of a drum. Professor Barnard has also confirmed, in Ceylon, the results of observations made in the zoological gardens on the supposed power of fascination exerted by serpents upon birds, and he concludes that this power of fascination is also purely imaginary.

FARM AND FIELD

VARIETIES OF WHEAT

Systematic Selection and Cross-Fertilization Experiments That Have Brought Good Results.

A considerable amount of work has been done at the Guelph College during the last few years with the object of improving some of the best varieties of winter wheat by means of systematic selection and cross-fertilization. Some of the most interesting crosses have been obtained by hand crosspollenation of the Tasmanian Red, Buda Pesth, Turkey Red, and Imperial Amber with the Dawson's Golden Chaff. In 1911 crosses were made between the Crimean Red and the American Wonder. In most cases the white wheats are comparatively soft, but it is interesting to note that some of our new white wheats, obtained by crossing the Dawson's Golden Chaff and the Tasmanian Red are harder in the grain than any of the named varieties of winter wheat which have been tested at the College. Owing to the earliness of the season in which this report was issued, it is impossible to report on the cross-bred varieties.

The results of 12 separate tests made at the College show an average increase in yield of grain an acre of 8 bushels from large as compared with small seed, of 7.8 bushels from plump as compared with shrunken seed, and of 35.6 bushels from sound as compared with broken seed. Seed which was allowed to become thoroughly ripened before it was cut produced a greater yield of both grain and straw, and a heavier weight of grain per measured bushel than that produced from wheat which was cut at any one of four earlier stages of maturity.

Pointers for Dairymen

A real good cow has large, prominent milk veins and a rich, velvety skin.

When the dairy farmers of a community begin buying pure bred bulls it augurs well for the dairy business in that section.

It's a mighty easy thing for one man to advise another to be kind to his cows so that they will give lots of milk. It is sometimes quite another thing to follow out such advice. He knows best who has tried to milk a kicking heifer on a hot evening in fly time. Of course there is nothing to prevent being kind to this heifer — nothing except human nature, and human nature always seems to find expression most easily under such circumstances.

Of course, this is a busy time of the year. The call of the grain field is stronger with the majority of farmers than the call of the cow. Of course the harvesting and the stacking and the threshing must not be neglected, but neither should the cow be neglected. A few minutes each day spent in cutting some green fodder and throwing it over the pasture fence for the cows, or better still, feeding it in the stable, is time well spent. It will result in larger cream checks right now and more economical feeding next fall and winter.

Sores on Horses

When sores occur, seek the cause, correct it, then aid nature in effecting recovery. Having removed the cause wash well after each day's work and dust with any good antiseptic powder, or easier, dampen with a tablespoonful of tannic acid in a quart of soft water for this purpose. It will keep for a week, costs but little and is easily applied. Dusting powder made up of boric and tannic acid are equally effective, or zinc oxide may be used. Dry sulphur and air slaked lime is a favorite mixture with some and is quite good.

Sore neck in horses is due usually to one of two causes; a short collar or too great weight coupled with the side motion as noted in a two-wheeled vehicle. A horse can carry quite a heavy weight on the neck provided there is no jerking sidewise. Treatment is the same as for sore shoulders; remove the cause, then wash well and treat with an antiseptic and a strong wash or powder.

When Fowls Sneeze

Sneezing in fowls belongs to distemper or a cold in the head, and in itself is only a slight ailment. In quite young chicks the trouble is best treated by putting four drops of tincture of aconite in a half pint of drinking water. Use the homeopathic aconite. For the older chickens, tie a piece of assafoetida about the size of a hazelnut wrapped in a piece of muslin and fastened in the drinking fountain or vessel so that the fowls cannot pull it out.

MY LADY'S COLUMN.

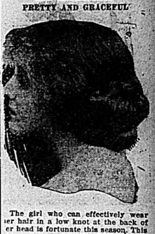
HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Clean Healthy Hair Is Woman's Crown of Glory, and Can be Easily Kept Just So.

One of the reasons why the yolks of eggs are good for shampooing the hair is that they contain sulphur and ammonia; another reason is that they are also emollient. Hair which has been cleansed with an egg shampoo invariably looks full of lustre and brightness, and is soft and silky to the touch after the drying process is complete; but, in order that these results may appear, thorough rinsing is essential, as, if any of the egg preparation remains in the hair, it will be unpleasantly sticky and greasy afterwards. One of the secrets of successful head-washing, in fact, is that, whatever medium be employed for cleansing purposes, the rinsing in pure clean water afterwards should be carefully carried out.

Another secret which is well worth knowing is that pure rain or distilled water is an ideal hair cleanser. Washing the hair in very hard water is seldom successful. In the country rain-water is easily obtainable, and, if not perfectly clean, can be filtered before using. In towns it is more difficult to get but automatic domestic stills are now so frequently employed that where one of these is in use a plentiful supply of soft water can always be obtained.

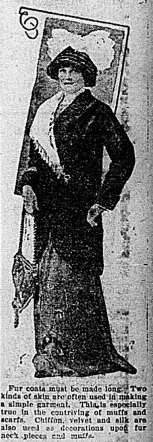
PRETTY AND GRACEFUL



The girl who can effectively wear her hair in a low knot at the back of her head is fortunate this season. This is one of the prevailing fashions, and it is as pretty as it is graceful. For this style the hair is parted and drawn over the ears.

The knot may be a single large one in the nape of the neck, two on either side of the nape, or a trio. If done in the latter then one knot must be close after the other.

COATS WILL BE LONG



Fur coats must be made long. Two kinds of skin are often used in making a simple garment. This is especially true in the contriving of muffs and scarfs. Chiffon, velvet and silk are also used as decorations upon fur neck pieces and muffs.

ABOUT WOMEN SPIES

Japan Is Said to Have the Business of Female Spies Arranged on Very Effective Lines.

In no part of the world has the woman spy been brought to the point so near perfection as in Europe, and it may be unhesitatingly said that in Russia, which fairly swarms with eyes and ears of the Czar, the dashing, beautiful woman, of high breeding and title, perhaps has become the most necessary arm of that underground system which appears to read thoughts as well as detect designs.

To meet the Russian spy on his or her own ground the Japanese have, it is said, secured the services of some of the cleverest women in Europe, many of them French women, and often their visible means of support is by acting.

The Japanese police and military system has, of course, its secret service; but it is not nearly so ubiquitous as is the so-called third section of the Russian police. Yet during the last few years little of importance has transpired in Europe affecting the situation in the Far East of which the Japanese Foreign Office has been ignorant.

Her agents, the best of them those so-called French actresses, found a way of being present wherever there was anything to be learned. Often these women encounter the women spies of the Russian Government, who are undoubtedly among the cleverest detectives in their line in the world.

Governments at war, or on the brink of hostilities, require the services of two distinct classes of spies. There must be many men connected with this dangerous service; but for the most part the work demands courage and skill rather than the delicate diplomacy which is required, too, but is generally, certainly so far as Russia is concerned, assigned to women of culture, education, beauty, and rare judgment. With the troops of the enemy are sent the men spies, and with the commanding officers, with the diplomats, with the brains which stay in St. Petersburg and move armies 5000 miles away as if they were pawns on a chessboard, the ingratiating, clever women spies are to be found.

While the Japanese have not been regarded as having an especially efficient secret service, the events of the late war showed that the persons who were watching day and night for them proved of the greatest value. It is known that just about the time the war broke out there were in Port Arthur several French dancers, who had captured every Russian official heart.

"They were not only attractive dancers, but beautiful women, who dressed well and had most engaging manners. The Russian officers were charmed with them. They soon became better acquainted and proved to be very agreeable companions. They took a great interest in things military, but always made amazing blunders in attempting to repeat what had been told them.

The womanly ignorance of such matters charmed the young officers all the more, and at the same time put them off their guard. But, as a matter of fact, they were very clever women, and their information was forwarded speedily to the Japanese Legation at Pekin, which, in turn, forwarded valuable reports to Tokio. By the time their true character was known the French actresses, who were spies for the Japanese, had left Port Arthur far behind.

Music Healing.

It is quite agreed by psycho-therapeutists to-day that music has power not only to "soothe the savage breast," but to heal many disorders. Hence the great interest of the following record raked up by an official of an English city. It dates from 1704, and runs:—"The physicians of Bath solicited Mr. Nash to let the band perform in the Pump Room (to which he acquiesced) for the following among other reasons:—'That the least stroke imaginable upon any musical instrument has such an effect on the human body as to move its component machinulae in all their parts, giving the fibres of the whole body more or less, according to their degree of tension, correspondent concussions; and consequently the spirits are not only raised, or made fine, but the other animal fluids are also briskly agitated, and their preternatural cohesions and viscidities destroyed.'"

China and Opium Trade

That China is doing her best to stamp out the opium trade in the Middle Kingdom is coming to be generally recognized, and a letter in The Rangoon Gazette from the pen of E. J. Dingle is a reminder of the fact. Mr. Dingle who in 1909 made a study on the spot of this question in China, now writes from Hankow as follows: "I unhesitatingly declare that in my experience I have never known or heard of a crusade against this national curse being carried on with greater vigor and at greater national expense, and China is unquestionably doing her part. So recently as the past three months I have travelled in parts of the interior provinces where two years ago I saw more than half the land given up to cultivation of the poppy. Now there is not a single poppy patch."

Israelites and Palestine

Authorities in Palestine report a steady stream of Jewish immigrants. Half a century ago it was calculated that there were about six thousand Jews in Jerusalem out of a population of 13,000. To-day Jerusalem has a population of about 84,000, of whom it is estimated that no fewer than 55,000 to 60,000 are Jews. In other parts also in Palestine the Jews have established themselves in recent years in considerable numbers. In Jaffa they have increased in ten years from 1000 to 15,000, the total population being now about 40,000. Most of these Jewish immigrants have come from Russia and Poland, and often they arrived in very distressed circumstances.

FARM AND FIELD

TRAINING OF A COLT

Proper Methods of Teaching a Young Horse to be Responsive and Steady on the Bit.

There is a marked analogy between teaching a child to write and making a colt's mouth. In both instances you are cultivating muscles and nerves. The bit is usually put in the mouth and the colt driven before he understands anything about pressure from it, and what it means. By following out this lack of method many bad habits may result, particularly in sensitive, nervous horses, who readily chafe under any discomfort.

The experience of repeated irritation, in connection with the mouth leads to such bad habits as putting the tongue over the bit, tongue lolling, drawing the tongue up in the mouth going with the mouth open, crossing the jaws, side lining, pulling, unsteady carriage of the head, carrying the head too high or too low, going corner-wise, carrying the head sideways, hitching, interfering, mixing the gait, rearing, plunging, and running away.

In order that we can make a horse's mouth responsive and steady, it is necessary to get the tongue to stand a reasonable amount of pressure from the bit, as this organ protects the bars of the lower jaw from undue pressure and injury. In cultivating the mouth the first step is to simply put a bit in it for a few days to get the colt used to its presence, then by slow degrees exert increasing pressure on the tongue by the use of reins buckled to the bit, and then buckled back, on either side, to a surcingle. The mistake is frequently made of having these reins too short at first, and thereby exerting too much pressure on the tongue before it becomes inured to it. The reins at first should be only sufficiently tight, so that when the colt holds its head in its natural position the slightest amount of pressure is brought to bear on the tongue, but when he sticks his nose out he feels the increased pressure, and the restraining influence of the bit, and he yields to it. Constant repetition of this results in frequent yielding, thus cultivating responsiveness, and at the same time habituating the tongue to pressure. Every day or so the reins can be shortened slightly, thus increasing the pressure by slow degrees, but never sufficiently to tire the nerves and muscles, so that the colt will fight it or hang on it. If he drops his head too low, use a bearing rein, in addition to the other reins. Use a separate bit for the bearing rein.

Further Education

A couple of weeks of this sort of treatment in a box stall will be a good start in making the mouth responsive. Leading the colt about or lunging him with the bitting tackle on will still further promote the education of the mouth, but you cannot finish the making of the mouth in this way. It has to be done in harness, or in the saddle. A great deal depends upon the delicacy of touch of the driver or rider of a colt, as to the progress the mouth makes in responsiveness. The hand should be light, but steady, the mouth should aways be felt, and the colt kept collected, as well as the progress of his education will permit. Loose rein drivers are an abomination, as they teach the mouth nothing, and are apt to spoil a horse's gait. Hitching, forging, and bad carriage are promoted by loose rein drivers.

The position of the bit in the mouth is of much moment. It should not be too high or too low, and the trainer has to be guided by the manner in which a horse faces it, in determining its proper location.

KINDNESS PAYS

Kindness pays. This is not the best reason for practising it, but nothing is more certain than that it is true. The cow beaten with the milking-stool will lessen her supply of milk, perhaps without having any choice in the matter; the horse teased when young and ready to form habits will soon develop vices which will cut down his price; the team overworked at the binder and the plow will undoubtedly depreciate in value more than they gain by the overwork.

Some years ago an experiment was carried out to ascertain if Sunday labor paid in the case of the horse. Two horses as nearly alike in all respects as possible were broken in as colts, put to very similar work, and treated exactly alike for the rest of their lives, except that one rested on Sundays and the other didn't. The one that knew not Sunday was worn out many years before his more fortunate brother.

Charcoal, a Weight-Producer

Charcoal tablets, as a cure for indigestion, have for years been a common remedy. It has occurred to a farmer to find out what effect charcoal would have upon animals of normal digestion. He took for his first experiment 18 geese and as many ducks. Dividing them into flocks he fed the first on ordinary food, the second had charcoal in small pieces, where they could pick at it; while the third had powdered charcoal mixed in their food in the proportion of one part of charcoal to four of meal. The ducks who got no charcoal gained 593 grams in a month, the two other classes gained 906 and 962, there being little difference between them, though a gain of more than 50 per cent over the ordinary feeding. But the geese showed startling results. The gains in weight for the three classes were 186 grams, 677 and 1242! In other words, the geese which had a ration of powdered charcoal gained nearly seven times as much weight as those without it.

Great care should be had in watering horses. A little and often is the best way.

A man may pocket his pride, but a woman has to conceal hers elsewhere.

It's always safe to judge a woman by the kind of hero she worships.

A WOMAN SHOOTS UP A TOWN AND SEVERAL FARMS

Fires Into Buildings, Chases Teachers and Pupils, and Drives Farmers to the Hills—Uses Automatic Revolver—

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 5.—Miss Maggie Reineman, 45 years old, daughter of a wealthy farmer of McCandless Township, was imprisoned in the Allegheny County Jail to-night on the technical charge of disorderly conduct. At 5 o'clock this morning she armed herself with two automatic revolvers and left her home. Before she was tired she had shot up two hotels, one post office, one school house, chased a teacher and 100 pupils and the School Board President for a half mile, visited every farmhouse within a radius of ten miles, and at the point of her revolvers drove the farmers and their families to the hills.

It is believed she is insane. The woman first made her appearance before daylight this morning at the Five Mile Inn. She fired a round of shots into the ceiling of the place, and the guests rushed helter-skelter downstairs panic stricken. The woman then went to a country hotel at Pine Creek, where she shot holes through the doors. Following this she visited the farmhouses, shattered their windows with bullets, and put their inmates to flight.

About 10 o'clock she went to the Logan schoolhouse, at Pine Creek, whereupon Miss Gertrude Seibert, the teacher, and Thomas Sarver, the School Board President, barricaded the doors. When Miss Seibert refused to open them, the woman fired a fusillade. This terrified those in the schoolhouse, and they ran out of the building, not stopping until they had fled a half mile. By this time the sheriff's office had been communicated with. The sheriff sent Deputy Wright to arrest the woman, but before his arrival Miss Reineman had made her way to the post office in the village of Keown, a few miles away. She fired a round of shots into the building, and threatened Postmaster John Sarver with death if he "butted in."

NEW WOMAN WAS DENOUNCED

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Father Bernard Vaughan, of London, the Jesuit who set all Europe by the ears not so long ago by his sermons on "The Sins of Society," spoke at the Knights of Columbus bazaar, in the Ninth Regiment Armory.

Father Vaughan pleaded for higher ideals; for the sanctity of woman; for humane hours, decent wages, and sanitary canditions for workers. He denounced divorce, and of the "new woman" said: "When woman tries to meet man in the great struggle of life and when her youth is gone and her beauty fled, the high-cheecked, flat-footed, angular woman will go to the wall."

"It is a pity to see girls leaving school to fight for existence on a small wage. Look in the home where a single servant is kept, where she is butler, chambermaid, parlor maid, nurse scullery maid, all rolled into one. God pity her!

"These conditions in lands calling themselves free is a disgrace to our civilization, a crime against economy, a sin against justice. It is bad economy to starve the poor in order to buy luxuries for the rich.

"Any man who employs workers for long hours at low wages and under unsanitary conditions is a 'sweater,' and the sooner the 'sweater' is taken by the scruff of the neck and thrown into the river the better, for we have no use for him in our Christian civilization.

"If the new woman is going to break down all this sweating I wish her godspeed. But I don't believe she will. I have nothing against suffragists. Any one has the right to be a suffragist if he or she desires. If they think they can redress grievances, let them do it. But I don't think it can be done by noisy demonstrations, but by calm deliberation on the part of strong men."

POPE'S NEAR FRIEND AND MONEY LENDER

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Romano Jacuo the Pope's money lender and personal friend, has just died in Venice.

While the Patriarch Sarto was severe on matters of church government no one in distress knocked at his door in vain. His salary at that time was $1,600 a year, barely sufficient, in view of the heavy entertaining expenses connected with the See. Vey often therefore, when a petitioner had to be assisted, pieces of ornate furniture or apparel wandered into Jacuo's shop.

When Cardinal Sarto found he could get more money out of Jacuo when he went to the pawnshop himself, he instantly adopted that course. The Pope's sisters, Maria and Rosa, finally had to keep a tight watch on his wardrobe. Very often when they asked Gornati, the Cardinal's valet, where his Eminence was, the answer came with a discreet smile:

"He has gone to the Lido." The Lido is a bathing resort near Venice, and the way to it from the Patriarch's palace led past Jacuo's shop.

Jacuo was naturally very proud of his confidential relations with the Cardinal, and built up a fine business on the strength of it. The Cardinal's pledges were stored in a special room but Jacuo was discretion itself with regard to its contents. Among other things, there was a splendidly embroidered episcopal cope, and an equally magnificent bishop's crook that had to be pawned to tide a Catholic pauper over financial difficulties, and a valuable jewelled snuff-box that went to help a Catholic deputy out of temporary trouble.

One thing Jacuo has never forgiven the Pope, the fact that he borrowed from someone else, the money to travel to Rome for the Papal elections.

"He ought to have become Pope with my money," Jacuo used to say regretfully.

GATTY SELLERS,

England's greatest organist and composer, ranks among the best musicians in England appearing with Agnes Nichols, Kirby Lun, Albani, Marchesi, Paderewski, and Dr. Hans Richter, etc. Mr. William Short, the King's trumpeter, is a marvel. The valve trumpet is much finer and more brilliant than a cornet, and in the hands of Mr. Short, the tone will carry far above the largest organ in the world. Hear these musicians at the Tabernacle Church, Wednesday evening, Oct. 11th. o7d2t

RUMORED HITCH IN FORMATION OF MR. BORDEN'S CABINET

(Intelligencer Special.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 9.—No announcement has yet been made as to the Cabinet. The swearing in was to have taken place at noon, but is being delayed. This is said to be due to the attitude of Mr. Monk, against the Cabinet having any representative of English Protestants in Quebec. This would keep Mr. Perley out.

A WONDERFUL MILK

A French scientist has discovered a process of treating milk mechanically—adding nothing to it and taking nothing from it, whereby milk is rendered more digestible, more easily assimilated, and absolutely free from bacteria growth of any kind. This milk, when sealed, can be kept in any place, at any temperature to above freezing for any length of time. No waste no need of daily delivery. A uniform product for delicate digestion. The process is called Homogenization There are at the present time located in Canada three factories, one at St Antigonish, N. S.; one at Lacolle Que.; and one in Toronto.

Alderman J. E. Parks has kept in touch with the introduction of this milk, and knowing of the large supply of milk around Belleville, appreciates the value that a plant treating milk here, and shipping to all parts of the world, would be to Belleville, and farmers of this neighborhood. At his invitation Mr. P. P. Farmer, manager of the Farmers' Dairy Co., Ltd. of Toronto, and director of the Laurentia Milk Co., Ltd., owners of this French invention, visited Belleville and was shown the city and surrounding milk area by the Alderman, Mr C. J. Bowell, Dr. H. A. Yeomans and Mr. J. A. Kerr in the latter's motor car.

Mr. Farmer has been sufficiently impressed to have his company lay before the people of Belleville and vicinity the advantage this industry would bring to us and what they would require.

He states that as the milk problem is a pressing one in all centres of population, and as this invention solves this problem so successfully, they are being besieged with requests to instal plants all over Ontario, and cannot begin to cover the ground for a long time unless helped financially in the locality itself.

Arrangements have been made to call a public meeting in the Assembly Rooms, City Hall, on Saturday, Oct 21st, at 1.30 p. m., when the merits of this product will be set forth and the speakers will show the advantage to Belleville in better milk supply for this city, fewer deaths among infants fewer doctors' bills, stronger children a new industry, more population and payments of large sums to farmers for milk by the introduction of a branch of this business here. All interested in the production of milk and sale of its products, and the health and growth of Belleville, should attend.

The speakers will be Dr. Yeomans Chairman; Alderman J. E. Parks Mr. A. F. MacLaren, Toronto, of MacLaren's Imperial Cheese, President of Laurentia Milk Co., Ltd.; Mr. P. P Farmer, Toronto. Note the date and place mentioned above.

WORTHY TRIBUTE TO MR. BORDEN

MONTREAL, Oct. 7.—The Montreal Herald surprised the city to-day by publishing the following article on Mr. Borden, headed "The New Man in the Job." Careful as he may be about the news he has to tell it is at least clear that R. L. Borden is to be prime minister of Canada. He has come by it honestly. The task he took up in 1900 was about as ungracious a one as any man was ever asked to assume.

For years he had hardly had anybody who was any real help to him after two defeats against almost hopeless odds he was brought back to a task which looked more hopeless each time. He didn't sour on his work. He didn't even complain of his assistants. He did his best and took the consequences. He has never succeeded in acquiring those attributes which men in his present situation seem to need and which appear to make success easier to hold. He is not a good mixer. He doesn't look after his boys. He works when he ought to have others work. But he has as a result of years in their presence filled the people of Canada with a certain confidence in his character that is the best asset he has. For our part we have every confidence and he will still have it when his time comes to lay down the burden he is now assuming. His government may be visited by the ills to which all governments are subject, but things cannot go very far wrong where there is real strong character and honest purpose in the quarter where they have to be reckoned with.

TRIPOLI, A CITY OF ROMANCE BUT LITTLE NATURAL WEALTH

Maze of Narrow-minded Streets Leads to Business Centre—All Races Are Represented

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Tripoli, which has just suffered bombardment, possesses little natural wealth, which accounts for its having escaped the European inflences so noticeable in Cairo, Tunis and Algiers. Archaeologically it has little to show wtih the exception of a Roman triumphal arch, solitary relic of a previous occupation, alongside a barrel organ and a loud gramophone wailing Arab dirges in a wayside cafe.

The triumphal arch has now lost its pristine glory. Delicate carvings adorn the marble captials and panels; but the sand of centuries blown from the Sahara has swallowed up the lower half, leaving visible little more than the circular arch. An enterprising tradesman has carefully boarded up the aperatures, and a first-rate dried fish provision shop is the result.

The capital is crescent in form, being about two miles from tip to tip; and one mile wide. The inside of the crescent is bounded by a magnificent bay and the outside enclosed by huge ramparts except to the south-eact, whence lead the principal routes to the Sahara.

Here, if anywhere, is a city of romance. Pirates and corsairs, doomed by obsolete Turkish gunboats and modern progress to idleness, still throug the marine cafes. In blue zouave jackets and loose, baggy trousers, faced with brilliant touches of gold and red embroidery, they remain at heart untamed.

A maze of narrow winding streets leads from Customs House and ramparts to the business quarter. High, whitwashed public buildings, quaintly corbelled projections, and perforated casements, whence the harem ladies see, themselves unseen, combine in riotous fantasy of street architecture Here and there the street burrows through a house or underneath a series of arches, built, apparently, to keep the houses from collision.

So, by devious and marvellous ways. do all streets lead to the business centre. Suk-il-Turc (street of the Turks) is half a mile in length and some fifteen to twenty feet in width. Shops and bazaars occupy each side. Overhead a latticed roof, densely overgrown with vines runs from end to end. Brilliant splashes of light flicker down on a moving mass of Orientals.

Every race, from Stamboul to Morocco is represented—Jews, Armenians Soudanese, Arabs, and Bedouins, barter and bargain in the cool twilight. Donkeys nose their way through the chattering crowd while beggars appeal silently for alms.

WEAPONS IN A PRISON TUNNEL

DANNAMORA, N.Y., Oct. 6.—Clinton Prison officials have discovered a tunnel excavated under the laundry, half way to a sewer. It has been three years under construction, and scores of convicts knew of its existence, yet the secret was kept until Col. Scott, the new head of the State Prison Department, ordered an investigation of every prison in the State.

After the tunnel was found a search was made of every convict in the prison. From the cells were taken two wagonloads of nondescript stuff, including stilettos, hammers, monkey wrenches, blackjacks, fish poles—used for passing things from one cell to another—hundreds of knives and forks and sand bags.

The tunnel under the laundry was started by two convists named "Willie" Roberts and George Willis. They could not make rapid progress because of the difficulty of disposing of the dirt, which they had to mix in small quantities with furnace ashes from the laundry.

A year ago work on the tunnel ceased. It was resumed by William F. Gillespie, a checker in the laundry. Its mouth was in a dark corner of the building, and was concealed by a drop curtain used to cover soiled linen. Gillespie is an educated man, and had worked out by algebra the exact angle at which the tunnel should be dropped to reach the sewer. He was assisted by a convict named Susdorf and they continued at work until Sept. 25, when they discovered that the Warden knew what was happening.

Col. Scott's agents also discovered that the convicts were being supplied with morphine, arsenic, laudanum and other drugs by hospital attendants, to whom it was shipped by ex-convicts. Dannemora discipline, it is claimed, has been slack for several years. A number of outbreaks have taken place, and the prisoners have been able to get possession of revolvers, or, failing them, have made ingenious pistols out of gas pipe, loaded with match heads and slugs of lead

FUTURE KING AS COAL-HEAVER

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The Prince of Wales had his first experience last week of coaling ship, when the Hindustan, on which he is a middy, was coaling in the Firth of Forth with other ships of the home fleet.

Navy officers have to assist in coaling their ships and work as hard as the humblest member of the crew. As a general rule they check the bags as they are slung on board by the whips. but many of them take an active prt in the operations.

The work in connection with the coaling, no matter what its character may be, is distinctly arduous, for it has to be done at lightning speed, the object of every man in the ship being, if possible, to create a record. The Prince, if he has never experienced real hard, thirsty work before, certainly had a good taste of it, for not a moment's slackening is permitted to any member of the ship's company, no matter what his position may be.

It will be remembered that the present King, then Prince of Wales, acted as stoker when returning from Quebec, and also assisted in coaling operations on the Ophir when he mdae his trip around the world.

If yn have another man's umbrella he is at least entitled to your sympathy.

SALARY OF BALLPLAYER

Difference Between the Money Paid and the Sums to be Paid is Great.

The mental salaries of men connected with baseball are higher than a church steeple

The difference between the money paid and the sums said to be paid, would keep a large family off the bread line until helfrozover.

Maybe Mathewson, Brown, Walter Johnson, Evers, McGraw, Chance and Ban Johnson do receive from $7000 to $25,000, as you have read, and then again, maybe the author of these stories dreams when sleeping on his back.

When one reads of these stories about an up-stage individual grabbing off a Pittsburger's monthly income from the national game he feels like paraphrasing: "Officer, he's loose again!"

The only human beings who really take these yarns without the use of other are fans who are so nutty the squirrels bark when they pass.

You have heard of the $15,000 salaries of McGraw and Chance; of the $25,000 remuneration of Ban Johnson and doubtless have asked yourself, "Is it on the level?"

And then you promptly forget it. As a matter of fact you don't care whether they get the money or work for the love of the game — which they don't.

As a matter of fact a large element of doubt exists in regard to baseball salaries, in the minds of the men who are close to, but not in, the game

I heard a famous baseball leader say that Johnson received $15,000, not $25,000 a year, and that the latter figure was given out for the public to swallow.

That is just the point. It IS handed to the public, all of the time. Why? What does the public care?

JOHNSON'S COMPLAINT

Taken at his own word, Mr. John Johnson is lost to the United States through the ingratitude that has so often been said to be a characteristic fault of republics. Johnson's complaints respecting his native land are chiefly two—the people of the United States did not give him a "square deal," and they did not shout for him when he won. Whatever sort of a deal he got, it was profitable enough to enable him to lead the life of a spendthrift; and as for the shouting he had fully ten millions of his own race howling night and day. He could not expect everybody to be delighted over his success, for even in a prize fight, there are usually two sides.

3 P. M. DESPATCHES

LITTLE DAMAGE WAS DONE TO TRIPOLI

Reports of Bloodshed were Greatly Exaggerated—Only Three Persons Killed

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 9.—With the repairing of the Tripoli-Malta cable come reports that the previous stories of fighting at Tripoli were greatly exaggerated. Fishermen arriving at Malta declare that only three persons were killed by the bombardment and little damage done. The Italian marksmanship was wretched.

TURKISH FLEET SAFE

(Intelligencer Special.)

ROME, Oct. 9.—Official despatches from Constantinople say that the Turkish fleet is in the Bosphorus with furnaces drawn. It is evidently intended by the Government not to use their ships.

SLAVERY ALOLISHED

(Intelligencer Special.)

TRIPOLI, Oct. 9.—A proclamation abolishing slavery was issued to-day by the Italian Governor.

DIED FROM A BLOW

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Oct. 9.—J. Walter Dick died in the hospital this morning from the effects of a blow delivered by an unknown man at a down-town corner on Saturday night. Several detectives are working on the case, but have little clue as to the assailant. Mr. Dick was 45 years old and unmarried.

MINERALS OF ONTARIO INCREASING IN VALUE

Latest Reports of Bureau of Mines Gives Statistics and Comparisons

A host of interesting facts relative to the mineral resources of the province are contained in the latest report of the Ontario Bureau of Mines, which has just been issued. The products of the mines and mineral works of the province for 1910 had a value of $39,313,895. For 1909 the value was $32,981,375, the increase for the year being $6,332,520, or over 19 per cent. As compared with 1908 the increase was 53 per cent. The revenue derived by the government last year was $941,030.09.

During the last few years the marked advance in production is shown by these figures: In 1905 the value of production was $17,851,617; in 1906, $22,338,383; in 1907, $25,019,373; in 1908 it was $25,637,617; and in 1909 it was $32,981,375.

Owing to the very decided developments in silver and nickel the metals have come to be responsible for nearly three-fourths of the entire value, the proportions in 1910 being, metals, 72 per cent.; non-metals, 28 per cent. Metals rose from $10,201,010 in 1905, $28,161,678 in 1910, and non-metals from $7,653,286 to $11,152,217.

For 1910 all the metallic products, save cobalt, iron ore and zinc ore, show an increased output, as compared with 1909, the principal advances being silver, $3,016,690, pig iron, $673,890. In non-metals, brick (common), shows an excess of $458,140; stone of $301,396; Portland cement, of $246,995 and natural gas, $303,000. Drain tile fell off $15,106; pressed brick, $31,975, and petroleum, $191,325.

MONTREAL METHODISTS HAVE SOLD FAMOUS CHURCH FOR $2,000,000

MONTREAL, Oct. 8.—St. James' Methodist church and grounds were sold yesterday for $2,000,000. The church had the largest seating accommodation of any Methodist auditorium in Canada.

There is about 77,550 square feet with a frontage on St. Catherine Street of 235 feet; on Alexander St. 325 feet; on Mayor St., 235 feet; and on City Councillors St., 330 feet, or at the rate of about $26 per square foot. While many guesses have been made as to the sale of this big property, it is safe to say that the sale was ratified yesterday.

Mr. J. C. McGreevy, of Winnipeg, is the purchaser. This gentleman has been very active during the past five months in buying farm lands for the Canadian Northern Railway to the North of Mount Royal, but the purchase yesterday is one of the biggest he has yet concluded.

Mr. McGreevy's connection with the Canadian Northern has been very close, and there is little doubt that his purchase yesterday was on their behalf. Many rumors have been current as to the location of the Canadian Northern terminals, but the present transaction seems to settle that problem.

While the plans of the railway have not been given out, it is pretty certain from utterances from time to time of Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann, that the entrance to the city will be by tunnel under Mount Royal.

Electrical engines for the tunnel and terminals are also on the cards, and if they are finally adopted much of the nuisance of a big station will be avoided, and the usual depreciation in nearby property would not take place.

CURRENT COMMENT

The Turks, so far, have been doing more talking than fighting. But wait!

The Grit papers have of late been advising Sir James Whitney as to the best time for holding a general election for the Ontario Legislature. It is to laugh!

A prisoner locked in the Painesville, Ohio, jail, picked every lock in the building and made his way out. That man shouldn't have been imprisoned, he should have been canned.

That new industry proposed for Belleville, of which some particulars are given in another column, will no doubt attract a great deal of public attention. More will be known of it after the public meeting on Saturday 21st, of which announcement is made in the advertising columns.

A Toronto man has presented to R. L. Borden the arm chair that Sir John A. Macdonald used. No doubt Mr. Borden can fill it; and it will probably be found that he can fill Sir John's shoes also.—Hamilton Herald.

The United Kingdom consumed last year 82.43 pounds of sugar per capita. It imported 17,620,990 cwts. of unrefined sugar and 16,883,107 cwts. of refined sugar. It consumed 287,000,000 lbs. of tea, or 6.39 lbs. per capita. In the consumption of coffee the United States leads with 860,000,000 lbs., or 9.33 lbs. per capita. The Netherlands lead in the per capita consumption of coffee, 15.12 lbs.

When you pull down the town in which is your home, you are pulling down yourself and your neighbor. Try and banish from your mind the mistaken idea that all good things are away off in some other locality. Give your town all the praise it can legitimately bear. It will certainly will do you no harm and will cost you nothing; and above all patronize your home institutions—including the printing office.

The records show that since this year began fifty-four men have lost their lives by accidents to flying machines. Last year thirty-three men died under like circumstances. It is claimed that men are mastering the art of flying, and that what has been learned will enable them to devise a new machine which will be free from the defects that make aviation by existing means so dangerous. There should be some good come from the experience that has cost such an awful price.

Hopeless confusion reigns in the Liberal camp still. Some of the leaders are clamoring for Free Trade, others are crying "Thank Heaven, Reciprocity's killed; now, let's bury it deep for all time. Protection is the policy for Canada." They had better get together and formulate a policy. Or, better still, wait a few years until they have got rid of the old leaders who led the party into Opposition and then, with a newer and younger set of leaders, decide upon what their policy shall be.—Brockville Times.

Municipal Clean-Up.

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—Warrants for the arrest of Director of Public Safety Henry Clay, City Architect Carl B. Zilenziger, John R. Wiggins, a contractor and builder, and Treasurer Wall, of the latter's firm, were issued yesterday on the affidavit of Logan M. Bullitt, chairman of the taxpayers' committee. The charges are conspiracy to defraud the city and are an outcome of the investigation conducted by the Catlin Senatorial Commission. The men will not be taken into custody but will accept service through their attorneys and appear for a hearing.

Guard M.P.'s From Fires.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—It is likely that automatic fire protection equipment similar to that in use in the Legislative Buildings at Toronto will be installed in the Parliament Buildings here. Chief Graham thoroughly inspected this apparatus when at Toronto last week. Yesterday he said: "It is simply impossible for a fire to break out in any part of the Legislative buildings at Toronto without it being known."

MANUEL SEEKS THRONE

Royalist Troops Said to Have Suffered Defeat.

One Band of the Monarchist Forces Have Been Beaten and Another Is Reported Surrounded By the Republican Army — Manuel's Press Agents Are Telling of Victory—Ex-King Is Still In England.

Vigo, Spain, Oct. 7.—The Journal says the Portuguese royalists concentrated at Puebla de Sanabria, Province of Zamora, Spain, about twenty miles northeast of Braganza, Portugal, have formed themselves into three columns under the command of Capt. Couciere, Senhor Camacho Canavarro and Homen Gristo.

Their first objectives are Chaves and Braganza, where the garrisons are reported to have pronounced themselves in favor of the monarchy and court-martialed and shot a few officers who held contrary opinions. The monarchists now declare that the entire population in North Portugal has made common cause with them.

The Journal further says that the monarchists have acquired two warships, one of them of 16,000 tons. It says that all the foregoing is confirmed officially by the monarchist leader.

Have Crossed Frontier.

Madrid, Oct. 7.—A press despatch received here from Badajoz says that Don Miguel of Braganza and his two sons are now with the monarchists in Portugal, they and other leaders in the revolutionary movement having crossed the Spanish frontier in twenty motor cars during the past few days.

Manuel Is In London.

London, Oct. 7.—The report from Paris that ex-King Manuel is in Spain, presumably on his way to Portugal, is without foundation, Manuel is at Richmond with the Queen Mother Amelia.

Despatches from Lisbon published here say that several warships have left the Tagus for Oporto.

Royalists Defeated.

Lisbon, Oct. 7.—A band of royalists has been defeated in a fight with the Republican troops near Braganza, in Trae-Ose-Montes, the northeastermost province of Portugal. It is rumored that a royalist column at Vinhaes, 14 miles west of Braganza, is surrounded by Republicans.

A column of 700 monarchists commanded by Senor Camacho Canavarro, principal lieutenant of the royalist leader, Capt. Coucierre, entered Portugal Thursday morning from Zamora, Spain, and occupied Franca, Carregosa, Espinhozello, Paco, Soutello and Paraimo, all in the district around Braganza.

Two thousand royalists gathered from various places also have joined the column which is now at Venhoea.

Good Press Agents.

Badajoz, Spain, on the Portuguese Frontier, Oct. 7.—The Portuguese Government admits that royalist disturbances are in progress in northern Portugal, near the Spanish frontier. Besides the interference of the censorship there is great difficulty in learning the exact situation where the monarchists are operating because of the distance of those points from the railways and telegraph stations.

Royalist agents and sympathizers are spreading the news of a triumphal march of the monarchist troops toward Oporto. Thursday the invaders were represented as numbering 4,000. Yesterday it was asserted that 6,000 men are following the white and blue flag of the deposed King Manuel.

It is also stated that the royalists engaged and defeated the Republican troops at Guimaraes, a fortified town, twelve miles southeast of Bragas, and that Capt. Couciere will have 30,000 men behind him when he is prepared to invest Oporto.

SOUND SLEEP.

Can Easily Be Secured.

"Up to 2 years ago," a woman writes, "I was in the habit of using both tea and coffe regularly.

"I found that my health was beginning to fail, strange nervous attacks would come suddenly upon me, making me tremble so excessively that I could not do my work while they lasted; my sleep left me and I passed long nights in restless discomfort. I was filled with a nervous dread as to the future.

"A friend suggested that possibly tea and coffee were to blame, and I decided to give them up, and in casting about for a hot table beverage, which I felt was an absolute necessity, I was led by good fortune to try Postum.

"For more than a year I have used it three times a day and expect, so much good has it done me, to continue its use during the rest of my life.

"Soon after beginning the use of Postum, I found, to my surprise, that instead of tossing on a sleepless bed through the long dreary nights, I dropped into a sound, dreamless sleep the moment my head touched the pillow.

"Then I suddenly realized that all my nervousness had left me, and my appetite, which had fallen off before, had all at once been restored so that I ate my food with a keen relish.

"All the nervous dread has gone. I walk a mile and a half each way to my work every day and enjoy it. I find an interest in everything that goes on about me that makes life a pleasure. All this I owe to leaving off tea and coffee and the use of Postum, for I have taken no medicine." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ontario.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

"Eh mon but it's guid!"

The Haunted Chamber

"Ah," he says, stepping back as she hurls these words at him, and regarding her with a face distorted by passion, "If I were the master here, instead of the poor cousin—if I were Sir Adrian—your treatment of me would be very different!"

At the mention of Sir Adrian's name the color dies out of her face and she grows deadly pale. Her lips quiver, but her eyes do not droop.

"I do not understand you," she says proudly.

"Then you shall," responds Dynecourt. "Do you think I am blind, that I cannot see how you have given your proud heart to my cousin, that he has conquered where other men have failed; that, even before he has declared any love for you, you have, in spite of your pride, given all your affection to him?"

"You insult me," cries Florence, with quivering lips. She looks faint, and is trembling visibly. If this man has read her heart aright, may not all the guests have read it too? May not even Adrian himself have discovered her secret passion, and perhaps despised her for it, as being unwomanly?

"And more," goes on Dynecourt, exulting in the torture he can see he is inflicting; though you thrust from you an honorable love for one that lives in your imaginatoin, I tell you that Sir Adrian has other views, other intentions. I have reason to know that when he marries, the name of his bride will not be Florence Delmaine."

"Leave me, sir,' cries Florence, rousing herself from her momentary weakness, and speaking with all her old fire, "and never presume to address me again. Go!"

She points with extended hand to the door at the lower end of the gallery. So standing, with her eyes strangely bright, and with her perfect figure drawn up to its fullest height, she looks superb in her disdainful beauty.

Dynecourt, losing his self-possession as he gazes upon her, suddenly flings himself at her feet and catches her dress in his hands to detain her.

"Have pity on me," he cries imploringly, "it is my unhappy love that has driven me to speak thus! Why is Adrian to have all and me nothing? He has title, lands, position—above and beyond everything, the priceless treasure of your love, whilst I am bankrupt in all. Show me some mercy—some kindness!"

They are both so agitated that they fail to hear the sound of approaching footsteps.

"Release me, sir," cries Florence, imperiously.

"Nay; first answer me one question," entreats Dynecourt. "Do you love my cousin?"

"I care nothing for Sir Adrian!" replies Florence, distinctly, and in a somewhat raised voice, her self-pride being touched to the quick.

Two figures who have entered the gallery by the second door at the upper end of it, hearing these words, uttered in an emphatic tone, start and glance at the tableau presented to their view lower down. They hesitate and even as they do so, they can see Arthur Dynecourt seize Florence Delmaine's hand, and, apparently, unrebuked, kiss it passionately.

"Then I shall hope still," he says, in a low but impressive voice, at which the two who have just entered, turn and beat a precipitate retreat, fearing that they might be seen. One is Sir Adrian, the other Mrs. Talbot.

"Dear me," stammers Dora, in pretty confusion, "who would have thought it? I was never so amazed in my life."

So Adrian, who has turned very pale and is looking greatly distressed makes no reply. He is repeating over again the words he has just heard, as though unable or unwilling to comprehend them. "I care nothing for Sir Adrian!" They strike like a knell upon his ears—a death-knell to all his dearest hopes. And that fellow on his knees before her, kissing her hand, and telling her he will still hope! Hope for what! Alas, he tells himself, he knows only too well—her love!

"I am so glad they have made it up," Dora goes on, looking up sympathetically at Sir Adrian.

"Made it up? I had no idea they were any more than ordinary new acquaintances."

"It is very near a year since we first met Arthur in Switzerland," responds Dora demurely, calling Dynecourt by his Christian name, a thing she has never done before, because she knows it will give Sir Adrian the impression that they are on very intimate terms with his cousin. "He has bee nou shadow ever since. I wonder you did not notice his devotion in town."

"I noticed nothing," says Sir Adrian, miserably; "or, if I did, it was only to form a wrong impression. I firmly believed, seeing Miss Delmaine and Arthur together here, that she betrayed nothing but a rooted dislike to him."

"They had not been good friends of late," explains Dora, hastily; "that we could all see. And Florence is very peculiar, you know; she is quite the dearest girl in the world, and I adore her; but I will confess to you"—with another upward and bewitching glance from the charming blue eyes—"that she has her little tempers. Not very naughty ones, you know"—shaking her head archly—"but just enough to make one a bit afraid of her at times; so I never ventured to ask her why she treated poor Arthur, who is really her slave, so cruelly."

"And now you think that——" Sir Adrian breaks off without finishing the sentence.

"That she has forgiven him whatever offence he committed? Yes, after what we have seen—quite a sentimental little episode, was it not?—I cannot help cherishing the hope that all is again right between them. It could not have been a very grave quarrel, as Arthur is incapable of a rudeness; but then dearest Florence is so capricious?"

"Ill-tempered and capricious!" Can the girl he loves so ardently be guilty of these faults? It seems incredible to Sir Adrian, as he remembers her sunny smile and gentle manner. But then, is it not her dearest friend who is speaking of her—tender-hearted little Dora Talbot, who seems to think well of everyone, and who murmurs such pretty speeches about Arthur, who, if the truth be told, is not exactly "dear" in the eyes of Sir Adrian

"You think there is, or was, an engagement between Arthur and Miss Delmaine?" he begins, with his eyes fixed upon the ground.

"I think nothing, you silly man,' says the widow, playfully, "until I am told it. But I am glad Florence is once more friendly with poor Arthur; he is positively wrapped up in her. Now, has that interesting tableau we so nearly interrupted given you a distaste for all other pictures? Shall we try the smaller gallery?"

"Just as you will."

"Of course"—with a girlish laugh—"it would be imprudent to venture again into the one we have just quitted. By this time, doubtless, they are reconciled—and——"

"Yes—yes," interrupts Sir Adrian, hastily, trying in vain to blot out the picture she has raised before his eyes of Florence in her lover's arms. "What you have just told me has quite taken me by surprise," he goes on nervously. "I should never have guessed it from Miss Delmaine's manner; it quite misled me."

"Well, between you and me," says Dora, raising herself on tiptoe, as though to whisper in his ear, and so coming fery close to him, "I am afraid my dearest Florence is a little sly! Yes, really; you wouldn't think it, would you? The dear girl has such a sweet, ingenous face—quite the loveliest face on earth, I think, though some pronounce it too cold. But she is very self-contained, and to-day, you see, she has given you a an insight into this slight fault in her character. Now, has she not appeared to avoid Arthur most pointedly?"

SUFFERED FROM VIOLENT CATHARTICS

The Warning of Mr. Geo. C. Fox is One that Should be Heeded by all.

Few men on the road are better known than genial George Fox, whose friends throughout the West are legion. In the following letter he expresses gratitude for signal services rendered by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. He goes on to say: "Until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills and experienced their wonderful mildness and curative power, I estimated the value of every pill by its activity. Talking about this to a well-known physician I met on the train the other day, he explained that there are different kinds of drugs that act upon the bowels, the most active being known as the drastic. Purgatives cause catarrh of the bowels and inflammation; their dose must be increased, causing even more harm. With such a clear explanation I could see why Dr. Hamilton's Pills are curative and not irritating, why they are mild, yet most searching.

"From my experience I recommend everyone that takes pills to give up the old-fashioned harsh, purging pill, and instead, to use Dr. Hamilton's They cure headache, biliousness, constipation, bad stomach and keep the system in perfect condition."

How to Get New Industries

The following suggestive article, which appeared a few days ago in the Kingston Standard, is worthy of consideration by all concerned:—

It is very evident that if Kingston is to continue the forward movement which has been in evidence now for some months we must have new industries. It is very evident also that if we are to have these new industries we must bid for at least some of them, as other municipalities are doing. On principle we believe that the bonus system is wrong, and we feel that it would be very much better if we could do away altogether with it.

But the point is, is there not a better system than bonusing — one that will attract and hold industries, and yet that will be less costly to the community? We think there is, namely, the advancing by the city of money in the form of a loan to new enterprises, this loan to be paid off at a stated time, with interest on it in the meantime. That is to say, instead of making an out-and-out gift to an industry it would seem to be a good policy, if we are to attract new industries as other places are doing, for the city to make a loan for a given time to such company or companies as it may seem desirable to secure, this loan to be repaid in due season, with interest. Under this arrangement the city—first satisfied that the company to which it advanced the money was a legitimate and fairly prosperous concern—would be out no money but would rather be in the position simply of lending its credit to the industry; while there would, from the company's standpoint, be this advantage, that the controlling interests in it would not be obliged to part with their control through a sale of stock or bonds but would, with the growth and prosperity of the company, be able to pay back the loan and reap then the rewards of their own industry, energy and work.

The plan, certainly, is one to be given careful consideration. If, by the advance of a reasonable sum of money, amply secured, the city can obtain a desirable industry it would be a good idea to make a move in that direction and certainly it would be much better than to follow the old method of a bonus, which in fact is nothing more than an out-and-out gift of money which it is never intended shall be repaid. To us it seems that the temporary loan idea is both sensible and feasible.

Cost of Railways

The subject of railway capitalization is one that has recently come in for much discussion, much of it of an uninformed kind, it being alleged that much of the railway share capital is composed of wind and water, injected for the purpose of swindling the public and holding up for rates that will pay dividends on fictitious investments. It is, therefore, interesting to examine the figures compiled for the Interstate Commerce Commission and to compare them with those presented by Mr. Frank Nay, of the Rock Island lines, covering foreign railways. The figures of the commission show that on June 30th, 1909, the total capital stock of all railways in the United States aggregated $7,686,274,545; the total funded debt on the same aggregated $9,801,560,390, a total capitalization of $17,487,868,935 for 235,402 miles of road, or an average per mile of $74,289. Mr. Nay notes that no two miles of railway cost exactly the same. Some miles of road cost $18,000 to $70,000 originally; and some others $18,000 to $500,000, without equipment. He takes the average estimate of all the United States roads at $30,234, besides the rolling stock, and finds it much too low.

The United States Bureau of Railroad News and Statistics is probably much nearer the actual figures in its recent comparison of railway cost:

Country—	Capitalization. per mile.
Great Britain	$275,000
Belgium	169,856
France	139,000
Italy	125,730
Austria	112,879
Germany	109,788
United States	57,201

The Canadian roads presented in 1909 a capitalization of $54,285 per mile in railway stock and bonds, but there are factors which will increase that somewhat. The Monetary Times calls attention to the fact that the Year Book total of $1,308,481,416 includes the stock and bond liability of the Grand Trunk Pacific, while the mileage of that line is not embraced in the total of 24,104 miles forming the divisor. On the other hand, the mileage of government owned lines in Canada forms a part of the 24,104, against which there is not any issue of either stock or bonds. If we count out both the capital liabilities and the government-owned mileage we get a per mile cost of the Canadian privately-owned roads of $55,638, leaving them still the lowest of the series, with share capital of $28,345 and bonds $27,293 per mile.

INSPECTION OF FOOD

Large Quantities Confiscated in Toronto and Other Large Centres of Population

Some idea of the large amount of food stuffs condemned by the inspectors of the Medical Health Department is given by the report of Mr. Awde, head of this department, for the month's inspection.

Mr. Awde made the following inspections:

Shops where bread and butter are sold	1,773
Butcher shops, outside of markets	1,408
Fresh fish shops and warehouses	1,631
Total number of inspections,	4,812

Mr. Awde made the following confiscations during the six months:

Fresh fish in bulk	14,335 lbs.
Meats of various kinds	1,541 lbs.
Sheep and lambs	92 carcases.
Calves	91 carcases.
Quarters of veal	93 carcases.
Smelts	59 boxes.
Haddies	92 boxes.
Herrings	47 casks.
Herrings	6 barrels.
Chickens, ducks and turkeys	78
Cases of Poultry	3
Frogs' Legs	19 pails.
Lettuce	192 bbls.
Radishes	36 crates.
Cabbage	10 bbls.
Potatoes	29 bbls.
Turnips	14 crates.
Celery	17 crates.

And numerous other smaller lots.

1,115 loaves of bread; 681 rolls of butter, 34 pails of lard.

Pertinent to the subject is the following telegrom from Toronto, on the 5th:—That diseased meat is being sold in Toronto in large quantities because there are not enough inspectors to watch the private abattoirs, is the startling statement by Dr. Hastings, Medical Health Officer, in his September bulletin.

Of the 500 cattle killed weekly, only one fourth are examined, and of these over one-eighth are found to be diseased. Dr. Hastings advocates a municipal abattoir.

TASK NEARLY FINISHED

Premier Borden's Cabinet to Be Announced This Afternoon.

List Is Almost Completed and Correspondents Are Pretty Well Agreed on the Chief Features of the Personnel — Members Will Not Be Sworn In Until Noon To-morrow—Hughes For Militia.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—The Borden Cabinet will not be sworn in till noon on Tuesday, Earl Grey afterwards leaving by special train for Montreal to catch his boat.

The Ministry is yet uncompleted, but while this is so, there are a number of men who are regarded as certain selections. These include:

Nova Scotia: R. L. Borden.
New Brunswick: Hon. J. D. Hazen.
Quebec: Doherty, Perley, Pelletier, Monk.
Ontario: Cochrane, Foster, White, Broder, Hughes.
Manitoba: Rogers, Roche.
British Columbia: Goodeve.

Col. Sam Hughes will, it is expected take the militia portfolio, and W. T. White of Toronto seems a certainty as Minister of Finance. Mr. White is in Ottawa to-day.

There is still some doubt as to Quebec, though when the delegation from that province left Ottawa Saturday, it is said that Rodolphe Forget would go in without portfolio, instead of Wilfrid Nantel.

The portfolios have not been alloted.

Hazen For Railways?

St. John, N.B., Oct. 9—J. D. Hazen, Premier of New Brunswick, left for Ottawa last night, to accept a seat in the Borden Cabinet. He said he was not sure what portfolio he would get. It is believed he will be the next Minister of Railways.

Canadian Troops Complimented.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—Militia orders to date contain, among other things, a copy of the despatch from the Imperial authorities to His Excellency, requesting him to convey to his Ministers an expression of the gratitude of His Majesty's Government at receiving representatives of the military and naval forces of the overseas dominions for the purpose of taking part in the coronation festivities which have just terminated. The despatch also stated that the amassing of the contingents from all parts had a good effect in bringng together men from the widely separated portions of the Empire.

"A most favorable impression was created by the appearance of the troops on the coronation days, as well as at the parade at St. Paul's Cathedral, on June 18, and also at the parade on June 30, when His Majesty was pleased to present them with coronation medals," he states.

The detachment from the 79th Highlanders of Canada were inspected by H.R.H., the Duke of Connaught at Aldershot This detachment was granted the coronation medal in the same proporton as was adopted in the case of the regular army. The despatch concluded:

"His Majesty's Government trusts that the troops will carry back with them a pleasing recollection of their visit."

Ousted From His Job.

Providence, R.I., Oct. 9.—Alleging that he took the stump in Canada in opposition to reciprocity in the name of the company, unwarrantedly, the stockholders of the Credit Foncier Canadien, a French-Canadian lumber and real estate corporation, Saturday voted to oust Arthur Laberge of Montreal as their vice-president. Only twenty of the eighteen hundred stockholders voted in person, others being represented by proxies, voted by the secretary, Joseph W. Trinque.

Mr. Laberge attended the meeting and made an extended speech, claiming that his campaign work in Canada was done entirely as an individual and not in the name of the company.

Of the 1,800 stockholders, 1,600 are residents of New England, and the others of Canada. The company owns timber tracts in New Brunswick and Quebec.

Will Not Sell to Canadian Road.

Minneapolis, Oct. 9.—Newman Erb, new director of the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railway yesterday made the first authoritative statement regarding the plans of the company. He said:

"We will build to the Canadian line and we will rehabilitate the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad and Iowa Central. We will do our developing and do not contemplate selling out to any Canadian road."

Provincial Appointments.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—The following appointments by the Provincial Government were announced yesterday:

[illegible] R. McCready is appointed director of elementary agricultural education.

Henri St. Jacques, B.A., has been appointed principal of Sturgeon Falls English-French model school, in succession to L. E. O. Payment, who has been transferred to the English-French model school at Ottawa.

James Henry Barritt, K.C., of the town of Pembroke, has been appointed crown attorney and clerk of the peace for Renfrew County in the room of J. P. Metcalf, resigned.

Had Not Read Enoch Arden.

Montreal, Oct. 7.—Frank Calve, who came to this city from Ottawa a few months ago, looking for his wife and finding her living as the wife of another, struck her with a knife, cutting her across the face, was sentenced to six months in prison and a fine of $50 or three months additional, with two bondsmen of $500 each to keep the peace for one year, yesterday.

Eye-Water for Weak or Red Eyelids

Put an ounce of orris root, and an ounce of white copperas into three pints of running water — that is, spring or water which flows from a brook or rock. Let it stand for two or three days, shaking occasionally well together. Bathe the eyes with a linen rag dipped in the lotion three times a day Keep it in bottles, out of the way of children; copperas is poisonous.

A Gurney-Oxford is as prompt as young Appetites

There is no delay; the children never have to wait for meals when you have a Gurney-Oxford in the kitchen. With this range dinner is on the dot. Your fire is absolutely reliable, the heat regulated and controlled by an exclusive device, the wonderful little OXFORD ECONOMIZER. This patent damper enables you to forget the fire until the hour to start dinner. And the saving of coal will astonish you; 20% reduction on your bills is an easy record for this little regulator.

GURNEY-OXFORD

Another advantage is in its splendid oven facilities. No more soggy or over-done baking. The oven heat is controlled and guided equally over front, back and sides by means of the DIVIDED FLUE STRIP.

The Reversible Grate, the Broiler Top, the patent Lift-up Hearth are more reasons for owning a Gurney-Oxford, and to these advantages are added a shining appearance, artistic design and perfect ease of operation.

You are invited to come and see this and others of the Gurney-line.

CHEAPER CUTS OF MEAT

Careful Housewives Will Note that If Properly Cooked These Are Not to be Despised.

Butchers should endeavor to correct the impression of customers that only the high priced meats are valuable as food. On the contrary, the cheaper cuts are often more highly flavored and fully as nutritious.

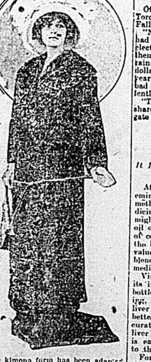
The chuck is one of the cheapest portions of the beef, but when cooked slowly in a small amount of water either with or without vegetables for seasoning is a most excellent dish.

In stewing meat if too hig. a temperature is used it will toughen the fibre. Another mistake is to overcook the meat until it falls to shreds. The skirt steak sells for two or three cents a pound less than the others, but if properly cooked is just as good. Lay the steak on a meat board and score it well with a chopping knife.

Then dredge with flour and put it into a smoking hot frying pan that has been greased enough to keep the meat from sticking to it. When well seared over on both sides pour over it a little boiling water and allow it to simmer slowly for two hours. Season to suit the taste. A bit of carrot or onion or bay leaf and a little vinegar to soften the fibre will add to the flavor of the meat.

All light meats are best stewed and browned just before serving. Mutton or beef is best browned first and then stewed. Cheaper cuts are best cooked in the fireless cooker. When roasting meat it should be quickly seared over to retain the juices and then cooked slowly until done. Usually fifteen minutes to the pound is required.

A KIMONA STYLE



The kimona form has been adapted by furriers to coats. The fur looks charming over drooping shoulders when it has no seam at the shoulder. Many of the new jackets are made upon this model.

SMART LITTLE COATEES NOW IN GREAT FAVOR.

The little coat is one of the most charming features of this season's modes and it seems as if all the famous dressmakers were vying one with the other in turning out costumes of whose success this detail is the key-note.

The robe worn beneath the coat may be a marvel of cobwebby fineness and patient handwork and costly lace, or it may be a very simple affair, charming of line and material, but in either case it is the cat that catches the eye, the coat that gives the costume its originality and cachet.

One must admit that this adorable little garment has not yet come into its own here. You may see models of the type referred to in some of the importing houses, and you may have encountered perhaps a dozen such costumes here and there, but correspondents write of them as fairly epidemic wherever smart Parisians congregate, and perhaps even yet, before the season dies, Canadian women will take them up enthusiastically on this side of the water.

To Withdraw Stoppers.

The cause is often through rapping or knocking the stopper of the decanter. When they are very firmly fixed, get a piece of wood and tap the stopper carefully, first on one side, then on the other. This will generally loosen them.

Boy of 15 Weds Girl of 14.

New York, Oct. 7.—Homesickness temporarily checked the romantic plans of Arthur Edward James, aged fifteen, and Ruth Jane Day, fourteen years old, who eloped from South Orange, N.J., last Saturday. They returned to their homes Thursday night, having tried in vain to obtain a marriage license. Although footsore and dispirited, the children begged to be permitted to marry, and the wedding will now probably take place at once in the Episcopal Church at South Orange which both have attended since they were mere babies. The parents have consented to the union.

Big Demand on Rain Fund.

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—J. Lockie Wilson of Toronto, provincial superintendent of Fall Fairs, who is in Ottawa, said:

"No fewer than forty fairs this year had to be postponed on account of the elections. This bunched a number of them at a season characterized by rains. As a result the ten thousand dollars voted for the first time this year to be used as insurance against bad weather came in very conveniently.

"Thirty fairs have applied for a share as a result of the drop in their gate receipts due to the wet weather."

WHAT IS VINOL?

It Represents Twenty Years' Work of Two Eminent Chemists.

After twenty years of study two eminent French chemists discovered a method by which the alkaloids or medicinal elements of the cod's liver might be separated from the useless oil or grease, retaining all the good of cod liver oil and dispensing with the bad, as the oil had no medicinal value. These medicinal elements, blended with tonic iron and a mild medicinal wine—make Vinol.

Vinol is not a secret medicine, as its ingredients are printed on every bottle, and in all cases where the healing, strengthening influence of cod liver oil is needed, Vinol will give better results, for it contains all the curative medicinal properties of cod liver oil, but without the oil, and it is easily assimlaited and acceptable to the weakest stomach.

For all run-down, weakened conditions, and to cure chronic coughs, colds and bronchial troubles, Vinol is unexcelled. We sell it always with the understanding that if it does not do all we claim for it, we wlil refund the money paid us for it. J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

CHURCH RESPONSIBLE.

Methodists Discuss Duty in Foreign Mission Fields.

Toronto, Oct. 7.—Foreign missionary enterprise was the topic of the third day's sessions of the Ecumenical Methodist Conference. The responsibility of Methodism in world-wide evangelism, her mission to the non-Christian races, the backward races, and in particular to the Latin races, and to the countries of France and Korea, were the subjects of the addresses and essays, and the resources of the church in men and women and in means were passed in review. The high note of service to the less highly favored peoples was sounded with no hesitancy, and time and again through the day the call rang out in the earnest words of the speakers that Methodism should gird herself for the task of evangelization more determinedly and on a larger scale than ever she has done. This was necessary, it was declared, if she would save herself from stern condemnation. Spurgeon's declaration was quoted by one speaker, that it was "not so much a question whether the heathen could be saved if we did not send them the Gospel, but whether we ourselves could be saved if we did not give it to those who are without it." Methodists alone, he said, could, if they set themselves to the task, carry the Gospel in less than ten years to the thousand million inhabitants of the earth now crying for it. Antagonism to Roman Catholicism as a system was prominent in some of the addresses.

French Flag at Agadir.

Berlin, Oct. 7.—A group of Frenchmen hoisted a French flag over the fort at Agadir, Morocco, threatening grave international complications. It was announced that France had proclaimed a protectorate and that a French cruiser was en route for Agadir.

The French Government immediately disavowed the action and as it is not represented at Agadir, instructed the French consul at Mogador to ask the Moroccan authorities to take measures to remove the flag and end the incident.

According to the latest advices the Frenchmen were defying the local Calif of Agadir, who on his own responsibility had ordered the French colors lowered.

Agadir is the seaport on the Atlantic coast of Morocco, where the German gunboat Panther and the German cruiser Berlin landed men to the surprise of France, which was engaged in putting down a revolt of the natives and which incident caused the recent Moroccan crisis.

Majority Is Reduced.

Halifax, Oct. 9.—The result of the recount in Halifax, which ended on Saturday night before Judge Wallace, is that R. L. Borden's majority in this riding is reduced from 190 to 100. Four depuy returning officers put the numbered counterfoil into the box with the ballots. Three of the rejected boxes gave Borden large majorities, and one was a Liberal majority. Herring Cove was the first box of this kind. It gave the Liberals about thirty majority. Then Sober Island East, Chezzetcook and Dover with Conservative majorities were rejected for a similar reason. The two last mentioned polls made a net loss to the Conservatives of 90. The result is that Mr. Borden's majority is reduced to 100 over Maclean and 166 over Blackader, while Blackader has 93 instead of the previous 23 over Crosby. The Conservatives gained 25, exclusive of the polls thrown out. The stupidity and ignorance of the deputy presiding officers is the cause of the trouble. With the counterfoil in the box attached to the ballots it was possible to tell how each elector voted Centenary Celebrated.

Brockville, Oct. 9.—The centenary celebartion of the First Presbyterian Church, one of the oldest places of worship in Eastern Ontario, opened yesterday and will be continued over the next three weeks, with special Sunday and week-day services. Dr. Robert Johnston of Montreal takes the services on the 29th inst. The pastor of the church is Rev. Norman Macleod, formerly of Ottawa.

Fighting In Morocco.

Madrid, Oct. 9.—Operations by the Spanish forces against hostile tribes in Morocco have been resumed, according to official despatches from Melilla. Covered by the fire of warships, two columns Saturday advanced ten miles inland in the Kert River region, burning many houses and driving the tribesmen from their positions, in spite of determined resistance.

The engagement lasted ten hours and was directed by the Minister of War, Gen. de Luque, in person. Details of the Spanish losses have not yet been received, but they are believed to have been heavy, exceeding 100. Col. Primo de Rivera is among the wounded. The operations continue to-day.

Hutchinson, a teamster in West London, had taken money from the city and also from a citizen for the removal of some dirt on Sussex avenue, West London. Mr. Hutchinson stated that he would take such proceedings. Mr. Wright declares that he can go ahead if he so desires.

Peace often costs more than a fight

BATTLE IS REPORTED

Portuguese Republican Troops Have Met the Royalists.

Supporters of King Manuel Are Numerous But Badly Armed—Republican Officers Are Not Sure of Loyalty of Their Soldiers—Monarchists Said to Have Cut Off Retreat of the

A CHANCE FOR ALL.

Vigo, Spain, Oct. 9.—Train passengers from Portugal report an engagement between the Royalists and Republican troops near Sayo Thyrso, not far from Oporto. The Royalists, while numerous, they say, are badly armed.

All trains froms Oporto yesterday morning were crowded with troops on their way to fight the Monarchists. The Portuguese Government, however, is not sure of the loyalty of the regiments.

Relief Force Sent.

Chaves, Portugal, Oct. 9.—Republican troops have left for Vinhaes, 14 miles west of Braganza, to relieve other Republican troops, whose retreat is said to be cut off by the Monarchists. The roads to the frontier are now open and telegraphic communication has been restored.

Pretender With Royalists.

Vienna, Oct. 9.—Dom Miguel Braganza, pretender to the Portuguese throne, announces that he has agreed to accept the program laid out by Capt. Couciere, leader of the Royalists. Dom Miguel says that the cortes will have to decide between him and Manuel. He will not proceed to the Portuguese frontier, but will remain neutral to the last moment, although he has allowed sons to enter the Monarchist ranks under assumed names as volunteers.

"The Republic of Portugal," said Dom Miguel, "has, through its disregard for all traditions and religious convictions, made itself so hated, especially among the country people, that the prospects for the restoration of the monarchy are not unfavorable."

Contradictory Reports.

Lisbon, Oct. 9.—The most contradictory reports are being received here regarding the situation in the north. The Monarchists, however, do not appear to be making much headway against the republic. The people are not flocking to their side as they expected, and the Republican troops so far have remained loyal.

A semi-official note says that the Monarchist band at Vinhaes fled on the arrival of the Republican troops, who pursued them to the frontier. In the engagement several Monarchists were killed and two Republicans wounded.

News from Galicia says that the Monarchists there are in a state of demoralization. They leaders are unable to persuade them to advance into Portugal.

Not Exercising Censorship.

Madrid, Oct. 9.—The Portuguese Prime Minister Joao Chapas, has notified the Portuguese legation here that the Government has taken all necessary steps to resist the Royalist rising, and that "tranquility reigns throughout the country." The Government has reinforced the Braganza garrison.

The Premier says that he wishes the press to be informed that the Portuguese Government is not exercising any censorship over telegrams, and is permitting even the most mendacious reports to be transmitted.

Rescuers Report Failure.

Copenhagen, Oct. .—A message received here from Greenland says that Knud Rasmussen, the Danish explorer, failed to discover any traces of Captain Elmar Mikkelsen and his companions, who after having been rescued on the coast of East Greenland last year, left their party to search for traces of the lost explorer Ericssen. Rasmussen expreses the fear that Mikkelsen and his party have perished.

Fruehen, another Danish explorer, who accompanied Rasmussen, obtained from Cook's Eskimo assistant, Etukishuk, the box which Cook alleged contained the instruments and papers which would prove his polar discovery claims. The box contains only a broken sextant and other instruments, but no papers. According to Fruehen, Etukishuk said the story told by Dr. Cook was absolutely untrue.

Mistaken For Deer.

Bingham, Maine, Oct. 9.—Mistaken for a deer by the man whom he was guiding through the woods near the base of Mosquito Mountain Saturday, Harold Hight, 26, of Bingham, was shot and killed. Hight and Dr. Brooks, a physician of New York City, started out from a sporting camp near Lake Moxie in search of deer with the understanding that if either saw an animal, he was to whistle to the other. Dr. Brooks thought he saw a deer and whistled. When he got no answer, he fired, he says. The bullet struck the guide in the back of the neck and he died shortly afterwards, although Dr. Brooks did everything possible for him.

Guilty of Horse Stealing.

Woodstock, Oct. 9.—Wm. Treuhen, the local man who bought a horse in this city and went to Guelph, where he was arrested after he had sold the horse and failed to settle in the Woodstock deal with the proceeds, was found guilty of stealing, by the magistrate. He was not sentenced and was sent back to jail, where he will conduct some correspondence with a view of getting the horse back to its original owner in Woodstock.

Found Car But Not Man.

St. Catharines, Oct. 9.—Jas. Stewart, who was left in charge of Jones' garage on Mary street, while the proprietor went to New York, on his wedding trip, Friday took the car belonging to Jones, after collecting a sum of money owing the garage. When no return was made at night, the police were notified, and a search resulted in finding the car at Stamford, but Stewart has not since been seen or heard of.

WANT BRITAIN'S AID

Moslems of India Ask Help For the Turks.

Appeal Is Sent to London by Council of Mohammedans Seeking Government's Intervention — Prominent Italian Socialist Advocates Peaceful Settlement of the Difficulty—Arabs Are Organizing.

Lucknow, British India, Oct. 9.—The Council of Moslems of all India has appealed for the intervention of the British Government in behalf of Turkey. It has advised also a boycott of Italian goods.

Outlined Italian Policy.

Rome, Oct. 9—Premier Gioletti, in a speech at Turin yesterday, outlined the policy of the Government with reference to Tripoli, which seems to have the support of most of the members of the Chamber of Deputies, and a great majority of the people. Signor Bisolati, leader of the Socialists in the chamber, however, writes to The Secolo, giving the view of a section of the Democrats and Socialists, differing from that of the nation at large. Signor Bisolati was the first of his party to be received by the King, when, during the last Ministerial crisis, the Premier offered him a portfolio.

In his letter to The Secolo he says: "Now that the occupation it accomplished, it must be decided whether Tripoli will be considered conquered territory unconditionally, or whether Italy is ready to compromise—stopping the war, sparing Turkey excessive humiliations and offering her political and material satisfaction, and thus rendering the resumption of good relations between the two nations possible."

Signor Gioletti expresses the opinion that it will be necessary for Italy to adopt a "less brutal solution," so as te remove the impression that violence has been used against Turkey, and that Italy should show a spontaneous conciliatory disposition, thus avoiding such measures as may be "proposed, if not imposed by the powers."

Turkish Censorship.

Constantinople, Oct. 9.—The Government has decided to establish a censorship on all press telegrams, particularly dealing with military matters. Code messages will be prohibited.

The Turkish commander at Tripoli reports that the Italian bombardment destroyed numerous houses and killed many inhabitants, including several women and children.

Tripoli Now Tranquil.

Malta, Oct. 9.—Prof. Arthaeur, chief of the Austrian scientific mission, who has arrived here from Tripoli, says that the town is now tranquil. Europeans are not endangered, and only 1,000 Turkish soldiers remain in the hinterland, but the Arabs, he says, are already organizing guerilla bands and intend to put up a dogged resistance.

Prof. Arthaeur expresses the opinion that if Italy is content with the occupation of Tripoli her mission might be considered ended, but that if she intends to embark upon a campaign in the hinterland, it will take years to subdue the natives.

Closed Canal to Both.

Athens, Oct. 9.—The Corinth Canal Co. has decided to close the canal to both Turkish and Italian vessels during the continuance of the war. This canal connects the Gulf of Corinth with Aegean Sea.

Inviting Mediation.

Constantinople, Oct. 9.—The Chauvinist press still demands severe anti-Italian measures, but the moderate press and the general public realize that the only possible course is to end the war without delay. It is understood that the Grand Vizier and the Minister of War are inviting mediation by the Powers to secure the completion of peace, and that in the meantime the execution of the decree of expulsion relating to Italians will be postponed.

Grain Contraband.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 9.—Russia is negotiating with Turkey in connection with Turkey's intention to declare grain contraband of war. Such action on Turkey's part would paralyze the Russian export trade Complained to Stagni.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—Lucien Canon, who was beaten in Charlevoix by Rodolphe Forget, has entered a complaint before Monsignor Stagni, the papal delegate at Ottawa, alleging strong partisan conduct on the part of Rev. Abbe Larouche, parish priest of St. Fidele. Canon alleges that he complained in the first place to the Bishop of Chicoutimi and having no reply from his lordship, he goes to the delegate for redress.

Mr. Canon says that it was the clerical influence that defeated Laurier, but L'Action Sociale wants to know what the priests had to do with the result in Ontario and the eastern provinces.

German Balloon Wins.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 9.—The balloon Berlin II., carrying the flag of Germany, has won the international balloon race for the James Gordon Bennett Cup. The Berlin II., landed in the wilderness near Holcombe, Wis., at seven o'clock Saturday morning. The Berlin landed about 440 miles from Kansas City.

The Buckeye, the United States representative in the race and the Berlin II.'s nearest rival, landed 365 miles from Kansas City at Lacrosse, Wis. The Berlin has beaten the Buckeye's mark by about 75 miles.

Murdered In Their Saloon.

Detroit, Oct. 9.—Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kraft, proprietors of a road house seven miles from Detroit were murdered in their saloon last night and the police are searching for Charles Fuller, a former employe. A daughter of the murdered couple claims Fuller shot at her and missed, and then killed her parents. The tragedy, it is said, followed a quarrel between the girl and Fuller.

A $2,000,000 Offer.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—St. James' Methodist Church, the largest home of Methodism in the world, has not been sold as yet, despite reports to the contrary, but it is announced that Major John T. McBride has been authorized by parties in close touch with the Canadian Northern interests to offer the sum of $2,000,000 for the property. The church, including the site, cost $385,000.

To Represent Canada.

Brantford, Oct. 9.—T. H. Preston of The Expositor, confirmed the report here Saturday that he had been appointed to represent the Canadian Associated Press Association at the Royal Durbar at Delhi in December. The invitation came from the Indian Government. Mr. Preston stated, however, that circumstances rendered it impossible that he would go.

Bank clearings for Calgary, for week ending October 5, amounted to $4,166,006, an increase of 52.4 per cent. over the corresponding week of 1910.

DRUNKS AND VAGS IN POLICE COURT

Magistrate Masson to-day had three cases brought before him, two of which were tried and one laid over.

Drunk.

James McDonald, who claims Toronto as his home, was this morning fined $5 for being intoxicated.

Alleged Assault.

The case of George Perry, of this city, who is accused of assaulting and occasioning grievous bodily harm to James Davidson, was enlarged until Thursday. Perry in the meantime is out on bail. Mr. Carnew appeared for the accused, and Mr. Anderson represented the Crown.

Two Offences Charged.

Moran Weese and Wm. Donohue, two boys 15 years of age, were charged with two offences, namely vagrancy and breaking into Thompson and Company's factory. The latter place of business, situated on Mill Street, was entered on Thursday night last by the breaking of a window. It is alleged the accused committed the act. Through their counsel, Mr. Wm. STOMACH
LIVER
LUNGS

Each of the chief organs of the body is a link in the Chain of Life. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link, the body no stronger than its weakest organ. If there is weakness of stomach, liver or lungs, there is a weak link in the chain of life which may snap at any time. Often this so-called "weakness" is caused by lack of nutrition, the result of weakness or disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases and weaknesses of the stomach and its allied organs are cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. When the weak or diseased stomach is cured, diseases of other organs which seem remote from the stomach but which have their origin in a diseased condition of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, are cured also.

The strong man has a strong stomach. Take the above recommended "Discovery" and you may have a strong stomach and a strong body.

GIVEN AWAY.—Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, new revised Edition, is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

FLOOD OF CHECK-LADEN MISSIVES.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Within twenty-four hours after the announcement yesterday of the schedule of games of the 1911 world's baseball championships, applications for seats came in such numbers that the offices of the New York Baseball Club were literally flooded with check-laden missives to-night. The demand was so overwhelming that a score of extra clerks were hurriedly engaged to attack the mountain of mail. The applications were too numerous to count to-night but they ran up into many thousands and it seemed that each incoming mail brought more than the previous one..

In addition to the mail applications, hundreds of local fans, believing that they could get in on the ground floor, by applying personally for tickets, went to the offices only to find that none would be issued until the advance sale bgean on Thursday.

As fast as the clerks could handle the letters they bundled the letters into bundles of 100 and stamped them according to the time of receipt in order to be sure that the early applicants would be taken care of first. The clerks were instructed to watch closely for 'suspicious letters, or letters that looked as if they might be from speculators or their agents.' By a strict enforcement of the rule of only four tickets to each applicant and the rejection of suspicious applications it is hoped to keep the speculation at a minimum.

At the Polo Grounds here, where the first game will be called a week from to-morrow, preparations are nearly complete to take care of a crowd of nearly 60,000 people. If this number can be squeezed into the stadium now being completed by the erection of a new outfield bleacher section, the crowd will be the largest ever seen at a baseball game. The world's series record attendance at any one game has been less than 35,000. In 1910 the total number of admissions for the five games between Chicago and Philadelphia was 124,222, an average of less than 25,000 to a battle.

At the rate applications are coming it it is roughly estimated that more than a hundred thousand fans will seek admission on the opening day nearly half of whom will be disappointed.

A DOUBLE CURE FOR DOUBLE TROUBLE

Father Morriscy's No. 26 Cures Catarrh by a Combined Treatment.

The sudden weather variations in our climate result in a great many cases of catarrh—a troublesome disease usually considered hard to cure, and one which often leads to serious pulmonary and intestinal troubles.

A neglected cold in the head weakens the nasal membranes, so that at every future exposure the trouble returns. At length these conditions are fastened onto the system, and the sufferer undergoes the annoyance and danger of chronic catarrh.

Some doctors confine themselves to prescribing external applications, and thus do not reach the seat of the trouble. Others give internal treatment exclusively, and thus do not promptly relieve the affected parts.

Father Morriscy, the skilled priest-physician, rightly regarded catarrh as a double trouble, consisting of unpleasant local effects and their fundamental causes, the latter having to do with impaired general vitality.

His famous remedy, No. 26, is a combined cure for catarrh. It consists of tablets to be taken three times a day, and an especially compounded salve.

The salve is antiseptic, and quickly heals the inflamed membranes of the nasal passages. The tablets go to the seat of the trouble and restore the system to its usual tone. Together, they cure.

Instead of neglecting a disease that is unpleasant to yourself and to others, and one which often leads to pneumonia and consumption, it is surely the part of wisdom to take timely steps to do away with the effects and at the same time remove the cause. No. 26 does just that.

50c. for the combined treatment. At your druggist's, or from Father Morriscy Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B. 100

DIAMOND CLOCKS.

"Kit," in October Canada Monthly
(formerly Canada-West.)

Are women growing more extravagant?

They were a pair of stockings long, exceedingly long, and of silk so fine you could have passed them through a finger ring. They were of the most delicate hue imaginable with a dainty monogram woven in the top in plain shaded silk. But the instep was literally sewn with little jewels. In a superb cluster were woven a thimbleful of the tiniest rubies which glowed and flashed a hundred lights, and about them were sewn a shower of brilliants.

"We have just finished two pair like these for that lady whom you saw just now drive off in her motor. It is getting to be a fad among the richest New York women—no, not actresses—they like their diamonds in the soles of their shoes or in their teeth—"

"But women don't wear those things?"

"Of course they do, and the effect of different kinds of jewels embroidered thickly on the instep is dazzling beyond conception. It is the richest and most startling extravagance women's dress has known for centuries."

"I've heard of jewelled garters," said the astonished reporter, "and wondered why the mischief women wanted to wear diamonds where nobody could see them, but jewelled stocking! That beats me."

"Perhaps," said the worldly wise old jeweller, "perhaps it will astonish you more to hear that Milady wears jewelled clasps in her corset but six pairs in the trousseau of one of our New York belles, who married a titled Englishman this year, were sent to us to have jewelled buttons put in them—and I can tell you in a minute just what they were—if you'll wait."

As it is not every day one can make diamond copy, one waited developments.

The jeweller came back with his notes. "In one pair," he said, consulting them, "we put buttons of jade, in another turquoise, then coral, pearl, and in the bridal corset clasps of diamonds. Women these days wear diamond buttons in their shoes if they can get them, and they don't care a snap how much it cost their husbands."

And all the way home the newspaper woman was thinking of a little family she knew, so poor, the children couldn't go to school for lack of decent shoes and stockings. One little family? Thousands.

Death-Dealing Storm

Nogales, Ariz, Oct. 9.—A railroad operator at Tores, Sonora, established communication with this town yesterday long enough to report that fifteen or twenty people had been killed or drowned in the storm which occurred on Tuesday and Thursday on the Mexican west coast. Most of the loss of life occured at Ortiz.

A CHANCE FOR ALL.

Churches Must Fight For Workers, Says Minister.

Toronto, Oct. 9.—The subject of religion in relation to industry and commerce was discussed by four speakers at yesterday afternoon's session of the Ecumenical Methodist Conference. Three of the speakers were politicians, and one was a clergyman.

From the popular point of view the address of the preacher was by far the most interesting to listen to. Rev. S. S. Henshaw of Leeds, England, Primitive Methodist, is a staunch Radical. Perhaps his religious friend, Sir Robert Perks, would call him a Socialist. Anyhow, Mr. Henshaw holds fast to his opinions, and is not afraid to express them in public, least of all at a Methodist Conference.

"Many men in business preach the golden rule," he said, "but not many practice it. Righteousness needs not only to be talked about, but written up in the offices, the market-places, and the stock exchanges.

"It is the business of religion to lessen the outrageous inequality that exists in industry and commerce. The churches should never be tired of preaching for the workers' proper environment, a living wage for all—including those of my class — decent dwellings, a little leisure for culture and spiritual aspirations.

"Old England is going ahead now with social reform. Lloyd-George has led the way. We got the famous Bugdet. We have old-age pensions. We have shifted the veto of the Lords. And in a few years England will be a new land."

These sentiments were vigorously applauded by a large section of the Metropolitan Church audience, and it evidently just as heartily agreed with Mr. Henshaw when he denied that the Sermon on the Mount was impossible to-day. "The whole New Testament can be applied if we will apply it. And it ought to be applied now, in the name of God," he said. It was the church's duty to banish from the sanctuary social distinctions. They have been with us far too long," he added.

Fatal Train Wreck.

Rochester, Mich., Oct. 9.—Two people were killed and eleven injured, one probably fatally early Saturday night, when a Detroit United Railway work car, attached to two cars loaded with cinders, crashed into the front end of the northbound Detroit United Railway Flint Limited, about a mile north of Rochester. The dead:

Daniel Fallon, aged 50, a Flint grocer.

R. E. Lee, 35, Oxford, Mich.

Eight of the injured were taken to Detroit and the others are being cared for here.

The limited was crowded with passengers, and almost without warning the work car plowed through the front vestibule nearly to the rear of the smoking compartments. How more people were not killed is a mystery.

Conflicting reports have been received regarding the speed of the cars and of who disobeyed orders.

Struck By Unknown Man.

Toronto, Oct. 9.—J. Walter Dick, 304 Huron street, is in St. Michael's Hospital in a very serious condition and may die as the result of being struck by an unknown man at the corner of Toronto and King streets Saturday evening at nine o'clock.

Dick was standing close to the Quebec Bank talking with a man in a blue suit, short and well built, when he said the man: "Don't go away like that."

"No, I am not going away; I'm right here," came the reply, and at the same moment the man struck Dick in the mouth, sending him to the pavement with great force, and the other made his escape along King street. Dick lost consciousness immediately, and was taken to the hospital, where Dr. Silverthorne performed an operation.

Earl Grey's Farewell.

Ottawa, Oct. 9.—Earl Grey attended a farewell service at All Saints' Church yesterday, at which the rector, Rural Dean A. W. McKay, officiated, and Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Borden were also in attendance. The sermon was one of farewell to His Excellency, and the service was unusual as a final send-off to His Majesty's representative. The Governor-General chose the hymns, which were Old Hundred and Kipling's Recessional.

A prayer was said at the close and the whole congregation sang the National Anthem, which had been ringing on the church bells as the vice-regal party first entered the church.

Earl and Countess Grey afterwards drove to the residence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier on a farewell visit.

To Reorganize Church.

Rome, Oct. 9.—An important reorganization of the Catholic Church in England has been decided on and a papal bull will shortly be issued dividing England into three ecclesiastical provinces, with arch-episcopal sees at Liverpool, Birmingham and Westminster. Two new dioceses will also be formed, one out of a portion of Liverpool and the other out of the actual diocese of Northampton, with its see in Cambridge. Thus the great see of Westminster will be considerably reduced in dignity, as, instead of having fourteen suffargan sees, as now, it will have only four.

Luck seems to have a mania for dropping in on those who do not expect it.

BAD SCALPS

WHAT PARISIAN SAGE WILL DO.

A bad scalp is no credit to anyone, especially when it can be remedied by consistent use of Parisian Sage, the great scalp and hair tonic.

The cause of dandruff is a germ. Parisian Sage will kill these pests in a few days and thereby remove the cause of baldness.

Falling hair is caused by the dandruff germ. By killing these Parisian Sage at once restores vitality to the hair roots and commences a vigorous growth.

PARISIAN SAGE GROWS HAIR.

If the roots are not gone, Parisian sage will grow hair. It strengthens thin, scraggy hair and makes it healthy and luxuriant. Stops itching scalp after one or two applications, in fact it is guaranteed by J. V. Doyle to do this or your money back. Fifty cents a large bottle.

BIG CHIEF "QUARTER-BACK"

He Is Team General, and Ought Know Signals, Frontwards, Backwards, and in His Dreams.

I think the quarterback is still the chief factor for a football team's success, says Earl Sprackling, Capt. of Brown University Eleven, and All-America Quarterback for 1910. With the new rules last year, it was predicted that the quarterback would lose his powers and become simply a back, along with the two halves and full.

The quarter back is the general of the team. He should know the strong and weak points of his team's play. He should learn his opponents' strength and weakness. Which is another way of saying he must have brains.

A team is guided by signals by the quarterback and he should know them by heart, frontwards, backwards and in his dreams.

He should give them in a low, smooth, even tone, not in a series of short, shrill, jerky numbers. The tones should come from the diaphragm and not from the chest. The latter do not carry.

I have heard quarter backs shout a few signals and seen them start a play with half the team wondering what was going to happen. They could not hear.

The quarterback should take plenty of time. United action is better than speed if you can't have both. It is well to have a code word for players to shout when they do not understand the signal.

Speaking of money, Canada is to have its own gold pieces, made in England.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

MID-OCEAN, Oct. 8.—Pastor Russell is enroute for his fall visit to his London charge, full of vigor. Crossing the ocean loses no time for him. He is accompanied by his stenographer, Mr. Rutherford, and through the newspapers preaches weekly to about twelve millions in the United States, Canada, Great Britain and Australia. His text to-day was, "For the life of the flesh is in the blood; and I have given it to you upon the altar as an atonement for your souls."—Lev. xvii: 11.

The trend of all scholars within the past forty years in particular has been away from the Bible. Even those few who still contend for the Bible concede much to the higher critics and merely strive to retain a hold upon certain shreds of truth. The Bible is suffering of a new dispensation—the Mes- perhaps we would better say, Christendom is suffering from letting loose its hold upon the Bible. The Bible theory, that all sin and death manifest in the world resulted from Adam's disobedience, is now generally denied. Consequently those who still preach a forgiveness of sins and an escape from the penalty of sin are in the minority. And those who admit that the death of Jesus was necessary as a sin-offering, the just for the unjust, are extremely few. Our text is looked upon as foolish by the worldly wise.

Darwin's Evolution theory that man sprang from monkey parentage and has been evoluting higher and higher for six thousand years, finds apparent support in the rapid growth of intelligence during the past fifty years. But those who heed the Bible find a more satisfactory explanation in its teachings, that we are in the dawning of a new dispensation—the eMssianic period so long promised of God as the time in which all the families of the earth will be blessed.

The Bible theory of man's sin and condemnation to death and of a redemption of Adam's race from the power of death by the blood of Jesus is one consistent narrative. Because one man alone was the original sinner and the sentence came by one, therefore it was possible for Divine mercy to arrange that by the sacrifice of the Righteous One, the Just for the unjust, the entire race of Adam might be judicially freed from the death sentence and be permitted to have a resurrection of the dead and the opportunity of restitution and to approve themselves to God for everlasting life. This, the Bible theory, lays the whole stress of salvation upon the work of our Redeemer. Without it Adam's race would have been as dead as the brute creation. By it a way of life has been opened up. This is the meaning of our text and is fully concurred in by the apostle, who says: "Almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and without shedding of blood there is no remission of sins." So unless our Redeemer had purchased Adam and his race by His own precious blood there would be no hope of future life either for the church during this age or for the world of mankind in general during the kingdom age, which will follow this.

Scientists now learn not only that different species will not amalgamate but that different breeds of the same species crossed cannot be maintained, but will revert again to the original in the third or fourth generation. Undoubtedly this was what troubled Mr. Darwin in his rearing of many fancy breeds of pigeons and his inability to maintain the fancy varieties. The same principle is found everywhere at work. Different varieties of peas crossed have produced new varieties, only to return in the third or fourth season to their originals.

Moreover Dr. Thompson claims that he finds, in full harmony with our text, that the life is the blood and that by blood reaction it can readily be determined which animals belong to a certain species and which do not. The custom heretofore has been to classify animals by their bones and nature, which has always been more or less unsatisfactory. The blood is now found to be the sure test, and the speedy one.

Notice, said Paster Russell, a text which always seemed to us hard and cruel, but which we find, on the contrary, to be merciful and gracious. It reads, "I am a jealous God, visiting the iniquities of the parents upon the children unto the third and fourth generations of them that hate me."

The merciful sentiment of this text is now seen: The life is in the blood. The law of heredity carries impurity and disease through the blood in micro-organisms. Were it not for the divine provision that these small organisms of disease or blood impurity will die out in the third or fourth generation, our race would long since have been wiped off the face of the earth. The divine arrangement that infectious germ diseases such as syphilis will die out in the third or fourth generation is a most merciful one.

Thus God shows mercy unto thousands of them that love Him and seek to keep the divine commands. Thus the theories of man crumble, one after another as the decades slip by, and as they have been doing for centuries. Thus the Bible is seen to stand preeminent above all other teachings, demonstrating itself to be the word of God.

To realize the existence of this mighty God is but to dread His omnipotent strength, unless we can see Him possessed of benevolence and goodness corresponding to His power. Of this fact we are also fully assured by the same evidence which proves His existence, power and wisdom. Not only are we forced to the conclusion that there is a God, and that His power and wisdom are immeasurably beyond our own, but we are forced by reason to the conclusion that the grandest thing created is not superior to its Creator; hence we must conclude that the greatest manifestation of benevolence and justice among men is inferior in scope to that of the Creator, even as man's wisdom and power are inferior to His.

And thus we have before our mental vision the character and attributes of the Great Creator. He is wise, just, loving and powerful; and the scope of His attributes is, of necessity, immeasurably wider than that of His grandest creation.

Mr. H. A. Kerr, who is an engineer at the rolling mills, yesterday had his right thumb smashed. The accident fortunately was not of a serious nature.

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT.

Irvine Rose, of Sidney, was arrested this morning on a charge of assaulting Mr. Robert Burris, of this city. It is alleged the assault took place in the city yesterday. BRIDGE ST. LEAGUE.

Last night was the monthly missionary meeting of the League and a large number were present. Mr. Marsh the president, read the lesson, taken from Lev. 19:34, and Deut. 31:12-13. Mr. Marsh laid great emphasis on the work to be done among the foreign element in our city and the surrounding places. Miss Adams, the missionary vice-president, took charge of the meeting. A "Trip through Canada," was the topic; touching some of the different points where missionary work is carried on. Miss Ethel Morden read a paper on the founding of the French Methodist Institute at Montreal. Miss Smiley gave a paper on the French Protestant Home in Montreal, telling of the several needs of the children in that home. Miss Adams told about the great work going on among the foreign classes in Montreal. Miss Libbie Steele then read a selection from Drummond—"The Habitant." The meeting closed with Mizpah benediction.

PRESENTS FOR MR. COBB.

Last evening Mr. Jesse Cobb, who to-day with his family left the city for Victoria, B. C., was the recipient of two prseents. At the Parish Hall of Christ church he was presented with a handsome Bible, the presentation being made by the Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave. Later in the evening Mr. Cobb was the recipient of a valuable gold chain and locket. The latter bore the following inscription. "Presented to Jesse Cobb, by the 'Boys of Old England,' Oct. 9th. 1911. Mr. Cobb was on both occasions most agreeably surprised, but in a few well chosen remarks expressed his heartfelt thanks.

NOTES FROM THE DOCK.

The barge Rob Roy is in, unloading coal here.

The barge Casia passed down the bay yesterday afternoon, loaded with iron for Brockville.

BOYS WERE ACQUITTED.

After a trial which lasted nearly all of yesterday, the two boys, Moran Weese and Wm. Donohue, were acquitted of the two charges preferred against them, namely, of vagrancy and breaking into Thompson & Company's factory. Considerable evidence was taken, but there was none to connect the lads with breaking into the factory. Magistrate Masson acuitted them. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown and Mr. Carnew defended the accused.

RECORD AT ROLLING MILLS.

The rolling mills were never running better than at present. On Friday last a record was made with the nine inch mill, when 60,500 pounds of bar iron was turned out. The previous highest tonnage record per day was 56,000, made on the five inch mill on light horse shoe bars. A new record has also been established on the 18 inch mill. This industry is at present running full time and a large number of workmen are employed.

TABERNACLE LEAGUE.

The senior Epworth League of the Tabernacle church met last evening at the usual hour, and spent one of the most enjoyable evenings spent for some time. After the meeting had been opened by singing, and prayer by the president, Mr. H. Moorman, Miss E. Slater took charge. Miss Garrett was then called upon for the scripture reading, after which Mrs. (Dr.) Batstone delivered a most touching address on missionary work in India, which was of great profit and spiritual help to all. After the address the League quartette sang "Though Your Sins be as Scarlet." The quartette was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Waddell, Miss L. Watson and Mr. H. Moorman. After a vote of thanks was moved by Rev. Mr. Clarke to Mrs. Batstone, seconded by Mr. H. Moorman, all sat down and partook of dainties that the young ladies had so generously provided. After all had enjoyed themselves, Mr. Clarke brought the meeting to a close by prayer.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT NEAR QUEENSBORO

Farmer Found Fatally Injured —Probably Kicked by a Horse

A deplorable, and what will probably prove to be fatal, accident occurred last evening in the township of Elzevir. The victim was Mr. Walter Gray, a highly respected yeoman who resided on the 1st concession, near Queensboro. It appears that during the day Mr. Gray had been engaged in digging potatoes and towards evening hitched up his team to a waggon and drove out into the field to load up the potatoes. Shortly afterwards some members of his family saw the team attached to the waggon dash by the house and out onto the road. On the waggon were a few bags of potatoes. The animals were caught before they had proceeded very far. As Mr. Gray was not to be seen a search was instituted and his prostrate form was found in the field. It was apparent that he had sustained terrible injuries, and two physicians were summoned as speedily as possible. Upon examination it was ascertained that he sustained a severe fracture of the skull, as if one of the animals had kicked him. His condition is such that there are but slight hopes for his recovery.

Mr. Gray, who is about 50 years of age, is highly esteemed in the township. The unfortunate affair is sincerely regretted by his many friends.

THE NEW CABINET WAS SWORN IN

All Present Except Burrell—First Cabinet Council This Afternoon

(Intelligencer Special.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 10.—All the Cabinet Ministers except Martin Burrill, assembled at R. L. Borden's house and drove to Rideau Hall at noon and were sworn in. The first Cabinet Council was held this afternoon.

TRENTON AND TORONTO

The 9th inst. was a gala day in Trenton and every one was rejoicing. The occasion was the opening up for traffic the new Canadian Northern Ontario Railway line between Trenton and Toronto. A number of gentlemen from Belleville went to Trenton in automobiles in order to join their fellow Trentonians in celebrating the event, hoping that ere many moons have come and gone a like rejoicing for a like cause may be repeated in Belleville. The screech of the whistle announced the arrival of the train containing the Vice-President D. R. Hanna, Superintendent A. J. Hill, A Rex, Croasdell, his assistant, W. Whiteside, Chief Engineer Grant, General Freight Agent Phillips and many others. A representative of each of the Toronto newspapers was also present.

After a good deal of shaking hands, and congratulations, a procession was formed, consisting of some fifteen of twenty automobiles, decorated with Union Jacks, and other ensigns of Canadian loyalty and enterprise, filled with happy occupants who looked upon the occasion as inaugurating a new era of prosperity for that town.

After motoring through the different streets of the town, the party proceeded up the west bank of the Trent River, visiting and inspecting the extensive works now being carried on in connection with the construction of the Trent Valley Canal, and an electrical power plant, capable of developing over 20,000 horse power, after which, the paper mills of Mr. Miller received no little attention. Their size and capacity astonished those of the visitors who had never seen them before. Mr. Pettit, the manager, was exceedingly attentive and gave interesting information as to the mode of producing cardboard and other paper products from pulp wood, which was much appreciated by the visitors. Mr Miller deserves credit for the enterprise which he has displayed in developing such extensive works. It is such men as he who make and create towns and cities, and provide markets in which producers find consumers.

On returning to Trenton Mr. Hanna and staff took train for Toronto, pleased and gratified at the reception they received from the Mayor, Corporation, people of the town and visitors.

Let us join with our neighbors on the Trent River, in wishing them increased growth and prosperity. The time has now arrived with the magnificent water power at their doors, and the increased facilities for shipment, to utilize them to their fullest extent, and not allow them to remain dormant for another half century.

Joe Gans' First Fight.

Joe Gans, the former lightweight champion of the world, used to hang around the baseball grounds in Baltimore. A white boy named Joe Elliott kept after Gans for a fight, but the colored boxer steadfastly refused to meet him, declaring that he would tackle any negro of his size, but barred the white fellows. After a while Gans told one of the ball players how Elliott had been trailing him, with the result that arrangements for a fight in private in the ball park was made, and Gans administered such a beating that Elliott was never heard of again. This good showing convinced Gans that he was cut out for a ring career and he soon became noted.

C. N. O. R. TRAIN MET WITH AN ACCIDENT

Engine Turned on Its Side Near Grafton—Fortunately no One was Injured

GRAFTON, Oct. 9.—The opening of the new Canadian Northern line from Toronto to Trenton to-day was marred by an accident near here, in which, however, no person was hurt. Owing to a "split switch," which possibly through carelessness was left half open, train No. 9, which left Trenton at 6 o'clock this evening, left the rails. The engine turned over on its side on the south side of the track. The tender was left standing on the track, and the baggage car went over on the north side of the track.

About seventy passengers in all were on the train, including a party of Canadian Northern officials and a number of pressmen. The escape of C. W. Wilson, the fireman, was possibly the most marvellous of any. He was thrown right out of his seat in the cab against the fence, and escaped with hardly a bruise. Engineer Moore managed to hold his seat throughout. The first intimation the passengers had of anything untoward was a severe jolt. Many of them were thrown from their seats, including Mr. D. R. Hanna, third vice-president of the C. N. R., but none of them were hurt.

The train was made up of three parlor cars, a diner, and two first-class coaches. It was travelling at about twenty miles an hour when the accident happened at a point about half a mile east of Grafton station. Conductor Fred Russell said the occurrence was due to the switch having sprung, which condition might have resulted from someone having tampered with it. It happened at 7.10 o'clock.

The free train, which left Trenton at 7 this morning, returned as far as Grafton this evening, and conveyed the passengers back to Toronto, where they did not arrive until long after midnight, whereas they were due at 9.30 o'clock.

TO AROUSE COUNTRY AGAINST NE TEMERE

TORONTO, Oct. 9—A vigorous campaign to overthrow the Ne Temere decree and to make the marriage tie a civil action has been started. Mass meetings are being planned for, literature is being circulated, setting forth the situation in plain, unmistakable language, amongst all ministers of the Dominion and to the newspaper editors.

This was the unanimous action of the Evangelic Alliance, which held a special meeting to consider the matter from an unbiased standpoint.

It is expected that a petition, consisting of a million of names will shortly be forwarded to Premier Borden at Ottawa requesting him to bring the matter before the House of Commons and use his influence, setting aside the Ne Temere decree for all time.

The petition will also be sent to the Premiers of each province with a request that the matter be fought out in the provincial legislatures. As Prince Edward Island and British Columbia control their own marriage laws, a petition will be sent to them asking that they also enter upon a similar line of action.

BASEBALL PITCHERS IN DEMAND

Good baseball pitchers are still in demand, and this season's crop does not appear to be coming on very fast. Most of the talent in use was discovered and trained some time ago. Pitchers are wilting all along the line, and a new supply is not within sight. Some say that the lively ball is partly accountable for this, for heavy batting discourages the man in the box. Of course, there is another side to the question. Baseball is not wholly played for the benefit of the players. It is played to make money for shareholders, and the money comes from those who pay to see the sport. The ball that draws and satisfies spectators is a pretty good kind from the business point of view; and, judging from the manner in which grand stands are filled, the ball that is being played is quite satisfactory—especially when your team wins.

INTERNATIONAL POLO CUP

Great Britain is going to make another try to regain the polo cup and will challenge America for a match in 1912. The Duke of Westminster has offered to furnish the funds and ponies and the Hurlingham committee has decided to accept the offer. The action of the Duke of Westminster relieves the committee of the necessity of appealing for subscriptions for the fund that would be required.

To carry the team and its mounts across would necessitate an outlay of between $4,000 and $5,000.

One Mile Amateur Championship

The mile championship of the Amateur Swimming Association, open to the world, was decided at the Berwick's Club's annual gala. There were four entrants. Taylor, of Hyde Seal, won by ten yards in 23min. 55 1-2 sec., creating a new record. Battersby being second, and Hatfield third. Battership beat his own record, doing the distance in 23min. 45 2-5 sec.

ITALIAN MARINES FOUGHT TURKS AND WERE DRIVEN BACK

Italian Transports Have Sailed With Troops to Join Tripoli Expedition

(Intelligencer Special.)

CHIASSO, Switzerland, Oct. 10.—A force of Italian marines who started inland from Tripoli are reported to have encountered an overwhelming body of Turks and Arabs. The Italians were driven back to the shelter of the walls of the town, where the attackers were dispersed by the fleet's guns.

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Oct. 10.—A Naples despatch states that twenty transports loaded with troops have sailed for Syracuse to join the second division of the Tripoli expedition.

(Intelligencer Special.)

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia, Oct. 10.—An investigation into the assassination of Premier Stolypin has brought out the fact that the Premier had asked the Secret Police Department to account for half a million dollars which he believed had been grafted. The evidence points to a plot of the secret service men.

MAY BE LURING THE ITALIANS ON

PARIS, Oct. 8.—Fethi Bey, who left Paris to take command of the Turkish forces at Tripoli, informed the Temps' correspondent on board the Tafna while going to Tripoli, Oct. 2, that he could not attempt to defend the city. Feth Bey is uoted as saying:—"Our plan is simple. Without coming to any real fighting, or being caught napping, we will delay the Italian landing as much as possible and then retreat to Djado, where there is as much water as the army will require. The troops laong the Tunisian frontier, at Ghadames and Fezzan will also concentrate in the same district. Within a few weeks we will have a camp of 10,000 regulars, and twice as many, if not three times as many, Arabs, well armed and disciplined. Then serious trouble will commence."

ROME, Oct. 8.—The Tribuna's Malta correspondent telegraphs that the Turks who fled from Tripoli have regathered to the number of 10,000, and are not far from the city. It is said they have armed 10,000 Arabs. Speculation is rife as to whether they will act on the defensive or attack Tripoli before the arrival of the Italian army of invasion.

It was reported this morning that a regiment of Turkish cavalry with six mountain guns and three field batteries left Monastir for the south. It is believed that they have gone to the Prevesa Coast. Albania and Epirus are being hurriedly fortified. The preparations perturb the Italians, who fear the Turks are using the shelling of Prevesa and San Giovanni as a pretext to provoke a conflagration that will compel Austrian interference.

ORIGIN OF LIFE

Swedish Professor Opines That Particles of Spontaneous Generation May Be Flown From Globe To Globe.

The old idea that life may have been spread from world to world by dust particles traversing space is being again discussed. Professor Svante Arrhenius, the Swedish physician, finds that spontaneous generation is probably no longer possible on the earth, but conceives that it may take place on some globe having more favourable physical and chemical conditions. From that globe life may be scattered to other habitable bodies on particles driven by the pressure of light. In recent experiments with bacteria, half of the dried organisms perished within three days at ordinary temperature, but others showed no impairment of vitality after four months at the temperature of liquid air, and it was concluded that the cold of space may so diminish vital activity that life may be sustained for millions of years. An objection to this theory, by M. Paul Becquerel, is that the ultra-violet rays from incandescent stars are constantly sterilising space. Even extreme dryness and cold cannot greatly lengthen resistance to these rays, and spores exposed in a vacuum to ultra-violet rays under conditions of extreme cold were destroyed within a few hours.

Patience.

Dr. Russell H. Conwell is a great believer in patience, and he recently told a story indicating what he believed to be an example of making a virtue of patience. A young man was standing at the gate, waiting for his sweetheart, and when at last she appeared he remarked kindly:

'What a time you have kept me waiting.'

'Oh, dear me, how fussy you are,' he observed. 'Why, I didn't promise to meet you until a quarter of eight, and it's only two minutes after eight now.'

'Ah, Maggie, dear,' replied the young man, 'out you have made a slight mistake in the day. You were have been here at a quarter of eight last evening. I have been waiting here ever since."

CANADA'S DECISION IS FAR-REACHING

HADDINGTON, Scotland, Oct. 8—A. J. Balfour fired the first gun in Conservative opposition to what may be termed the second act of "the revolution" before an immense meeting of the Unionist Association yesterday afternoon. Strong factional opposition to his leadership, which was kindled by his advice to the Lords to accept the Veto Bill, has accused him particularly of weakness on the tariff reform issue, and his announcement on this point was important. He came out strongly for Imperial preference.

"I hope," said Mr. Balfour, "that our people will find the spirit in which we must approach this question in the broad decision reached by the Canadian people. The Canadian decision extended far beyon the borders of Canada, and must have beneficial results for the Empire at large. The decision of Canada shows how impossible it is to maintain the present system of things.

"Our colonies are not believers in the system spoken of as free trade. Unless this country meets the situation we will have Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and other great communities making their separate commercial tariffs with other countries. This country will awake some fine morning to find that these great communities, loyal as they are, have instituted a system of tariffs in which we will find ourselves at a disadvantage. Such a state of affairs must have a fatal effect upon the unity of the Brtish Empire."

Mr. Balfour declared that a system of commercial defence was as necessary as any other defence, but he did not propose any plan. He specified Home Rule and disestablishment as constituting "the second act of the Liberal's attempted revolution." The Conservatives must not, he said, leave the constitution in the mud where the Liberals had put it, but must rebuild and strengthen the Second Chamber, with a representative element.

CURRENT COMMENT

Reciprocity was the ..e Temere decree that invalidated the Laurier party's marriage to success.—Toronto Telegram.

Judge Deroche's finding in the famous tax lot investigation has been reviewed by the high court of public opinion with a result which His Honor may find to be not very pleasing.

Street cars, automobiles and electric wires killed more people in Toronto this week than have been slain so far in the Italian-Turkish war.—Telegram.

The Grit papers have only one comfort left, namely, that of giving out rumors of alleged dissensions in the Conservative ranks. If that sort of thing pleases them it don't hurt us.

Here is a Globe-ism for you. "If," says The Globe, "Mr. Borden's Ministers are to be granted the courtesy of re-election by acclamation it should be on the understanding that the return of Messrs. Fielding and Graham will also be by acclamation." How is that for cheek and impudence?

Food, according to official reports of the British Board of Trade, compiled in 1909 after an inquiry into the food budgets of over three thousand families, costs more on this continent than in Great Britain. For such supplies as flour, bread, milk, potatoes, butter, cheese, beef, pork, bacon and sugar the English housewife would have had to pay in February, 1909, $4.75 at American prices for the same quantities procurable in the English market for $3.44. This is a disparity which might well be the subject of governmental inquiry this side of the herring pond.

Congratulations to Col. Sam Hughes M. P., on his selection by Premier Borden as Minister of Militia. Col Hughes in his early manhood was a teacher in one of the Public Schools in Belleville, and is widely known and popular here. The new Minister has a thorough knowledge of the requirements of the military forces of Canada. He was for many years an active volunteer, a part of the time in connection with the 49th Hastings Rifles, an expert rifleman, and did excellent service for the Empire in South Africa during the Boer war. Another member of the Cabinet to whom The Intelligencer extends congratulations is Mr. T. W. Crothers, M. P., the new Minister of Labor, who is a "Bay of Quinte Boy." Mr. Crothers was born in Prince Edward, began the study of law in Belleville, and has won his appointment on his merits. The Bay of Quinte district has produced a lot of excellent Cabinet material.

Russians Threatened Conflict.

Teheran, Oct. 10.—The National Council decided yesterday to confiscate the property of Shua-E-Sultaneh, brother of the ex-Shah of Persia, and one of his strong supporters in his recent attempt to regain the throne. Gendarmes were sent to take possession, but they were opposed by a body of cossacks, headed by two Russian consulate officers, who threatened to open fire. Thereupon the gendarmes withdrew.

The matter was referred to the Russian Minister, and if the Minister does not arrive at a decision by ten o'clock this morning, the Persian treasurer-general will take definite action.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 9.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Oct. 7 were 2250 cattle, 2375 sheep and lambs, 4150 hogs and 900 calves. The offerings on the market this morning amounted to 1400 cattle, 2400 sheep and lambs, 1950 hogs and 650 calves.

Owing to the increased supplies of cattle, and especially so from the Canadian Northwest, a weaker feeling developed in week show a decline of 25c per 100 pounds, the market, and prices since this any but even at this reduction butchers considered that they were too high, when the quality of the stock offered was taken into consideration. Some of them found it difficult to fill their wants with the right class of cattle, and stated that they would rather pay ¼c per pound more and get the quality, as they dressed out far better.

The gathering of buyers was large, and the demand was good, consequently a fairly active trade was done. A few full loads of steers and heifers, mixed sold at $5.90 per 100 pounds, and picked lots of choice steers brought 6¼c; good, 5¾c to 6c; fairly good, 5½c to 5¾c; fair, 5c to 5¼c, and common, 4¼c to 4½c per pound.

The weak feeling which has characterized the market for hogs for the past month still continues to be the main feature of this branch of the trade, on account of the liberal supplies coming forward, and the lower prices ruling thruout the country, and in sympathy with the same prices here to-day were 10c to 25c per 100 pounds, lower than they were last Wednesday.

The demand from packers was good at the above reduction, and sales of selected lots were made at $6.80 to $6.75 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. Heavy hogs and sows sold for $1 per 100 pounds less than the above prices.

Owing to the increased receipts of sheep and lambs, the tone of the market this morning was weaker, and prices declined 10c to 15c per 100 pounds. The demand was fairly good, and sales of choice lambs were made at $5.50 to $5.60, and sheep at $3.65 to $3.75 per 100 pounds. The supply of calves was larger, for which the demand was good, and prices were maintained at $5 to $15 each, as to size, quality, etc.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 9.—Cattle—Receipts, 475 head; market active and firm; price steers, $7.25 to $7.50; butcher grades, $4 to $6.75; cows, $3 to $5.

Calves—Receipts, 1500 head; market active and steady; cull to choice, $5 to $10.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 20,000 head; market opened firm, closed weak; choice lambs, $6.80 to $6.90; cull to fair, $5 to $6.50; yearlings, $4.50 to $5; sheep, $2 to $4.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 16,180; market active, 15c to 20c higher; yorkers, $7 to $7.05; stags, $5 to $5.25; pigs, $6.50 to $6.60; mixed, $7.05 to $7.10; heavy, $7.20; roughs, $5.50 to $5.90.

I Hereby Certify that I have drawn by my own hand ten samples of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co's EXTRA STANDARD GRANULATED SUGAR, indiscriminately taken from four lots of about 150 barrels each and six lots of about 450 bags each. Strike on G.T.P.

A board of conciliation was formed a couple of months ago, consisting of Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., Toronto, for the company; T. J. Murray, Winnipeg, for the men, and Dr. Sparling, Winnipeg, chairman.

Mr. Nesbitt has never attended and has twice resigned.

The Haunted Chamber

"She has indeed," agrees Sir Adrian, with a smothered groan.

"Well"—triumphantly—"and yet, here we find her granting him a private audience, when she believed we were all safely out of the way; and in the north gallery too, which, as a rule is deserted."

"She didn't know we were thinking of driving to the hills," said Sir Adrian, making a feeble effort to find a flaw in his companion's statement.

"Oh, yes, she did!" declares the widow lightly. "I told her myself, about two hours ago, that I intended asking you to make a party to go there, as I dote on lovely scenery; and I dare say"—coquettishly—"she knew—I mean thought—you would not refuse so small a request of mine. But for poor Lady FitzAlmont's headache we should be there now."

"It is true," admits Sir Adrian, feeling that the last straw had descended.

"And now that I think of it," the widow goes on, even more vivaciously, "the reason she assigned for not coming with us must have been a feigned one. Ah, slyboots that she is!" laughs Mrs. Talbot, merrily. "Of course she wanted the course clear to have an explanation with Arthur. Well, after all, that was only natural. But she might have trusted me, whom she knows to be her true friend."

Ill-tempered—capricious—sly! And all these faults are attributed to Florence by "her true friend!" A quotation assigned to Marechal Villars when taking leave of Louis XIV. occurs to him—"Defend me from my friends." The words return to him persistently, but when he looks down on Dora Talbot, and stares straight into her liquid blue eyes, so apparently guileless and pure, and tells himself that he wrongs her. Yes, it is a pity Florence had not put greater faith in this kind little woman, a pity for all of them, as then many heart-breaks might have been prevented.

CHAPTER IV.

It is the evening of the theatricals; and in one of the larger drawing-rooms at the castle, where the stage has been erected, and also in another room behind connected with it by folding-doors, everybody of note in the country is already assembled. Fans are fluttering—so are many hearts behind the scenes—and a low buzz of conversation is being carried on among the company.

Then the curtain rises; the fans stop rustling, the conversation ceases and all faces turn curiously to the small but perfect stage that the London workmen have erected.

Every one is anxious to see what his or her neighbor is going to do when brought before a critical audience. Nobody, of course, hopes only for a breakdown, but secretly there are a few who would be glad to see such and such a one's pride lowered.

No mischance, however, occurs. The insipid Tony speaks his lines perfectly, if he fails to grasp the idea that a little acting thrown in would be an improvement; a very charming Cousin Con is made out of Miss Villiers; a rather stilted, but strictly correct old lady out of Lady Gertrude Vining. But Florence Delmaine, as Kate Hardcastle, leaves nothing to be desired, and many are the complimentary speeches uttered from time to time by the audience. Arthur Dynecourt, too, had not over-praised his own powers. It is palpable to every one that he has often trod the boards, and the pathos he throws into his performance astonishes the audience. Is it only acting in the final scene when he makes love to Miss Hardcastle, or is there some real sentiment in it?

This question arises in many breasts. They note how his color changes when he takes her hand, how his voice trembles; they notice, too, how she grows cold, in spite of her desire to carry out her part to the end, as he grows warmer, and how instinctively she shrinks from his touch. Then it is all over, and the curtain falls admidst loud applause. Florence comes forward to the curtain in response to repeated calls, gracefully, half-reluctantly, with a soft, warm blush upon her cheeks and a light in her eyes that renders her remarkable loveliness only more apparent. Sir Adrian, watching her with a heart faint and cold with grief and disappointment, asknowledges sadly to himself that never has he seen her look so beautiful. She advances and bows to the audience, and only loses her self-possession a very little when a bouueqt directed at her feet by an enthusiastic young man alights upon her shoulder instead.

Arthur Dynecourt, who has accompanied her to the footlights, and who joins in her triumph, picks up the bouquet, directed at her feet by an

As he does so the audience again becomes aware that she receives it from him in a spirit that suggests detestation of the one that hands it, and that her smile withers as she does so, and her great eyes lose their happy light of a moment before.

Sir Adrian sees all this, too, but persuades himself that she is now acting another part—the part shown him by Mrs. Talbot. His eyes are blinded by jealousy; he cannot see the purity and truth reflected in hers; he misconstrues the pained expression that of late has saddened her face.

For the last few days, ever since her momentous interview with Arthur Dynecourt in the gallery, she has been timid and reserved with Sir Adrian, and has endeavored to avoid his society. She is oppressed with the thought that he has read her secret love for him, and seeks, by an assumed coldness of demeanor and a studied avoidance of him, to induce him to believe himself mistaken.

But Sir Adrian is only rendered more miserable by this avoidance, in the thought that probably Mrs. Talbot has told Florence of his discovery of her attachment to Arthur, and that she dreads his taxing her with duplicity, and so makes strenuous efforts to keep herself apart from him. They have already drifted so far apart that to-night, when the play has come to an end, and Florenene has retired from the dressing-room, Sir Adrian does not dream of approaching and offering the congratulations upon her success that he would have showered upon her in a happier hour.

Florence, feeling lonely and depressed, having listlessly submitted to her maid's guidance and changed her stage gown for a pale blue ball-dress of satin and pearls—as dancing is to succeed the earlier amusement of the evening—goes silently downstairs, but, instead of pursuing her way to the ball-room, where dancing has already commenced, she turns aside, and, entering a small, dimly-lighted antechamber, sinks wearily upon a satin-covered lounge.

From a distance the sweet strains of a German waltz come softly to her ears. There is deep sadness and melancholy in the music that attunes itself to her own sorrowful reflections. Presently the tears steal down her cheeks. She feels lonely and neglected, and, burying her head in the cushions of the lounge, she sobs aloud.

She does not hear the hasty approach of footstps until they stop close beside her, and voice that makes her pulses throb madly says, in deep agitation:

"Florence—Miss Delmaine—what has happened? What has occurred to distress you?"

Sir Adrian is bending over her, evidently in deep distress himself. As she starts, he places his arm round her and raises her to a sitting posture; this he does so gently, that, as she remembers all that she has heard, and his cousin's assurance that he has almost pledged himself to another, her tears flow afresh. By a supreme effort, however, she controls herself, and says in a faint voice:

"I am very foolish; it was the heat, I suppose, or the nervousness of acting before so many strangers, that has upset me. It is over now. I beg you will not remember it, Sir Adrian, or speak of it to any one."

(To be continued.)

FAVOR HIGHER CRITICS.

Delegates to Ecumenical Conference Not Afraid of Scholars.

Toronto, Oct. 10.—Biblical criticism was under hot fire yesterday morning in the Ecumenical Methodist Conference, but emerged from the conflict triumphantly vindicated. Seventeen speakers took part in the liveliest discussion this conference has yet witnessed, some vigorously attacking the critics, while others defended them, and declared that the age demands truth, and the people are bound to have it. The general feeling of the conference appeared to be that there was no need to fear for the results of scientific investigation of the Scriptures.

It was significant that the British delegates who spoke were almost to a man upholders of the scholars known as higher critics, pointing out that they were eminently evangelical men.

Probably the best summary of the discussion could be given in these words of the last speaker, Rev. Dr. J. G. Tasker of the Wesleyan Church: "I hope we shall never again hear a higher critic represented as a man who exalts himself upon a pedestal of superior knowledge, and looks down with scorn upon his fellows. We have to live in the intellectual atmosphere of our own time. This age is determined to face the facts in all realms. It is determined to get at origins. Then if you are going to get at origins you must be a higher critic, because all that higher criticism means is: that you follow the stream that comes down to you a little higher up towards its source."

The discussion arose chiefly out of the essay by Prof. A. S. Peake, D.D., of the Primitive Methodist Church, which summed up the permanent results of Biblical criticism.

Colored Porter Indicted.

Chatham, Oct. 10.—At the fall assizes which opened here yesterday before Hon. Mr. Justice Falconbridge, the grand jury brought in a true bill for murder against Charles Hurst, the colored porter, who is charged with slaying of Thomas Brown (white) on August 1 last. Hurst's trial will proceed to-day. O. L. Lewis, K.C., will act for the defence, and William Meredith, K.C., of London, will be crown counsel. The killing of Brown came as a tragic climax to the last emancipation celebration held in Chatham. At the inquest witnesses testified that Hurst beat the white man over the head with his fists till he fell to the ground. Brown afterwards died from fractures of the skull.

The grand jury will be next asked to consider the depositions in the case of Rex v. Thomas Griffith, for the alleged murder of his brother-in-law, Orlando Arnold. Arnold died from injuries claimed to have been inflicted in an assault upon him by Griffiths on July 13 last. If a true bill is brought in this case. Griffith will get his trial at the spring assizes.

Caused by Children.

New York, Oct. 10.—Two thousand violations of the fire regulations were committed in the ten-storey building in Washington place, where 145 employes of the Triangle Waist Co. lost their lives by fire last fall, it has been disclosed by prolonged investigation, it is charged by chief of the fire department. He made the charges before the budget committee of the board of estimates in a plea for increased appropriations.

Fire Commissioner Johnson desires to establish a bureau of fire prevention. He said that the majority of fires were due to the ignorance of the foreign population of the city. "Matches," he said, "cause 2,650 fires a year. Parents allow their children to play with fire, and they are not educated to the danger. And we have a larger number of incendiary fires than the public has any idea of." He asked for an appropriation of $3,800,000.

It sometimes happens that a girl gives a young man a present—and the only thing he can do is to make lemonade out of it.

This is a sad world for the woman who is married to a professional funny man.

The Tax Lot Investigation- -Judge's Report and Finding

This subject would not have again claimed any notice at the hands of The Intelligencer were it not for what many tax payers, ourselves among the number, consider the somewhat extraordinary conclusions at which Judge Deroche arrived, and the attempt made to cover up and mystify the whole transaction in a veiled attempt dishonestly to attribute personal and political motives to those who could not see eye to eye upon a question of dealing with public affairs, by public officials, with those who are prepared to justify any and every act of political friends irrespective of right or wrong.

The Judge's resume of the case has been published in extenso in The Intelligencer, occupying some eight columns.

"Seventy persons," says the Judge, were called, and only, states the Judge, "thirty-five had any real personal knowledge of the matter in question." This evidence covers no less than 451 pages of foolscap typewriting, and though a large proportion of it is irrelevant, given by persons who knew nothing of the subject, there are statements and admissions made by those most interested which are instructive, so far as letting a little lime-light into the manner in which the city property was disposed of by those whose duty it was, as officials and trustees of the city, to guard its interests, financially and otherwise.

The Judge's conclusions are:—

1st—There was no conspiracy between the members of the Committee;
2nd—The sales to relatives brought as fair a price as sales to strangers;
3rd—That no stranger had made an offer for any of these lots before they were sold to relatives;
4th—That the same procedure was followed in selling to relatives as in selling to strangers;
5th—That no part of the purchase money in any case belonged to any member of the committee;
6th—That no member of the committee profited personally by the sales;
7th—A little advice.

Let us examine the evidence of Messrs Marsh, Price and others who were connected with and interested in the sale of the lots, to which the Judge refers, and see if it justifies the conclusions at which the Judge arrived.

The Intelligencer's position was, and is, simple and clear. It claimed, and still claims, that trustees of any class have no right to engage in transactions in which the trusts are interested, when such transactions inure to the benefit of the trustees, directly or indirectly. That is what The Intelligencer condemned and asked to be investigated; that this point should be ignored and smothered in 451 typewritten pages of evidence, ninety per cent. of which was foreign to the matter at issue, is a subject for explanation.

In the first place, The Intelligencer never accused the members of the committee of conspiracy, though the whole transaction bore upon its face a suspicion that the then Mayor and Treasurer were acting in concert in disposing of city lots to relatives, but as they positively deny under oath the correctness of this suspicion, their denial must be accepted.

As to the other points, we have but to appeal to the evidence in justification of the position which The Intelligencer took, that the then Mayor and present Treasurer availed themselves of their positions, which they then held as Mayor and Treasurer, to sell city property to their relatives for speculative purposes, believing that the influx of Grand Trunk employees, which they knew was to take place at an early date, would create a demand for the lots which they secured for their relatives, profiting thereby both directly and indirectly, which we propose to prove out of their own mouths, leaving the Judge to explain how he comes to the conclusion "that no member of the committee profited by the sales" of the lots.

First, let us turn to page 266 of the recorded evidence of Mr. Mayor Marsh himself, and we there find that he says: "I suggested to her (Mrs. Smith, his mother-in-law) to buy some of the lots." Why? He told the Judge (see page 279) "that when he advised Mrs. Smith to buy he knew that Skinner had paid $200 for a lot on the same row as Mrs. Smith's," and when asked (see page 286) "how was it Mrs. Smith sold so quickly," after purchasing, replied: "Suppose a piece of pure luck, that people wanted the property." On page 290 he states he "sold the lots himself for $300," a "little better than double what he and Price (the Treasurer) had sold them for a few weeks before," to Mrs. Smith. On page 296 it will be found that Marsh was asked this question: "Had you any secret information, as a member of that Property Committee, being placed in that position of trust, that you could give the information to Mrs. Smith" that she should buy the lots? His answer was: "The only thing I knew was the Grand Trunk people were coming here from York, or the possibility was great, and several people were buying lots, and I knew it was a good buy, and I left it in her hands," and the purchases were made by Mr. Marsh for her accordingly.

Mrs. Smith, who lives at Point Fortune, in the County of Russell, on the borders of the Province of Quebec, says in her evidence (page 417) that Mr. Marsh "thought that as the railway people were going to come, it was a good speculation," and on page 418 she repeats his advise that "the purchase of these lots was a good speculation," and that Mr. Marsh discussed with her the "coming to the city of the railway men," showing clearly the reasons why he advised her to purchase the lots. He states, also, in his evidence that he went to the Treasurer and made arrangements for the purchase of these lots, and the price to be paid for them, and that when Mrs. Smith left Belleville for her home in Point Fortune she told her daughter, Mrs. Marsh, that she was willing to sell if she could double her money, which she did in a very short time after purchasing.

There is much more evidence of a similar character.

Under all the circumstances, and with the knowledge which the then Mayor had of the prospects of an influx of a large number of Grand Trunk artisans, workmen and officials, who would require dwellings or lots upon which to build them, was it not his duty, as a member of that Property Committee and Mayor, to utilize that information in the interests of the city, and not in that of a relative? That is what we complained of, and that is what has been established by himself in the evidence given before the Judge. It is no answer to say that the lots were sold at as good prices as those sold to other parties prior to the action of the Grand Trunk Railway in bringing men to the city. It is well known that, prior to that time, people would not take the lots as a gift and pay the taxes upon them. In fairness to Mr. Marsh we hesitate not to admit that there is nothing in his, or his mother-in-law's, evidence to show that he personally profited by the purchase and sale of the lots, further than assisting his mother-in-law in the purchase of and speculating in city lots, the sale of which he, with others of a Property Committee of the City Council of this municipality had control of. What is shown is that he advised his mother-in-law to purchase lots from the city for speculative purposes, with a knowledge that such lots would very largely increase in value, as they did, owing to an addition to the population by the influx of railway men, and that he, in conjunction with the Treasurer, sold the lots to his relative at prices which doubled in amount a few weeks after purchase, which additional value should have inured to the city instead of to the party in whose interests he acted. Such is our view of the duty of a city official, notwithstanding the finding of an erudite and learned Judge.

* * * *

Now let us devote a little time and attention to the evidence of the Treasurer himself, and others having an interest in and some knowledge of his dealings in city lots, and see how far the Judge is justified in declaring "that no part of the purchase money in any case belonged to any member of the committee," and that "no member of the committee PROFITED PERSONALLY BY THE SALES."

Turn to the 158th page of the report, and it will be found that Mr. R. S. Bell made, under oath, the following statements: "That, in conversation with the Treasurer, Mr. D. Price, he (Bell) had said to him 'If you will give me over your own signature a statement of the reasons which induced you to get your son-in-law, who resides in Saskatchewan, and Mr. Marsh's reasons for inducing his mother-in-law, who resides in the eastern part of this province, to make speculative investments in tax lots in Belleville, I will at once telegraph it to The Globe.' of which Mr. Bell was, he stated, the Belleville correspondent. Mr. Price considered for a moment, and replied, 'No.' I said what was it that induced you to do so? 'Well,' he said, 'I hope (I think that was the word or an equivalent word) to put some money into the pocket of my daughter and incidentally or indirectly,' one of these words, 'into MY OWN'; that was the whole substance of the conversation."

On page 327 will be found Mr. Price's evidence, in which he is reported to have sworn that he suggested to Mrs. Price, his wife, that "he thought she could make a little investment by putting some money into a few vacant lots," and that she replied, "Very well, and would do so as I wished."

On page 328 Mr. Price is reported to have said: "The reason he had advised to invest in these tax lots was that he thought she could make a LITTLE PROFIT out of them."

Page 330 shows, from his own statement, that the money which paid for the lots was taken from Mr. Price's general account, which he subsequently stated was the money of his wife, which he had deposited to his own credit.

On the same page 330, Mr. Price says "HE MADE THE OFFER" (bear in mind it would be to himself, as one of the Property Committee empowered to sell the lots) "for the purchase of lots 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 on the west side of Alice Street."

On page 331 he states "he told Mrs. Price she had better buy five more, and she said "she was quite willing." It also transpired that the Davidson lots were paid for, not by Davidson, but "out of Mr. Price's general account," at least so swore Mr. Price.

On page 337 will be found this question put to Mr. Price: "Did you have any interest whatever personally in any of the proceedings?" "No," was his emphatic answer. The money he received from his wife was deposited, he told the Judge, in the bank with his own money, no separate account being kept. He added that he acted under power of attorney for Davidson, his son-in-law, who, the evidence shows, did not put a cent into the transaction.

On page 395 the statement is recorded that Mr. Price asked his wife if she would like to buy some lots, and she consented.

Mr. Price says he bought the lots as an investment for his daughter, with money that was his wife's, and that they were bought to sell again, and were sold at a profit.

He had no correspondence with Davidson, the son-in-law, before the purchase of the lots, but transacted all the business, had the deeds for the lots made out in favor of Davidson, though he stated they were purchased as an investment for Mrs. Davidson, his daughter. It also transpired that Davidson was never asked to advance any money to pay for the lots, nor does it appear that he had anything to do with any of the transactions.

Mrs. Davidson was also on the stand and, among other things, stated that she never advised the buying of lots for her, and on page 404 will be found a statement made by her that she had received none of the profits arising from the sale of lots.

There is much more evidence in detail, but we have quoted the crucial points in the dealings with city property by Messrs. Marsh and Price, the Mayor and Treasurer of the city, leaving the facts, AS STATED BY THEMSELVES, to the judgment of the taxpayers of the city.

What are the facts, in brief? Mr. Marsh saw (as he himself states) in the near future, through the influx of an addition to our population, a probable increase in the value of lots which the owners had forfeited to the city through non-payment of taxes, and advised his mother-in-law to purchase at prices which he and the Treasurer, a fellow committeeman, who were empowered to sell them, at prices which they might think proper to put upon them, and sell again at a profit, which she did.

Mr. Price, the Treasurer of the city, did precisely the same thing and for the same reason, using his wife's and his son-in-law's names to accomplish the same purpose, and for the additional purpose, as he stated to Mr. Bell, one of the witnesses, to "PUT SOME MONEY into the pocket of his daughter" and incidentally or indirectly INTO HIS OWN," that is by advising his wife to buy city tax lots, so as to make money by selling at a profit.

In the face of these facts we have the Judge solemnly declaring that no part of the purchase money in any case belonged to any member of the committee, and that no member of the committee profited personally by sales.

If we are to accept the dictum of Judge Deroche, then the husband has no direct interest in the money which the wife makes out of speculations into which he advises her to plunge; nor has the father and mother an interest in the welfare of their children, though they advance them money in order that their position in life may be improved and that they may live more comfortably. The proposition is unnatural and monstrous. Both Mr. and Mrs. Price declared that they wanted to provide for their daughter, and Mr. Price to put a little money into his own pocket, both actions highly commendable, provided it is done in a proper and legitimate manner. Most husbands and wives think that, in aiding one or the other, they are interested in both, and so with their children, unless they are unnatural parents and incompatible mates, neither of which are the parties with whom we are now dealing.

Before closing, it may not be amiss to ask the Judge why, if everything in connection with the sale of the city tax lots by the Mayor and Treasurer to wife, mother-in-law and son-in-law was correct, defensible and beyond reproach, did he volunteer suggestions to change the mode of dealing with the disposal of the remaining tax lots still the city's property? The inference is that he came to the conclusion, notwithstanding his report of "not guilty," that there was, if not something radically wrong, irregularities which required putting a stop to. Otherwise the suggestions were uncalled for. This recommendation gives the whole case away, proving clearly that the system of disposing of city property put it in the power of those who had the selling of it to profit thereby, and to prevent a repetition, he suggests a remedy. Would it not have been much more to the point had the Judge rendered the Scotch verdict, "Not guilty, but don't do it again."

DOCTOR ADVISED HOSPITAL

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back hurt, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice. I have done as you told me.

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

"If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief."—Mrs. Benj. H. Stansbery, Route 6, Box 18, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

If you have mysterious pains, irregularity, backache, extreme nervousness, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait too late, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy, and should give everyone confidence.

Absurd Telegrams

A worse than stupid telegram from Ottawa, of the 9th inst., appeared in The Intelligencer last evening to the effect that the delay in the swearing in of the Borden Cabinet was "due to the attitude of Mr. Monk against the Cabinet having any representative of English Protestants in Quebec." It is not conceivable that Mr. Monk, whatever his views may be upon the naval question, ever gave such a reason for not joining the Borden Cabinet as that attributed to him in the special telegram to which we refer. It is only a fool or a madman who would take such a position in Canada or in any other country where free institutions exist, and Mr. Monk is neither one nor the other. Such news mongers as those who telegraph such trash ought to have a taste of the lash.

Judging from the composition of the Cabinet, which appears in to-day's Intelligencer, we should be inclined to think Mr. Monk's objection, if he made any, would be that there is no English Protestant in the Cabinet from Quebec holding a portfolio. True, Mr. Perley is a Protestant representing a Quebec constituency, lives in Ottawa, and is a member of the Cabinet, but without portfolio.

The New Minister of Finance

Mr. White, who has been manager of the National Trust Company since its inception at Toronto, and lately advanced to the position of Vice-President, is accredited with being a very able man, very much respected by the business men of Toronto, who have every confidence in him. He is level-headed and thoroughly honest, and may be depended upon to do the right thing without fear or favor. He speaks well and his general information is good; his financial experience in everything he has undertaken has been a success; and it is said that he will not do a mean thing to please any government, any party or person.

We have no knowledge of the reasons which induced Mr. Borden to select an outsider to fill an important position in the Cabinet, but presume it was for the purpose of giving those who left party rather than sacrifice country, a representative in the Government. If so, a better selection could not have been made.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

IT ENDS PAIN!

Have you a sore place? Have you any skin disease, old sore or obstinate wound, that has defied all efforts at healing? If so, apply Zam-Buk and prove its merits.

A Woman's Message to Women.

Mrs. James Elsworth, 902 Selkirk Ave., Winnipeg, Man., says:—"Four and a half years ago ulcers started on my left ankle, and spread until the top of my foot and limb, to the knee, was well-nigh covered. I used ointment after ointment, until everything I knew of had been tried, but I received little or no benefit. I was laid up in bed for a long time, and had no rest or sleep, night after night, from the acute pain and irritation.

"I consulted doctors, until I had taken treatment from at least five. After using their ointments and preparations until I was positive I could get no cure, I almost gave up in despair. I was next persuaded to try a course of treatment supplied by a company operating in this city, paying as much as thirteen dollars and a half in one week for ointments, which proved of no use whatever.

"One day a sample of Zam-Buk was left at the house. This seemed to soothe the pain almost instantly, and encouraged me to get a supply from the druggist and give it a fair trial. Zam-Buk had a wonderful effect in a very short time. The irritation and the pain were quickly relieved, and gradually the ulcers were cleansed of all poisonous matter. The discharging then ceased, and the ulcers began to show signs of healing. I kept on using Zam-Buk until every ulcer had been completely healed."

GOVERNMENT IS ACTIVE

Portuguese Authorities Respond to Monarchist Invasion.

Extraordinary Session of Parliament Is Called In Order to Get a Tribunal For the Immediate Trial of Those Involved In the Uprising—Royalists Are Intrenched In Mountains Near Neutral Territory.

Lisbon, Oct. 10.—Both Chambers of Parliament have been summoned to meet in extraordinary session on Oct. 16. The Government will then ask that paragraphs 20 and 21 of article 3 of the constitution be suspended and a special tribunal be constituted for the immediate trial of those charged with political offences.

This is the Government's response to the Monarchist invasion of Northern Portugal. Awaiting trial are 600 political prisoners and to these others are likely to be added in the next few days. Col. Alberto da Silveira, former commander of the police, was yesterday appointed Minister of War, succeeding Gen. Pimento Castre, resigned.

According to last night's news the Royalists are entrenched in the mountainous district of Serra da Corroa, within less than a mile of the Spanish frontier, and so able to retreat if necessary, into neutral territory. Two regiments of infantry, a squadron of cavalry and 400 soldiers landed from the warships at Oporto, are pressing the Monarchists, with whom there are occasional skirmishes. The Government feels somewhat hindered, as it does not wish to annoy Spanish susceptibilities by fighting near the frontier.

Monarchists Retreating.

Oporto, Oct. 10.—Latest official advices say that the Monarchists are retreating, having abandoned Carzares yesterday and taking refuge a mile from the frontier to the northwest of Vinhaes. The Government column in pursuit is closing in upon the Monarchists. Oporto is quiet.

Arrested After Long Search.

Washington, Oct. 10.—After a search across the continent and up into British Columbia, the secret service operatives yesterday captured Albert Leon, a Russian Jew and political refugee, as he was about to leave New York for South America. Leon is alleged to be the head of an extensive counterfeiting gang which has flooded the Pacific coast with spurious $10 bank notes during the past year.

The secret service was yesterday advised that Leon was alleged to have perfected a process by which he photographed the face of a note that looked so much like surface printing that many experts declared it to have been printed from etched plate.

Two of Leon's alleged confederates, Rudolph Swanson and Fred Marneek, were arrested in Chicago two weeks ago. These two men are charged with passing some of the counterfeit money.

Leon arrived in this country about three years ago. He took up a section of land near Beaumont, near Los Angeles, where it is believed the first spurious notes were made. In December, 1910, he went to Nootka Island in British Columbia, and it was charged that most of his counterfeit work came out of his plant there.

Aviators Narrow Escape.

New York, Oct. 10.—Thomas O. M. Sepwith, the English aviator, and Nelson Doubleday, son of Frank Doubleday, his passenger, had remarkable escapes yesterday from serious injury when the aviator's biplane fell 53 feet, landing on a fence at the Nassau Aerodrome, on Long Island.

Sepwith was about 300 feet in the air when he suddenly found that the handle of his control gear would not work. He started to come down, and when 53 feet from the ground the connecting wire broke and he partly lost control of the machine. With rare coolness and judgment, he managed to keep right side up and landed on the fence without much damage, aside from an injured plane.

Earl L. Ovington again failed to start from here on his trip to Governor's Island, where he was to commence his trip across the continent. Motor trouble was reported as the cause.

British Novelist Is Dead.

London, Oct. 10.—Hesba Stretton, the novelist, died here yesterday. She was never married, and she and her sister, Elizabeth Smith, lived together all their lives. When the latter died, last February, it was predicted that the author would not survive her very long, as she was in feeble health at the time.

The father of the novelist was a Shropshire bookseller. She wrote first for Charles Dickens, from 1859 until his death. Afterwards she wrote a number of religious and philanthropic stories, which have been translated in all European and several Asiatic languages.

A Big Difference.

Washington, Oct. 10.—A discrepancy of over $3,288,271 between the material on hand and that called for by the books of the Washington navy yard was shown by the inventory of that yard just completed, according to an announcement by Secretary of the Navy Meyer yesterday. This is the first inventory of record made at this yard within the last 25 years.

The Navy Department officials stated explicitly that there was no indication whatever that moral turptitude was involved in the discrepancy and that it undoubtedly was due to the antiquated bookkeeping methods.

Gets Three Years.

Chatham, Oct. 10.—John Dawson, found guilty of stealing eight bottles of whiskey from the Grand Trunk warehouse, was sentenced to three years in Kingston Penitentiary by Magistrate Howston yesterday morning. Dawson still maintained that he was not guilty. He walked to the jail with Officer Dodson, calmly smoking a cigar.

A Poxy Swindle.

New York, Oct. 10.—Frank J. Dorlan, cashier of the Hotel Manhattan for the last twelve years, who is alleged to have stolen sums aggregating $10,000 from the hotel, was yesterday sentenced to serve from five to ten years in Sing Sing. He was convicted on three specific accounts, charging him with stealing $222, $900 and $1,150.

Dorlan's method was to extract from the cash the exact amount of a check received from a patron for his hotel bill. Thus the proper balance would be shown at the end of the day, the check counting against the abstracted sum.

Spanish Losses In Morocco.

Madrid, Oct. 10.—The Spanish losses in the engagement between the Spanish columns and tribesmen in the Kert River region, Morocco, on Saturday, were 36 killed and 109 wounded.

The Spanish columns, in resuming operations against the hostile tribes, advanced ten miles inland, burning the houses and driving the tribesmen from their positions. But they met with determined resistance. The operations were directed by the Minister of War in person.

A Youthful Robber.

Kingston, Oct. 10.—In broad daylight, a 10-year-old lad walked into the home of W. Linton, took $3 out of a purse on the hall-tree, put the purse back in its place, and walked out. Members of the household heard the door slam, and, running to the door, saw the lad getting away. The boy is under arrest, having been identified by Mrs. Linton as the thief. He was caught twice before stealing [illegible]uses.

No Foul Play.

Ottawa, Oct. 10.—The coroner's jury enquiring into the death of J. Frederick Fraser, former light commissioner of the Marine Department, decided that the deceased died from cyanide poisoning, probably self-administered. There was nothing in the evidence to support the theory of foul play or the sensational stories sent from Ottawa on the affair.

TURKEY WILL YIELD.

She Demands However External Signs of Authority.

Rome, Oct. 10.—It is semi-officially announced that, following the intervention of the German ambassador the Ottoman Government suspended the order for the expulsion of Italians from Turkey. It is expected that the Government will now abandon the measure altogether.

Must Know Conditions.

Berlin, Oct. 10.—The Cologne Gazetter, in an inspired Berlin despatch, says that the Turkish note cannot be complied with until the conditions are named, whereupon the cessation of hostilities might be successfully attempted.

It is assumed that Turkey finally will declare her readiness to turn over Tripoli to Italy, while retaining the external signs of power, and that Italy will interpose no stout resistance to peace negotiations.

Should Omit Grain.

Constantinople, Oct. 10.—The German ambassador is urging the Porte to publish a definite statement as to what articles will be treated as contraband of war, and advising the exclusion of cereals from the list, on the ground that to make cereals contraband would offend Russia and Great Britain, but not seriously affect Italy.

Daylight Robbery.

Chatham, Oct. 10.—Thieves picked the combination of the Aberdeen Hotel safe Sunday afternoon in broad daylight and walked away with over two hundred dollars in cash, undetected. Calixe Bechard, proprietor of the establishment, was in the hotel at the time but the robbery must have been committed in a very few minutes while Mr. Bechard was upstairs. For some time Mr. Bechard had been missing small sums from the safe, but in the hope of catching the thief, he said nothing about it, keeping a close watch on the quiet. Last week $50 was missed in one day. Mr. Bechard did not know at that time just how the money was taken, but now he is positive that the thief knew the combination and opened the safe.

CONNAUGHT ON OCEAN

H.R.H. Is Enjoying His Trip to the Dominion.

He Announces That He Will Not Visit Montreal Until November 1, But Will Go Straight to Ottawa—Has No Official Message to Canadians, Because Earl Grey Is Still Technically In Governor-Generalship.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—The Montreal Star yesterday published the following wireless despatch:

"On board the steamship Empress of Ireland, via Malin Head, 9th.

"Fine weather continues to attned the Duke of Connaught's trip across the Atlantic. The duke and his party are proving themselves the best of sailors and are enjoying every minute of the time aboard ship.

"The Star's correspondent was granted an informal chat with His Royal Highness. He found the duke to be most affable and eager to discuss Canadian affairs. His Highness is apparently losing no opportunity to acquaint himself with conditions in the Dominion.

"Upon being asked if he had any message that he would like to send to Canada in advance of his arrival there, he replied:

"'No, I could not give you an official message of any kind, as that would be contrary to etiquette. Earl Grey being still in Canada, official messages can only come from Ottawa. But everybody knows that I am most glad to return to Canada, whose acquaintance I first made 42 years ago, and renewed in the nineties, while on my way to India. I shall be delighted to be in the Dominion once again.'

"I am officially informed that the winter program of Their Royal Highnesses will include visits to the important cities in eastern Canada. The dates are at present unfixed.

"I have also been requested to state that the duke is not going up to Montreal, on his arrival at Quebec, because he feels that he could not do a visit to that city justice in the present circumstances of his divided establishment. He will, however, make an official and formal visit to Montreal at the earliest opportunity.

"The duke is most popular with the passengers and the staff aboard ship. There is no attempt to isolate him from the other passengers, and he is a familiar figure on the promenade deck."

Visit Postponed.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—The Duke of Connaught will not visit the city of Montreal until November 1.

This was the information received yesterday morning by the mayor and Ald. Dandurand, chairman of the reception committee.

Sometime ago when it was found that the repairs to the City Hall would not be finished in time to receive the duke on his arrival in Canada, Mayor Guerin wrote to Ottawa asking it it would be possible to arrange a postponement of the new Governor-General's visit to a later date. Yesterday at noon the reply was received, stating that the duke had been made acquainted with the position of affairs and would delay his visit accordingly.

By that time the new floor on the second storey, where the mayor's office and council chamber are located, will be finished and a special carpet that is being prepared for the occasion will be ready.

Hydro Power Popular.

Thamesford, Oct. 10.—Only one vote was cast yesterday against two bylaws in connection with the purchase of Niagara power from the Hydro-Electric Commission. One bylaw was the purchase of the power from the province instead of from Ingersoll, and the other was for raising the funds—about $6,000—needed for the installation of the local plant and its appliances. In both cases the vote showed 55 in favor of and 1 opposed.

Hitherto the electrical energy used here has been transmitted from Ingersoll and the price to be paid under the new conditions, $48 per horsepower, will be considerably less than the present cost.

It is proposed to supply Kintore power users from here and between 500 and 600 horsepower will be added to the list of the province's customers.

War on Cockroaches.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—The triple-distilled war spirit of Tripoli has fired the Roman spirit in the hearts of Montreal's Board of Control and they are resolved to make war upon an army of cockroaches which Ald. Lavalle and La Pointe have assured them have taken possession of St. James' market to the exclusion of trade and the public health. Dr. Laberge of the Health Department and Market Inspector Biron have reported that the historic market place is in the hands of the bugs and that the honest tradesmen are fleeing in terror from their stalls and taking to the tall timbers, while the cockroaches are hauling down flags in the shape of price tickets wherever found.

Shooting Accident.

Richmond, Que., Oct. 10.—A shooting accident occurred here yesterday morning, resulting in the death of Frank Dresser, insurance agent, of this place. The particulars of the shooting have not been learned, but one story is that the young man, who intended going hunting, was standing in the door of his house, when his gun was accidently discharged. The contents entered his body and he died in a few minutes.

Sunk With All on Board.

Boston, Oct. 10.—The sinking of an unknown British barkentine, said to have hiled from Bridgeton, N.S., off the entrance to the Bany of Fundy, on Sept. 30, with all on board, was reported yesterday by Captain Goodwin of the fishing schooner Good Luck.

Home Rule Fight Begins.

London, Oct. 10.—Right Hon. Walter Long, in opening his anti-home rule campaign at Darlington yesterday, pointed out that self-government upon the lines of Canada and Australia meant virtual separation. Couldn't Canada to-morrow, if it choose to do so, throw off the British flag? They knew perfectly well that all the soldiers and sailors in the world, and all statesmen could not prevent Canada, Australia or South Africa taking their own line.

These great colonies had no intention of doing anything of the kind, for they love the Mother Country, and meant to stand by her. That was true, but wise people ought not to be content with securities of that kind in certain circumstances. They would regret it with bitter tears if Canada or Australia or the Union of South Africa were to leave the Mother Country, but it would not interfere with the security of her defence.

But was it so with Ireland? Could they regard the prospect of the separation of Ireland with the same comparative equanimity, as they do that of the colonies? Ireland was part of themselves. She was as much a part of the Mother Country as Lancashire or Yorkshire or Durham.

Prize For Peace Essays.

Mohonk Lake, N.Y., Oct. 10.—The Lake Mohonk Conference on International Arbitration announced yesterday the opening of its third annual prize contest for the best essay on international arbitration for an undergraduate male student of any college in the United States or Canada. The prize of $100 is given by Chester Dewitt Pugsley. The conference also announced two prizes of $200 and $100 given by Mrs. Elmer Black of New York, for the best essays on international peace by undergraduate women students of colleges in the United States.

To Improve the Service.

Montreal, Oct. 10.—Mr. Stephen Furness, brother of Lord Furness, and general manager of the Manchester Lines, Ltd., arived here on Saturday by the Allan Line steamer Victorian. Mr. Furness expected a big improvement in the trade of the company with the port of Montreal, and the object of his visit is to investigate facilitiesm for an additional Mancheser steamer.

Motorman's Watch Magnetized.

Detroit, Oct. 10.—Investigation by the Detroit United Railway officials verified the belief of Motorman Harry Uber that Saturday night's collision at Young's curve on the Flint division of the railway, in which two were killed and 12 injured, was caused by Uber's watch having become magnetized. Suprintendent Bullen gave out an official statement to this effect yesterday.

Colonial Office Collecting Data.

Kingston, Ja., Oct. 10—The Colonial Office at London is seeking information here as the possible influence the opening of the Panama Canal will have on the British West Indies. Sir Dyney Oliver, the governor of Jamaica, with this end in view, will pay a visit to the Panama zone in November. He will collect data and make a report to the British Secretary of State for the Colonies.

One hundred Fenian Raid veterans will travel to Ottawa next Saturday from Montreal to offer the honorary presidency of their association to His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught on the occasion of the reception to be tendered him by the citizens of the capital. On Saturday evening Captain Joseph H. Paterson, of Ottawa, met 350 veterans in the armoury and explained the action taken by the association during the recent elections. After the elections he had an interview with the new Prime Minister, who gave him promises for the future of the welfare of the veterans. An interesting feature of the celebration next Saturday is that the new Governor-General is himself a Fenian Raid veteran.

Chronic Throat Trouble Permanently Cured

SEVEN DAYS' USE OF CATARRHOZONE PERFORMED REGULAR MIRACLE.

Miss Counter's Case Proves the Wonderful Efficacy of Catarrhozone In all Throat and Nose Troubles.

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 10—Miss Counter's case, will prove of great interest to everyone troubled with sore throat, bornchitis or weak lungs.

When asked for a statement Miss Counter said: "About seven years ago I contracted a heavy cold that settled on my lungs and resisted all treatment. After I had tried several doctors here and specialists in Detroit without benefit, I went to my druggist and asked him for the best remedy he had for cold on the lungs. He recommended Catarrhozone, which cured my cold in one week. It brought back my voice, and I have been ever since free from my old trouble. For coughs, colds and lung trouble I am sure that Catarrhozone is the best remedy. It goes right to the sore spot, gives quick relief, and makes a lasting cure."

Catarrhozone cures because its healing vapor is inhaled to the very places that are sore and inflamed.

To permanently cure your winter ills, your coughs, sneesing and catarrh by all means use a tried and proven remedy like Catarrhozone. But beware of the substitutor and imitator. Look for Catarrhozone only. 50c. and $1.00 at all dealers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., or Kingston, Canada.

Cotton Wealth

One of the most important industries in which wealth is now made from what many generations was regarded as waste is that of dealing with cotton seed. In the great plantations of the United States the seed for years and years and years was thrown away as useless. Then some one arose who made money by extracting the oil. To-day hundreds of factories turn out millions of pounds of cottonseed oil every year, that product having scores of uses in modern civilisation — from the blending of lubricating oils to cooking and the feeding of cattle. Planters in the Southern States of America are now making some $70,000,000 a year out of a product which once caused them much worry regarding its disposal.

It was one of Britain's Peers who gave a gigantic Chicago beef firm an idea out of which hundreds of thousands of dollars have been made. He was being shown through one of the slaughter houses, and was vastly impressed by the stream of blood flowing out as refuse. He gave his cicerone a hint, telling him that in the hospitals the nurses squeezed the blood out of beef and gave it to some patients, who thus got the strength out of the meat, even though they were too weak, say, to digest a steak. That hint was enough. Experiments were made. What has been the result? "Beef extract" is known throughout the world. It is said that the young nobleman was rewarded in due course for his suggestion by a present of £20,000, but, whether this is so or not, it is certain that vast fortunes have been made from what was once looked upon as waste.

Good Boy Fritz

To show his gratitude for having lived under the protection of the British flag for 30 years a German trader in Basutoland hoisted on Coronation Day the Union Jack on the top of Thabanise Peak, at an altitude of 3600 ft.

Nothing like combining business with pleasure. While visiting Krupp's works recently, Sir T. B. Robinson, Agent-General for Queensland, pointed out that there was no potato-peeler in the workmen's restaurants, and succeeded in introducing one of Australian make. An enterprising insurance agent who sought to do business with the dusky inhabitants of the African village at the Scottish Exhibition the other day was scarcely so successful, however.

According to the latest census the population of South Africa of all races is 5,938,499, compared with 5,185,824 in 1904. Of this number 1,279,025 are Europeans and 4,061,082 are natives.

BRITAIN'S POST OFFICE

This Department of the Nation's Administration, Dating Back to the Fifteenth Century, is Acknowledged Best On Earth.

The post office system of the British Isles is widely praised for the "businesslike methods and the eagerness to serve" that characterized it as something desirable of imitation by every country. And in this connection there is recalled the remark of Gladstone in 1866,—"I am far from thinking very highly of our rank as a nation of administrators, but perhaps if we could be judged of the post office alone, we might claim the very first place in this respect."

The history of this branch of public service goes back a long way in Great Britain. In 1482 the first offices were established, though in the reigns of Henry III and Edward I, postmen in royal liveries carried royal despatches. Under James the First, however, the organized postal system was established, and a regular weekly conveyance of letters in England, Scotland and Ireland was begun in 1656. The first British postmaster ever appointed was a man named Matthew Le Quester. The postage varied with the distance the letter had to be carried and ran anywhere from two pence to fourteen pence. These burdensome rates remained till about 1840, when Rowland Hill, after three years' steady work, brought about inland penny postage. The penny rate was for only a half-ounce. Franking privileges were abolished and mails were sent out much more frequently. As a consequence of better service and lower rates the revenue from the postal service was greatly increased. At the end of the 18th century the revenue from this source was only £720,000; at the end of the 19th century it was £3,710,000.

The first adhesive postage stamps made their appearance soon after penny post was established. The first British stamps had a profile of Queen Victoria engraved upon them with "postage" printed above the portrait and the value of the stamp below.

SWEAT NO MORE

Office Boys Excepted, Humanity Can Benefit From Recent Discovery Under Which the Perspiration Worry Will Be Effectually Barred.

Dr. Howard Pirrie, of the X-ray department of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, Eng., has, it is said, discovered a method whereby excessive perspiration may be cured. His discovery, like all great discoveries, is simplicity itself. Interpreted from technical into every-day language, it merely means that a patient has to take a series of sittings under the X-rays. Dr. Pirrie found that those thus treated ceased to perspire in the part on which the magic light fell, his explanation being that the cells making up the hair glands, which produce the normal oil of the skin and the sweat glands, attain greater absorbitive power. Medical science has hitherto maintained that the exuding of sweat is a healthy cleansing of the pores of the skin; but if that is a mistaken view — and there is no evidence to show that it is — the new discovery may perhaps be regarded as a means of largely adding to human comfort. It may have wide-spread effects, which will modify one of the minor worries flesh is heir to. Perspiration will be abolished by X-ray baths.

The man of full habit, who, pushing a sluggish lawn mower, lards the lean earth with perspiration, will appreciate any treatment which promises to make his lot a little less moist. The hardy iron worker, the strenuous moulder, who are wont to make up for the loss of sweat at their work by frequent libations of water or something alcoholic, will merely require to allow the miraculous rays to play upon their stalwart frames to ensure the epidermis even in the fiercest heat remaining as dry as the Sahara. Every athlete will require to have an installation of the X-rays for the use of their sweltering players. The dancing man, whose collars become limp and invertebrate, will rush to have his neck treated, so that the refined beauty of his immaculate appearance will not be ruined by linen depressed and flaccid. Even the eager office-boy, perspiring as he hurries — but, no! an office-boy, perspiring and hurrying, is so unique that it would be a pity to spoil the phenomenon. Office-boys who exude perspiration excepted, the discovery will be to the benefit of humanity.

Steam Before Watt

Hero, of Alexandria, who flourished some considerable time before the Christian era, has placed it on record that in his time there existed a little engine which went by steam. It was a curious little contrivance, this first known steam-engine. It consisted of a large ball, from which a spout projected; this ball was suspended by three upright rods, which rested upon a three-wheeled carriage. On the carriage, and under the ball, was a small lamp. The ball was filled with water, the steam from which, escaping from the spout, was able by the resistance of the air to force the little carriage forward. That is the first locomotive of which we have record.

Convicts on Strike

Almost anything seems a good enough excuse for a riot now-a-days. Convicts in the gaol at Castidias, Sardinia, have been in the habit of buying sweets and fruit with the few halfpennies allowed by the authorities. The vendors having put up the prices of these luxuries, the convicts rioted so effectually a week ago that a regiment of artillery had to be sent from Cagliari to soothe them.

Save the peelings from the peaches which are to be pickled or canned, and also the pits. These make delicious jelly.

NERVOUSNESS AND DYSPEPSIA

CURED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES" THE GREAT FRUIT MEDICINE

In Nervous Dyspepsia, the Dyspepsia does not come from the Nervousness—but the latter trouble does come from the Dyspepsia.

The stomach is a network of nerves. Now if all these nerves are irritated by improper food, hasty eating, or poisoned by gases from the constipated bowels, then they will make one nervous.

"Fruit-a-tives" cures both the Nervousness and the Dyspepsia because "Fruit-a-tives" cures all stomach troubles, keeps the stomach sweet and clean, and enables you to eat and sleep as you did when a child.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

IN LIFE-LONG DARKNESS

People Who for One Reason or Another Condemn Themselves to an Existence Where Light of Day Never Reaches.

It is a popular fallacy that light is as necessary to life as food. Yet in India, and also in Tibet, whole families have been found living in the bowels of the earth, to whom darkness is natural, and light unbearable. Numbers of Fakirs bury themselves in subterranean homes, and count it the noblest sacrifice to give up the good things of life, and shut themselves in caves of mother earth.

Earth dwellers are common in Tibet. Strangely clad men and women, who since childhood have rarely looked upon the sun, are found living in roomy clay apartments in a mode as stringent as any monastic order. They are supplied with food and other necessaries by their children, who alone leave the caverns; and much of their time is occupied in extending their curious residences.

Life at the bottom of a lake was the crazy idea of a Canadian settler who had amassed a fortune by ranching. He had arranged that his fiancee should come from Bradford to London where they were to be married. The young lady was drowned on the voyage, and the tragedy so affected the lover mentally that he determined on the mad motion of a house under water. He sold up everything, had a solid iron hut erected at the bottom of a small lake on his ranch, with unique ventilating and other apparatus.

A short tunnel was built connecting the abode with the land, and here he began to live. Unfortunately disaster soon followed, for during the terrific storms which swept across the colony a few years ago the tunnel collapsed, and the man was never seen again.

Underground-living is greatly favored by the illicit whisky-makers in Ireland. Secure in their peaty homes, they can carry on their trade with the minimum of risk, and the fewer opportunities they take of coming to light, the safer their position. Therefore a villager is won over to aid them, and acts as messenger and universal provider to the unknown inhabitants.

The bulk of the spirit manufactured is made by these distillers, whose names are in no directory, and whose house is not located. When they breathe the pure, fresh air it is at the dead of night, when the hills are deserted, and the officials are closely watching less wary dodgers.

In many mining districts in England there are scores of persons who can truly confess their ignorance of daylight. They literally live in the bowels of the earth, in charge of the horses, and even if for once they came out of their horrible prison, they would not be able to see and enjoy the summer sun.

An interesting feature of the Calcutta Durbar on December 30 will, it is stated, be the performance of the ancient Hindu ceremony of tulat — or weighing the King against masses of silver and gold, to be afterwards distributed among the poor.

ONE MILLION DOLLARS FOR A GOOD STOMACH

THIS OFFER SHOULD BE A WARNING TO EVERY MAN AND WOMAN.

The newspapers and medical journals recently have had much to say relative to a famous millionaire's offer of a million dollars for a new stomach.

The great multi-millionaire was too busy to worry about the condition of his stomach. He allowed his dyspepsia to run from bad to worse until in the end it became incurable.

His misfortune serves as a warning to others.

Everyone who suffers with dyspepsia for a few years will give everything he owns for a new stomach.

Dyspepsia is commonly caused by an abnormal state of the gastric juices, or by the lack of tone in the walls of the stomach. The result is that the stomach loses its power to digest food.

We are now able to supply certain missing elements—to help to restore to the gastric juices their digestive power, and to aid in making the stomach strong and well.

We know that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are a most dependable remedy for disordered stomachs, indigestion, and dyspepsia.

We want you to try them and will return your money if you are not more than satisfied with the result.

THE WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION HELD THEIR ANNUAL MEETING

Satisfactory Reports of the Year's Operations Presented—Election of Officers and Other Business Transactd—Full Report of the Proceedings

The annual meeting of the Women's Christian Association, a body of ladies who wisely and judiciously administer the affairs of the city hospital and Home of the Friendless, as well as the city's poor fund, was held in the city council chamber yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. J. Lewis, President, occupied the chair and many ladies were in attendance. The proceedings were opened by the reading of scripture by Mrs. L. W. Yeomans, and prayer by Miss MacKay. The various reports for the year were then presented, of which the following is a summary:

Recording Secretary's Report.

Mrs. L. W. Mikel, the Recording Secretary, read her report for the past year. It commented upon the successful completion of the hospital extension. An up-to-date laundry has been installed at the cost of approximately $1,000. An elevator has been put in at a cost of $2,000 The private wards have all been furnished by the kind friends of the hospital. The placing of the equipment of the isolation hospital at the disposal of the Association leaves little to be done in the way of furnishings.

The business of the hospital has been growing year by year, imposing additional burdens on the staff and officers of the W. C. A. The advisability was noted of appointing a paid secretary to look after the work as stenographer, typewriter and bookkeeper, to collect information from patients at the hospital as to their ability to pay. This office might attend to collecting of subscriptions and furnishing of supplies.

The conditions at the Home have been improved somewhat by the installation of a bath. Large double-deck verandahs are being built on the east and north-east end of the building. These will be of inestimable benefit in the case of the outbreak of fire. The demands of the indigent were decreased during the past year although Mrs. Vermilyea and her valuable committee have done good work.

Auditor.

Mr. J. D. Clarke, auditor, presented a statement that he had examined the books and found them correct.

Indigent Committee.

Mrs. A. G. Vermilyea, chairman of the Indigent Committee for 1910-11, presented the following report:

Many ward people died during the year. The Board decided to ask $3.50 per year for city patients. The committee desire to thank Mr. H. Corby for his usual Xmas gift, also Mayor Ackerman and all others who have helped in any way to relieve the poor.

Hospital Board Report.

Miss H. A. MacKay reported for the hospital board. Her report showed the beneficial results to be derived from the new hospital wing. The public wards are large and airy. The new operating room is awaiting completion. Graduating exercises were held in January last, when four young ladies received their diplomas. The work of the President, Mrs. Lewis and Miss Green, superintendent, received high commendation.

Mrs. G. E. Deroche, Treasurer of the hospital board, presented a report, showing a total income of $9,114.70; an increase of $1718.05 over that of 1910. Forty-one patients from the city have been unable to pay for their maintenance.

MR. NORTHRUP MAY BE THE SPEAKER

OTTAWA, Oct. 10.—Mr. W. B. Northrup, M.P. for East Hastings, is prominently mentioned as Speaker of the Commons, though no decision has yet been reached. Senator Landry will be Speaker of the Senate.

The Hon. Martin Burrill, Minister of Agriculture, is the only member of the Cabinet who has not yet arrived. He is on his way from British Columbia.

A coincidence arises from the fact that the Borden Government takes office just one week earlier than did Sir John Macdonald's after the defeat of Premier Mackenzie, in 1878. At that time the deefated government took three weeks to quit, while Sir John required nine days to form his Ministry.

One of Mr. Borden's first official acts was to extend a thoughtful courtesy to Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

When the list of those going to Quebec to welcome the Duke of Connaught was submitted to him, Mr. Borden noticed that the ex-Premier was not included. He instructed that both he and Lady Laurier be added, and furthermore ordered that a private car be placed at their disposal for the trip.

It is not yet certain whether Sir Wilfrid will be able to accept.

Parliament is likely to meet to organize and pass Supply about the middle of November. The first real business session is not likely to be called before about February 1. There is a lot of unfinished business left over by the old Government to be attended to.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Last night Dr. McCulloch, chairman of the Physical Committee, was elected a member of the Board of Directors.

To-morrow afternoon at 3.30 p. m. will be held the monthly meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary, when all having quotations for the calendar will kindly report.

The Field Day, which was postponed until next Saturday on account of wet grounds, will be held Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. All those intending to compete should hand in their entries at the earliest possible date.

The senior gymnasium class will have the floor to-night. Junior school boys, to-morrow afternoon at 4.30.

(Intelligencer Special.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 11.—Additional returns to-day show that the vote for woman's suffrage has apparently been carried.

More Light To-day.

Toronto, Oct. 11.—Sir James Whitney intimated yesterday that he will this afternoon state when the Ontario Government will go to the country. Yesterday afternoon the Cabinet Ministers held a long conference in the Premier's private room and will to-day announce a definite decision.

Up to the present Sir James has not made any statement further than that the matter has not been decided.

"The people are anxious for news, and if I could say anything definite now I would do so," said Sir James "I assure you that the very moment any information can be given out you will have it."

In the event of an election the date would probably be set for the early part of November.

Premier Whitney said that Hon. Frank Cochrane, the new Dominion Minister of Railways, will be greatly missed from the Ontario Legislature and that he has proved himself to be a faithful servant in Government affairs.

Irish Bacon Industry.

London, Eng., Oct. 11.—In forwarding statistics relating to the Irish bacon industry the American Deputy Consul-General in London remarks that while Ireland sends its bacon and ham to England, it eats more of American and other foreign produce. Many firms in the wholesale provision centres of the greater English cities, while buying Irish produce extensively, at the same time forward to Ireland large quantities of American and other produce.

Bequest to Acadia University.

New York, Oct. 11.—The will of Charles F. Myers, M.D., D.C.L., who died Aug. 22 last, was filed in the surrogate's office yesterday. To the Acadia University of Nova Scotia is left $25,000, "or any part of it that has not already been given to establish and for all time support a professorship known as that of biology and zoology." To the church "known as Baptist, in Boylston, N.S.," $1,000 is left.

May Lose His Leg.

Barrie, Oct. 11.—While out with a number of friends Monday evening hunting coons on the outskirts of Barrie, Fred. Salisbury was shot in the right leg by the accidental discharge of his gun. The shot entered his right leg just above the ankle, carrying away about one and three-quarter inches of bone and lacerating the flesh terribly. Slight hopes are entertained of being able to save the limb.

One fool in the family ought to be enough, but it seldom happens that way.

Regularity

of the bowels is an absolute necessity for good health. Unless the waste matter from the food which collects there is got rid of at least once a day, it decays and poisons the whole body, causing biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches. Salts and other harsh mineral purgatives irritate the delicate lining of the bowels. GERMANY IS AT WORK

Is Trying to Localize Hostilities on African Coast.

Finding That Mediation Is No Use Yet the German Government Is Endeavoring to Keep the Fighting Out of the Red, Aegean and Adriatic Seas—Turkish Refugees Are Carried to Malta on Board a British Ship.

Berlin, Oct. 11.—Although Germany finds that the time is not ripe for an offer of mediation to end the war between Turkey and Italy, pending the completion of the Italian occupation of Tripoli, the Government is endeavoring further to localize the hostilities and prevent fighting in the Red, Aegean and Adriatic Seas.

If Turkey will give assurances that she will not interfere in the transport of the expedition to Tripoli there is hope that all other hostilities will be suspended. The prolongation of war movements outside of Tripoli presents great risks to international shipping, and it is even feared that the service on the Suez Canal might be interrupted. The landing of the Italian expedition is said to present difficulties not anticipated. The weather on the Tripolitan coast has interfered and it will be at least a week probably before Italy is ready to treat with Turkey.

It is learned in diplomatic circles that Italy probably is willing to indemnify Turkey to the extent of about $12,000,000, but it is a question whether she is willing to recognize Turkish suzerainty over Tripoli in any form. Popular feeling and desire to avoid future sources of conflict may have changed the attitude that Italy held before the war began.

Turkish Refugees.

Malta, Oct. 11.—The Italian cruiser Borea wharved here Monday escorting the steamer Assyria, carrying many Turkish refugees from Tripoli, left port yesterday morning. She was permitted to take on only sufficient water to carry her to Syracuse.

The Italian consul raised objection to the action of the British authorities, contending that as the Borea was escorting a steamer filled with passengers, who were liable to mutiny and capture the ship, she should be commandered and could not be considered as being employed for warlike purposes, and she should, therefore, have free use of a neutral port.

The refugees, who were permitted to land, will take the next steamer for Constantinople. They complained bitterly of ill-treatment at the hands of Italians, saying that they had not been supplied with sufficient water.

A second Italian steamer, with 150 Turks, their wives and families, deported from Tripoli, arrived here yesterday afternoon. Many of the refugees will return to Tripoli on steamers which are now leaving daily.

Close Down on Italians.

Constantinople, Oct. 11.—At a Cabinet Council yesterday it was decided to close all Italian industrial, financial and scholastic establishments in Turkey, and to seize Italian steamers.

Italy's Purpose.

Chiasso, Oct. 11.—A confidential note from Italy to the powers confirms the purpose of Rome. The two objects, it says, are quite clear and distinct—namely, the conquest of Tripoli and the maintenance of the status quo in the Balkans.

It is semi-officially stated that Italy is now no more than satisfied with a simple protectorate over Tripoli, as in future events when other partition of territory occurs the interested powers may assign her a simple annexation of Tripoli to the detriment of other Italian aspirations.

Expedition On the Sea.

Rome, Oct 11.—The greater part of the Italian army expedition is now at sea en route for Tripoli. The battleship envoy covers a moving area one mile wide and five miles long. It is expected that, with a favorable sea, the troops can be landed in two days.

The first expeditionary force, which left Naples Oct. 5, was landed at Tobruk yesterday.

Britain Was Alarmed.

London, Oct. 11.—Turkey has now agreed to permit the free passage of neutral vessels, grain laden, to their destination. For the greater part of the day it looked as if Great Britain's food supply was endangered by the action of Turkey in declaring grain contraband, as 250 grain-carrying ships were tied up in the Black Sea At this season fully 30 per cent. of the wheat imported has to pass through the Bosphorus.

Powers to Wait on Italy.

London, Oct. 11.—A news despatch from Rome says that the Turkish soldiers who retreated to the interior when Tripoli was bombarded, have been obliged to open negotiations for their surrender, owing to the failure of their supplies.

The correspondent of The Chronicle at Constantinople telegraphs that the latest Turkish note to the powers was so conciliatory in tone that Germany has decided, with the other Governments, to renew the approaches at Rome for an understanding. Some of the answers received by the Porte from the powers Monday night are favorable to Turkey's request.

Reports from Benghazi that two Italian cruisers were destroyed, and from Derna that two Italian torpedo boat destroyers had been blown up by mines, are in circulation, but have not been confirmed.

A Bad Boy.

Kingston, Oct. 11.—In the Juvenile Court, Magistrate Farrell sentenced a 12-year-old burglar to the Industrial School for an indefinite period. In broad daylight the youngster entered a home and stole $3 out of a lady's purse left in the hall.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

THE SUNDAY LAW.

Four parties accused of selling cigars and tobacco in the city on Sunday last were summoned to appear before the Police Magistrate at three o'clock this afternoon.

FALL ASSIZES NEXT WEEK.

On Tuesday next, the 17th inst., the Fall Assizes will open here, the Hon. Chancellor Boyd presiding. There are no criminal cases to be tried and but one jury case has thus far been entered, namely a case to set aside a will. Mr. W. N. Ponton, K.C., of this city, has been appointed Crown Prosecutor.

FORMER BELLEVILLE MAN DEAD

Pneumonia was the cause of the death of Mr. Thomas McRae, aged 71, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. D. Lowery, 76 Constance St. Toronto. Deceased was born in Hamilton, Scotland. He lived in Belleville for several years, and for several years was superintendent of the Gilmour Lumbering Company at Trenton. He was a Presbyterian and a Mason. A widow and two daughters survive. Interment took place at Trenton.

A MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER.

Last evening about 35 girls assembled at the residence of Mrs. Abraham on Elmer Street, for the purpose of showing their esteem to Miss Pearl Ketcheson, a young lady who is about to leave the city. It partook of the nature of a miscellaneous shower, and she was presented with linen and other articles necessary for housekeeping. Miss Ketcheson has for some time been identified with church and Sunday school work in connection with Holloway street church. A pleasant time was spent by all who attended the function.

ONE-TIME PRESIDENT PASSES.

Mr. William A. Stoneberg, a former well known and respected resident died in Toronto on Monday and the remains were brought here at noon to-day for interment. Deceased, who was about 70 years of age, was born near Consecon, Prince Edward county. For many years he lived in Belleville, following his occupation as a ship builder. He constructed a number of craft. Some 15 years ago Mr. Stoneberg removed to Toronto, where he had since resided. Deceased had a host of friends in this city who will regret to learn of his demise. A widow and grown-up family survive.

FOR THE CURLERS.

Secretary J. A. Macfadden, of the O.C.A., has sent out the proposed grouping for the Tankard and Cup competitions. The list for this district is as follows:—

Group No. 1—Cobourg, Colborne, Belleville, Prescott, Brockville, Napanee, Kingston. Play at Kingston. Umpire—Mr. E. Lyons.

For the District Cup the grouping is as follows:—

District No. 3—Napanee, Kingston, Eastern Hospital (Brockville), Brockville, Cobourg, Prescott, Colborne, Belleville. Play at Kingston. Umpire, Mr. E. Lyons.

CLOTHES LINE STRIPPED.

On Monday night some articles of clothing were taken from off a clothes line in rear of a residence on Mill Street. The theft was reported to the police, who are working upon the case and anticipate locating the guilty party.

SIX MONTHS IN THE MERCER.

A girl named Annie Ostrom was yesterday sentenced to six months in the Mercer Reformatory by Magistrate O'Rourke, at Trenton. She was convicted on a charge of vagrancy. The girl was brought to this city last evening and is lodged in the County jail for the time being.

ONE YEAR IN CENTRAL.

A man named Thomas Brooks was this morning arraigned before Judge Deroche on a charge of assault preferred by Mrs. Wm. Wright of Marmora village. Through his counsel, Mr. Wm. Carnew, the accused pleaded guilty, hence no evidence was taken. The assault took place a week ago in the village and was an aggravated one. Judge Deroche sentenced Brooks to one year in the Central Prison and also gave him some timely advice. Mr. Anderson, County Attorney, represented the Crown.

WILL BUILD NEW RINK.

The Dickson Bros., contractors, of Campbellford, have been awarded the contract for the erection of a curling rink in this city. The building will be erected on vacant property on the west side of George Street, just north of Dundas Street. The rink will in every respect be up to-date and substantial, steel being chiefly used in its construction. In addition to the rink a club room will be erected. The work will be commenced immediately and rushed forward as rapidly as possible.

Finley Knew

Michael Clancy, who lived in Goldfield, Nevada, had returned to that mining city after a stay in Sacramento. He was telling his friend Finley about the place, and was expatiating particularly on the glories of a new hotel building where he had aided construction by carrying the hod.

"Tis that big," orated Clancy, "they have a place on the roof where they play goll'f."

"Man, you're crazy!" broke in Finley. "How could they do that? 'Tis some other game you're thinkin' av."

"Well, 'tis this game they play with a fish-net."

"That's tinnis," explained Finley.

"Belolke you're right," condescended Clancy; "I niver played it."

"Sure I'm right," declared Finley, with a fine air of superior wisdom. "I know'd it couldn't be goll'f, for how the blazes would they get their horses up there?"

and possess a range that will always give you complete satisfaction. Its efficiency is based on a stove experience of over half a century. Its improvements are those that have been thoroughly tested and found to be of real value to a range.

It is made of material that will give lasting service, the parts subject to the greatest strain and wear are especially reinforced and it has a reputation to live up to that obliges the makers to see that every range turned out of their factory is perfect.

It is always good policy to be thoroughly informed about any article before buying.

We will be pleased to explain the Happy Thought Range to you and then when you have examined the other stoves in the market—we will be ready to do business with you.

Had Bad Sore Four Years

Mrs. Wilson, 110 Wickson Ave., Toronto, says: "About four years ago a sore spot appeared on the right side of my face. This spot increased in size until it became about half an inch in diameter, and very painful. I went to a doctor, but the ointment he gave me did not have any good effect. The sore continued to discharge freely, and was most painful. I had it cauterized, tried poultices and all kinds of salves, but it was no good, and I continued to suffer from it for four years!"

"A sample of Zam-Buk was one day given to me, and I used it. Although the quantity was so small, it seemed to do some good, so I purchased a further supply.

"Each box did me more and more good, and, to my delight, before I had been using Zam-Buk three weeks, I saw that it was going to heal the sore. In less than a month it was healed!

"I know a lady in the east of the city, whose husband suffered for years with an open sore on his leg. On my recommendation, Zam-Buk was tried in that case. The other day, when I saw her, she told me that it had healed the sore completely.

"My daughter, who lives in Lethbridge, Alta., has also used Zam-Buk with the same satisfactory result. I think it is, beyond all doubt, the finest healing balm known."

Such is the opinion of all persons who have really tried Zam-Buk. It is a sure cure for eczema, piles, abscesses, ulcers, scalp sores, ringworm, cuts, burns, scalds, bruises and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. a box all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Company, Toronto, for price. In case of skin disease use also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

CURRENT COMMENT

The Arabs have named Lord Kitchener "The father of the moustaches." They certainly found him too bristly a customer to handle with impunity.

The Kingston Whig hopes all the Ministers of the new Government will be unopposed. The people voted for a change of Government. Give it a trial, says the Whig. Let it show what it can or cannot do.

A Dublin newspaper states that Prince Arthur, Duke of Connaught, has won the hearts of the Irish people by the dignity and simplicity of his character. This is an excellent record for His Royal Highness to have made, and that he will maintain it in Canada there is no reason whatever to doubt.

The Toronto News thinks we have too many public holidays and refers to 24th May, June 3 and June 22 of this year which were all bank holidays though they were not all observed by the public. The News believes we should now drop the celebration on the 24th of May and observe the birthday of George V. on June 3, as a public holiday instead. That is probably what will have to be done—what, indeed, Kingston has already decided to do, for the 24th of May celebration here this year was definitely the last for that day in Kingston.—Standard.

The rumor that Mr. W. B. Northrup, K. C., M. P., will be the next Speaker of the House of Commons has been most favorably received here. Mr. Northrup possesses all the necessary qualifications for the office to an exceptional extent and would fill the position with dignity and suavity. Should Mr. Northrup get the appointment he will not be the first "Bay of Quinte Boy" to preside over Canada's highest legislative body. The late Hon. Lewis Wallbridge, Q. Sufferer of Twenty Years States Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a Real Cure.

"I can't remember any time during the past 20 years when my head wasn't aching. If I bent over, dark specks would come before my eyes, and it seemed as if all the blood in my body wanted to rush to the head." Thus opens the letter of Mrs. Enoch S. Spry, of Putnam P. O., and continuing her interesting statement she says: "Work or exertion made my heart beat terrible, and going upstairs caused such shortness of breath that it fairly frightened me. My doctor told me that if that was the cause Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the greatest blood renewer on earth. I tell you how I feel to-day and you can understand what a great cure Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made. I feel strong enough now to work like a man, and as for going upstairs on the run, it doesn't bother me at all. I eat and sleep as well as any person ought, and as for dizziness, which used to frighten me so much, it has entirely disappeared. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a wonderful woman's medicine. They helped me in other ways, too, and I know every woman that uses them will have comfort and good health." FIRST MEETING HELD

New Cabinet Discusses Bye-Elections of Ministers.

No Decision Reached With Regard to Those Members of Government Who Do Not Take Portfolios — Martin Burrell Is Alone Absent—Solicitor-Generalship Will Be Open For Some Time—Quebec Is Satisfied.

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—The new Cabinet went into council yesterday afternoon after the formal swearing in at noon at Rideau Hall. The council lasted an hour, being cut short in time to let the Ministers attend the send-off to Earl Grey, who left by special train at five o'clock for Quebec.

The only subject discussed at the council was the holding of the bye-elections in the cases of those Ministers who have been entrusted with portfolios. No decision was reached, and at eleven o'clock this morning the talk was resumed.

The only Minister not here yesterday was Martin Burrell of British Columbia. Mr. Burrell leaves for Ottawa to-day, and will be the only man in the new Government to take the oath of office in the presence of the Duke of Connaught.

It is likely to be some time before anybody is chosen for the office of Solicitor-General.

Premier Borden yesterday received from George Taylor (Leeds), a blackthorn stick, which was given to Mr. Taylor many years ago by Sir John Macdonald.

One of the first duties of the new Cabinet will be to find seats in Ontario for Mr. W. T. White and Mr. Cochrane, and in Manitoba for Mr. Rogers; in New Brunswick for Mr. Hazen. Among seats mentioned as available in Ontario for Mr. White, are West Toronto, South Toronto, Halton (of which Mr. White is a native), East Middlesex, held for a number of years by Mr. Elson. It is understood the seat for Rainy River and Thunder Bay, won by Mr. Carrick, is to be held by that gentleman. Mr. Cochrane, however, might find a seat in some other portion of New Ontario. Gordon Wilson, M.P., has offered Mr. Cochrane his seat in Wentworth.

Satisfaction In Quebec.

Montreal, Oct. 11.—The personnel of the new Borden Cabinet as published yesterday morning, appeared to give very general satisfaction to the business community, the impression being that the new Prime Minister had endeavored to gather around him men who would make active and able administrators. It may be said, however, that as far as the English-speaking Quebec is concerned, the present arrangement is looked upon as temporary by the business and banking community, and that in a short time, the Hon. George Perley will be the holder of an important portfolio.

On the whole, French-Canadians looked upon the Cabinet as very generously conceived towards this province.

The Haunted Chamber

All this time she has not allowed herself to glance in his direction, so fearful is she of betraying the mental agony she is enduring.

"Is it likely I should speak of it?" returns Sir Adrian, reproachfully. "No; anything connected with you shall sacred to me, in spite of everything, I would deem it a privilege to befriend you in any way."

"It is impossible," murmurs Florence, in a stifled tone.

"You mean you will not accept my help"—sadly. "So be it then. I have no right, I know, to establish myself as your champion. There are others, no doubt, whose happiness lies in the fact that they may render you a service when it is in their power. I do not complain, however. Nay, I would even ask you to look upon me as a friend."

"I shall always regard you as a friend," Florence responds in a low voice. "It would be impossible to me to look upon you in any other light."

"Thank you for that," says Adrian quickly. "Though our lives must of necessity be much apart, it will still be a comfort for me to know that at least, wherever you may be, you will think of me as a friend."

"Ah," thinks Florence, with a bitter pang, "he is now trying to let me know how absurd was my former idea that he might perhaps learn to love me!" This thought is almost insupportable. Her pride rising in arms, she subdues all traces of her late emotion, and, turning suddenly, confronts him. Her face is quite colorless, but she cannot altogether hide from him the sadness that still desolates her eyes.

"You are right," she agrees. "In the future our lives will indeed be far distant from each other, so far apart that the very tie of friendship will readily be forgotten by us both."

"Florence, do not say that!" he entreats, believing in his turn that she alludes to her coming marriage with his cousin. "And do not be angry with me; but I would sak you to consider long and earnestly the step you have in view. Remember, it is a bond that once sealed, can never be cancelled."

"A bond! I do not follow you," exclaims Florence, bewildered.

"Ah, you will not trust me; you will not confide in me!"

"I have nothing to confide," persists Florence, still deeply puzzled.

"Well, let it rest so," returns Adrian, now greatly wounded at her determined reserve, as he deems it. He calls to mind all Mrs. Talbot had said about her slyness, and feels disheartened. At least he has not deserved distrust at her hands. "Promise me, he entreats at last, "that if you are ever in danger, you will accept my help."

"I promise," she replies faintly. Then, trying to rally her drooping spirits, she continues, with an attempt at a smile, "Tell me that you too will accept mine should you be in danger. Remember, the mouse once rescued the lion!"—and she smiles again, and glances at him with a touch of her old archness.

"It is a bargain. And now you will rest here awhile until you feel quite restored to calmness?"

"But you must not remain with me!" Florence urges hurriedly. "Your guests are awaiting you. Probably"—with a faint smile—"your partner for this waltz is wondering impatiently wondering what has become of you."

"I think not," says Adrian, returning her smile. "Fortunately I have no one's name on my card for this waltz. I say fortunately, because I think"—glancing at her tenderly—"I have been able to bring back the smiles to your face sooner than would have been the case had you been left to brood over your trouble, whatever it may be."

"There is no trouble," declares Florence, in a somewhat distressed fashion, turning her head restlessly to one side. "I wish you would dispossess yourself of that idea. And do not stay here, they,—every one, will accuse you of discourtesy if you absent yourself from the ball-room any longer."

"Then, come with me," says Adrian. "See, this waltz is only just beginning; give it to me."

Carried away by his manner, she lays her hand upon his arm, and goes with him to the ball-room. There he passes his arm around her waist, and presently they are lost among the throng of whirling dancers, and both give themselves up for the time being to the mere delight of knowing that they are together.

Two people, seeing them enter thus together, on apparently friendly terms, regard them with hostile glances. Dora Talbot, who is coquetting sweetly with a gaunt man of middle age, who is evidently overpowered by her attentions, letting her eyes rest upon Florence as she waltzes past her with Sir Adrian, colors warmly, and, biting her lip, forgets the honeyed speech she was about to bestow upon her companion, who is the owner of considerable property, and lapses into silence, for which the gaunt man is devoutly grateful, as it gives him a moment in which to reflect on the safest way of getting rid of her without delay.

Dora's brow grows darker and darker as she watches Florence, and notes the smiles that lights her beautiful face as she makes some answer to one of Sir Adrian's sallies. Where is Dynecourt, that he has not been on the spot to prevent this dance, she wonders. She grows angry, and would have stamped her little foot with impatient wrath at this moment but for the fear of displaying her vexation.

As she is inwardly anathematizing Arthur, he emerges from the throng, ation.

As she is inwardly anathematizing and, the dance, being at an end, reminds Miss Delmaine that the next is his.

Florence unwillingly removes her hand from Sir Adrian's arm, and lays it upon Arthur's. Most disdainfully she moves away with him, and suffers him to lead her to another part of the room. And when she dances with him it is with evident reluctance, and he knows from the fact that she visibly shrinks from him when he encircles her waist with her arm.

Sir Adrian, who has noticed none of these symptoms, going up to Dora, solicits her hand for this dance.

"You are not engaged, I hope?" he says naxiously. It is a kind of wretched comfort to be near Florence's true friend. If not the rose, she has at least some connection with it.

"I am afraid I am," Dora responds, raising her limpid eyes to his. "Naughty man, why did you not come sooner? I thought you had forgotten me altogether, and got so tired of keeping barren spots upon my card for you."

"I couldn't help it—I was engaged. A man in his own house has always a bad time of it looking after the impossible people," says Adrian, evasively.

"Poor Florence! Is she so very impossible?" asks Dora, laughing, but intending to reproach him.

"I was not speaking of Miss Delmaine," says Adrian, flushing hotly. "She is the least impossible person I ever met. It is a privilege to pass one's time with her."

"Yet it is with her you have passed the last hour that you hint has been devoted to bores," returns Dora, quietly. This is a mere feeler, but she throws it out with such an air of certainty that Sir Adrian is completely deceived, and believes her acquainted with his tete-atete with Florence in the dimly-lighted anteroom.

"Well," he admits, coloring again, "your cousin was rather upset by the acting, and I stayed with her until she felt equal to joining us all again."

"Ah?" exclaims Dora, who knows all she wanted to know.

Fortune Telling

Does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health.

The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.

Womanly health when lost or impaired may generally be regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This Prescription has, for over 40 years, been curing delicate, weak, pain-wracked women, by the hundreds of thousands and this too in the privacy of their homes without their having to submit to indelicate questionings and offensively repugnant examinations.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as sacredly confidential. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Great Family Doctor Book, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition—1000 pages, answers in Plain English hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know about. Sent free, in plain wrapper to any address on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, or in cloth binding for 50 stamps.

I'm the Cream of the West Miller, and I'll tell you what I'll do—I'll guarantee your next batch of bread

I WILL guarantee it to rise away up out of the pans, and make as delicious bread as you ever tasted. The loaves will be the biggest and most wholesome you ever baked with the same amount of flour. I'll guarantee it or you get back the money you paid for the flour! Now see:

Just go to your grocer and buy a bag of Cream of the West Flour. Take it home and bake it up.

Give it a trial.

Give it a couple of trials. Your oven or yeast might not be just right the first time.

Now when you give it a fair trial, if you honestly feel that you have not had splendid satisfaction with Cream of the West Flour, return the unused portion of the bag and get your money back.

Just tell the store man your bread didn't come out right and you want your money back as guaranteed.

It's not the grocery man who loses. It doesn't come out of his pocket. It is the Campbell Milling Company, Limited, of Toronto, who pay, and they are satisfied to pay if you'll be satisfied to try Cream of the West Flour.

Ask your store-keeper about this guarantee. He knows. He will tell you. Try a bag next baking day.

Baroness Macdonald

A cablegram from London, England, of Oct. 5th, says that Baroness Macdonald, wife of the late Sir John Macdonald, in commenting on the recent elections in Canada, shows that she still takes great interest in Canadian affairs. She said: "I hadn't dared to hope for such a sweeping answer from the people of Canada to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's attempt to separate Canada from the Empire and, by his reciprocity policy, to pave the way for annexation and absorption. I feared not only that lures of certain advantages, undoubted advantages, which Canada in her high loyalty has so grandly ignored, but the influence of American money, sure to be freely used to secure, if possible, the policy America desired to see fully carried out. The Imperial policy to which my husband in his long, strenuous life was entirely devoted has been magnificently justified, sustained and carried by the rout of the party he had ever fought against, even to the last.

"His voice was silenced 21 years ago, and his powerful personal influence has gone for ever, but I feel that he yet speaks as I read of the frantic cheers and the congratulations which greeted the success of his Imperial policy."

East Hastings

The result of the elections, as published in The Intelligencer, shows a majority of 1066 for Mr. Northrup out of a total vote polled of 4,732. Every municipality gave a majority for Mr. Northrup except the village of Madoc, which recorded for Mr. Clark a majority of four, which the result of certain pressure which was brought to bear upon retainers. A notable feature in this contest is that Mr. Clark had, in the township in which he lives and which he represents as Reeve in the County Council, a majority of 18 recorded against him out of a total vote recorded of 84. This is the municipality in which it was predicted Mr. Northrup would not receive a single vote. This fact is evidence sufficient to prove that the intelligent voters of the municipality considered country before personal friendship, a principle that should govern and actuate every voter.

Yankee Cheek

Read the following, cut from the New York Times, one of the leading journals in the United States, and an opinion can be formed of the arrogant and patronizing manner in which our neighbors treat Canadians. The statesmen and journalists of the United States treat Canadians as if they were residents of States of the Union and subject to their dictum in all matters of trade and international commerce, forgetting that we on the northern side of the line are just as free to govern ourselves in such manner as we may deem in our interest, as they are in the United States. The sooner they realize this fact the better.

When Canada thought it in her interest to continue the reciprocity treaty which was in existence in 1864-65, the United States denounced it, thinking at the time Canada would be crawling at their feet for admission into the Union. That having failed, their policy and tactics have changed, and now they hope to accomplish their object by seeking not only a renewal of the old reciprocity treaty, but an extension of it, and because Canada declines to accept their seductive overtures they become angry and insidiously and openly threaten us with dire consequences which will follow our refusal to be drawn into their net. Here is a sample of their ravings:

> "Politically Canada may be against having any "trade or truck" with the United States, but commercially it goes right along doing business at the old stand and in the old manner. For the first quarter of its fiscal year, covering part of the period of anti-reciprocity agitation, it increased its trade with the United States by $11,723,053, and decreased its trade with the British Empire by almost a million. The total trade for this quarter with the United States was $104,379,049 and with the Empire $71,645,995. Canada's loyalty to the Empire, therefore, was $32,733,054 below its loyalty to the United States and its own interests.
>
> "The exact measure of the Dominion's disloyalty to the Empire if there were no obstructions to trade with the United States may be left to the imagination. Evidently the Canadians distrusted their own loyalty, since they felt it necessary to impose restrictions to wandering in the pleasant paths of profit. They did not dare to leave their own fellow-citizens to trade or not to trade according to their discretion. It is a hollow sort of loyalty which is maintained by law. And a political connection which is based upon prohibition of action according to interests rests on sand. The quicker the Canadians reverse their action the better it will be for the Empire, not to say for the Canadians themselves. It is not desirable to plant the seeds of discontent, to foster the seeds of nationalism and race rivalry already doing work of a disintegrating sort."

You will be proud of the bread you'll make with PURITY FLOUR

AFTER seeing a batch of big, golden-crusted, snowy-white loaves, that you have baked from PURITY FLOUR, you will, indeed, be proud of your cooking-ability—and proud of your wisdom in deciding to pay the little extra it costs to procure such high-class flour. You will admit, too, that we are justified in the pride we take in milling this superb flour.

PURITY FLOUR

"More bread and better bread"

PURITY FLOUR is milled exclusively from the best Western hard wheat—the world's finest. More than that, PURITY FLOUR consists entirely of the high-grade portions of the wheat. The low-grade portions are separated and excluded during the PURITY process of milling. Such high-class flour, of course, expands more in the baking. It makes "more bread and better bread."

It makes lighter, flakier pastry, too, if you just take the precaution to add more shortening. On account of its unusual strength PURITY FLOUR, for best results, requires more shortening than ordinary flour.

Progressive dealers, everywhere, sell PURITY FLOUR and take pride in recommending it.

Add PURITY FLOUR to your grocery list right now. 106

Read the Truth About Osteopathy

(By Dr. Jepson, Osteopath.)

WHAT IS IT?

It is a system of treatment of disease that has met with such remarkable success in the last fifteen years that it has attracted widespread attention throughout the United States, Canada and some European countries.

It cannot be clearly defined in a single sentence, and since there are so many mistaken ideas concerning it, some explanation is due the public.

Its name is not descriptive. Derived from two Greek words, "Osteon," bone, and "pathos," suffering, its etymology is at first sight really misleading. The word was selected because the bony framework is the support and protection of all the more delicate parts and any mal-adjustment of it, especially of any portion of the spinal column ,produces such a disturbance of nerve action, or circulation, or both, that the consequences are of the greatest importance. The correction of any displacements, however slight, the stimulation of circulation where it has been hindered, the removal of any pressure on nerves is the work of the osteopath, and the science which combines the knowledge of the correct manipulations to do this, together with the knowledge necessary to locate the cause, and the proper use of diet and other conditions favoring the recovery to a normal condition, is Osteopathy.

How It Began.

Dr. A. T. Still, a physician of the regular school of practice, began, at the close of the Civil War, in which he had served as surgeon, devoting especial attention to the study of anatomical adjustment and its relation to health. For several years he gave a great deal of attention to reducing dislocations of hip and shoulder and achieved a great reputation. He found so many cases of paralysis in nerves that had been pressed up on by dislocated bones, that it occurred to him that partial dislocations would produce, not complete paralysis but inactivity and loss of power. He saw that the stomach, liver, lungs, in fact every organ receiving nerves from the spine, might be impaired by interference with spinal nerves from slight displacements; and that blood vessels might in the same manner have part of their supply cut off, and either the nerve centres from which the organs were supplied, or the organs themselves be deprived of part of their nourishment. The consequent weakness being sufficient to make the organ sluggish and inactive quite subject to the lodgment of disease-producing bacteria, would become the cause of disease. To cure the disease it was necessary to correct the condition and he developed the system which he named Osteopathy.

Its Development.

Hundred of people came from various parts of the United States for treatment; and, advertised by those who were cured, still other hundreds came, until he found it necessary to train assistants, and in 1892 he started a school. Since that time about 8,000 graduates have been sent out from the various schools that have sprung up, laws recognizing the system have been passed in forty-three States, two territories and in the colony of Hawaii, and B.C., Canada; and many thousands of people among the most discriminating and thoughtful members of society have approved the treatment after observing, or experiencing the result.

What People Say of It.

The following have been selected among hundreds equally as strong by people equally as prominent:

Hon. Lon. V. Stevens, Governor of Missouri, in replying to some who criticised him for signing the Osteopathic bill, said: "The science of Osteopathy assists in relieving suffering humanity and I do not think I erred in signing the bill."

Hon. H. F. Pingree, Governor of Michigan, who signed the bill legalising Osteopathy in that State said after a thorough and careful official investigation: "Osteopathy is a science entitled to all respect and confidence as a distinct advance in medicine. I know that it is doing a vast amount of good in relieving suffering and deformity that is not amenable to benefit from drug medicine."

Hon. T. A. Briggs, Governor of North Dakota, when importuned by the medical board not to sign the bill legalising Osteopathy in his state said "Osteopathy has helped me. It has also done good in my family and will hurt no one. The bill has passed both Houses and I will sign it."

Hon. John P. Altgeld, Governor of Illinois, after taking several months treatment and having his wife treated said, "I am indebted to Osteopathy for great good to both Mrs. Altgeld and myself. When prescriptions and drgus were as ineffectual as empty words it came to our rescue and did what other things had failed to do. Honor those to whom honor is due."

Chicago Times-Herald: "Osteopathy holds laurels for the student and for the practitioner, not equalled, in my judgment, in any other field on earth on account of its many cures without drugs were as ineffectual as empty opportunity of an epoch!"

Hon. J. Crout, Governor of Vermont, when the Osteopathic bill passed the Legislature in his state, said "Osteopathy has been tried by the leading men and women of our state and they all testify to its merit. We will give it a chance."

Hon. L. M. Shaw, Governor of Iowa, who signed the Osteopathic bill in that state, said: "I have heard a great deal about Osteopathy and talked with a great many who have taken Osteopathic treatment and I am fully convinced that it is a rational system of healing."

Hon. B. McMillan, Governor of Tennessee, who signed the Osteopathic bill in that state, said: "The bill legalizing Osteopathy in this state passed both Houses almost unanimously. It is one of the greatest discoveries of the times."

Gov. Edwin C. Smith, Governor of Vermont is an ardent admirer of Osteopathy. "My experience with Osteopathy has been very gratifying. It should be legalized in every state in the Union."

Opie Reid, America's well known writer and editor of Carter's Monthly, "My attention was first called to Osteopathy by a friend whose wife was cured of insanity. Closely following, I knew of a prominent business man who was cured of paralysis. It regenerated me. I have added reading to observation and I honestly believe it to be one of the most wonderful discoveries of any age. I would recommend any man, not too old, who is dissatisfied with his profession—I would advise every young physician to study Osteopathy."

Ex-Gov. Wm. F. Dillingham, of Vermont, was an active advocate for legislative action. He said: "I have employed practitioners of that school to treat members of my family and have been particularly pleased with results. I firmly believe that this practice is based on scientific principles, and is an advance on medical science."

Hon. John R. Tanner, Governor of Illinois, who signed the bill legalizing Osteopathy in that state, said: "The state medical board has been fighting the osteopaths long enough. There is no doubt in my mind that Osteopathy will reach and cure many chronic troubles that medicine will have little or no effect on. This is testified to by men and women in the highest walks of life and from all over the state."

Mrs. W. M. Springer, wife of Congressman Springer—afterwards Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Appeals, Indian Territory: "I can never say enough in praise of Osteopathy. It relieved me from unbearable invalidism. I have seen it do the same for scores of others. I believed before I tried it that it was a scientific method, and I am convinced that Osteopathy is rational, scientific and wonderful. It will be the greatest blessing to the world."

Not Massage or Swedish Movement

No; it is not massage; it is not Christian Science; it is not Swedish movement. It may use some movements similar to other systems, but is based upon a different theory and is essentially different. Its practitioners are trained to diagnose the case, as well as treat it. The masseur, who does not know how to diagnose, treats the case, that the doctor, who does not know how to treat has diagnosed. That is one difference.

The Osteopath seeks the cause at some particular point, the masseur, or Swedish operator, gives a general stimulating treatment, and does not recognize the possibility of spinal lesions or certain other mal-adjustments which the Osteopath has been trained to find and correct.

How We Treat.

The treatment is chiefly by means of manipulations; but diet, hot and cold applications, antiseptics, exercises, careful nursing and such hygienic means as are available to all schools of practice are taught and used by Osteopaths. There is no exposure of the body, except in such examinations as all schools of practice find necessary to locate diseased conditions.

Not Too Severe.

The osteopath adjusts his treatment to the state of his patient as every other physician does. Very young children, feeble or aged people may be treated, if with proper care, with great benefit. A patient may feel worse after a treatment, and yet be benefited in the long run. He may feel worse, and, something else may be responsible; but an osteopathic treatment does not injure the most delicate.

Effects Permanent.

The effects are permanent because the treatment restores the normal condition. The body is an automatic machine. When its parts are properly adjusted it will run without drugs or artificial stimulants of any kind. Surround it with proper climatic and dietetic conditions, with suitable exercise, and there will be very little illness. But the Osteopath does not issue insurance against every ill after he has treated a patient once. Many may bring back old conditions or produce new ones and need treatment again. People take medicine whenever they think they need it. The results of osteopathic treatment are permanent, but the body will have to be kept in proper condition after health is restored. There is no magic about a treatment that can go home with a patient and keep him out of draft, sit by him at the table and prevent excessive eating, hold him up on a slippery sidewalk, prevent over indulgence or dissipation and take such universal charge that he will never be ill—but when it benefits or cures there is as much permanence as can be acquired by human agency in this mortal life.

How Long Will It Take?

That depends on the case. It will pay to take all the time necessary for to stop half way is poor policy. Do not expect a chronic condition of years' standing to be cured in a week. There are conditions like a cold, a touch of sciatica, an acute attack of tonsilitis, a twinge of neuralgia or rheumatism, and many others which will need only a few treatments; but people who have taken medical treatment for years without success are often cured in a few weeks.

What Will My Family Doctor Say?

Some oppose it, of course. Will your banker send you to another bank to make deposits? Will your tailor send you to a competitor? Your doctor is not treating you for his health. He has had the first chance. He has done all he can—now give osteopathy a chance.

Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) was trying to persuade a friend to take treatment of a New York osteopath, "But I'm afraid my family physician will not like it," said his friend, "Oh, well," said Mr. Clemens, 'if you want to die to accommodate Dr. C.— that's a different thing. But if you want to get well just ask Dr. C.— to excuse you for a while, and take some osteopathic treatment."' The combined humor and logic won the day and a great financier was added to the list of friends of osteopathy.

Osteopathy has won its way on merit. It had not the prestige of wealth, or reputation, or even organization behind it. It began in obscurity and won its friends by its work. It has not been advertised into prominence. The papers are not filled with advertisements about it now. The fact that it so often gets results where medicine fails is what has caused it to reach prominence as a science of healing. Fads are a result of advertising and soon die. It is now over fifteen years since a school of osteopathy was established and more than twice as many years since Dr. Still worked out the system. It is taught systematically by several schools. It has about 8,000 practitioners, it has won its way against the most powerful opposition of a profession entrenched behind special legislation, until this legislation has been modified in forty-three states, two territories, and the colony of Hawaii, and B.C., Canada, and I hope to see it in Ontario and all over Canada. The public has accepted it. Where it has been longest known, it is best supported and has most adherents. Ridicule has not checked it. Its practitioners have been annoyed by prosecutions based on technicalities, backed by medical organizations, but osteopathy has won its way so fairly that it remains to-day stronger than ever.

Education of Osteopaths.

Osteopaths are required to take a course of at least twenty-seven months in three separate years. They have practical work in diagnosis for eighteen months, and experience and observation in practice for the same time. There are hospitals connected with the schools and clinical advantages of a high order. The careful physical examination gives a peculiar fingers give great delicacy of touch advantage. The constant use of the fingers give great delicacy of touch and is of great aid in diagnosis. They study pathology, histology, anatomy, physiology, chemistry, surgery, obstetrics, gynecology, and in fact, all the subjects of a general medical education, except drug therapeutics. No one need fear that they will not find out what is the matter and know how to treat it, and when you need drugs.

Osteopathy is so often misrepresented that its friends are continually compelled to explain, hence this article.

It is comparatively new and many do not know what diseases it treats successfully.

Osteopaths do not advertise, only to explain its use when others are opposing it. The way you or your friends will find out what osteopathy will do is to get the statements of a reliable osteopath or its patients, who have both training and experience and know.

Do You Not Need Drugs Too?

Read what eminent medical authorities say about the necessity of drugs.

"There is no scientific dogma better established than this, that the living organism is in itself adequate to the cure of all its curable disorders."—Sam'l O. L. Potter, A.M., M.D., M. R.C.P., London, etc.

"To give less and less of medicine is the tendency of the times."

"A doctor will give more medicine in the first year than in the next three; he will give more the fifth year than in the next ten; and the better doctor he becomes the less he gives, and I suppose if we would become perfect doctors, we would give very little."—Austin Flint, Sr., M.D.

"The physician cannot consent to the view that a machine may go wrong without it becomes structurally wrong."—Byron Robinson, of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Chicago.

"The drug which disposes to reverie rather than work which makes us feel well when we are not well, destroys the sanity of life. The man who would see clearly, think truthfully and act effectually must avoid them all."—David Starr Jordan, Ph. D., LL.D.

"There is a physical refreshment, mental rest, and moral tone in osteopathy's tonic treatment for brain workers and those nervously overwrought.—Opie Read.

"The day is coming when the practice of osteopathy will not only gain real recognition, but will be considered one of the greatest achievements of the nineteenth century."—Judge C. C. Cole, ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Iowa.

"Osteopathy must rank as one of the most important measures known for the relief of all forms of chronic ailments. In obstetrics it is winning quite a reputation for enabling women to bear their children with less pain, less frequent laceration and with less hemorrhage than without its aid. In eye, ear and throat work it has accomplished wonderful things."—Dr. E. H. Pratt, critical surgeon, Chicago.

"That the Lord of all should have implanted in man a recuperative power from the accidents and mischances of his precarious existence, appears to me to supply an evidence of His merciful and unspeakable love, too lightly considered."—The late John Hilton, F.R.S., F.R.C.S., President of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, of England.

Drugs as stimulants and sedatives make a person feel better, but do not remove the cause. They have been over used. People now have lost faith in them and look to other methods for results, thus you see medicine has only its place.

All curable diseases are amenable to osteopathic treatment. There are few incurable diseases, but many incurable cases. Tuberculosis is often fatal, but many cases yield to osteopathy. Locomotor ataxia is often incurable, but its progress may be checked and a good measure of health often restored by osteopathy.

"Fevers!" What! Can you treat fevers?" Yes, certainly. Many fevers are self-limited and medicine does not cure them. "But some are caused by a microbe; how can you reach them? Take malaria, for instance, how can you check malaria without quinine?" In answer, let me ask a question how does quinine check malaria? It is a stimulant, it increases the activity of the liver and other glands and their secretions and the renewed cell activity destroy the bacteria. The osteopath can increase glandular activity so that the bacteria are destroyed.

Disease Successfully Treated.

Each case must be examined and the diagnosis must depend upon conditions found. No osteopath will pretend to cure all cases of all the following diseases or remove all the symptoms named. But in certain cases that may be done by any good osteopath. If your case is one that is likely to yield to treatment, the osteopath will tell you so.

The following are among the diseases which osteopathy has successfully treated:

Spinal Disorders.

Lame back, weak or stiff spines, spinal curvatures, slipped vertebra, railway spines, spinal concussion, wry neck, lumbago, intercostal neuralgia, and stooped shoulders. The progress of Pott's disease can usually be arrested and the patient greatly benefited.

WHAT OLD FOLKS NEED

SOME FOLKS ARE YOUNGER AT 65 THAN OTHERS ARE AT 40 YEARS.

So many people begin saying "Well, I'm getting old now," about the time they reach 60 and then let themselves act old—and the fact is that they could stay young for a long time, in all but years.

We have seen men and women of 65 who were really younger than some are at 40 years; were more active and more up to date in everything.

When your energy begins to fail build up yourself with our delicious cod liver and iron remedy, Vinol, which is a wonderful tonic and strengthener for all weak persons.

A gentleman of Allentown, Pa., says: "I am 76 years of age and find Vinol a great medicine. It is wonderfully strengthening and comforting to me." (Name on request.)

C.M.A. Members Rejoice at Defeat of Reciprocity.

It Means a Splendid Commercial and Industrial Year For Canada, Says President C. H. Rowley In His Address—Few Strikes and Great Progress Throughout the Year—Fire Risk Rates Are Lower.

Toronto, Oct. 11.—Election day echoes permeated nearly every address at the opening session of the annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, which commenced yesterday at the King Edward. It seemed as if every speaker was imbued with optimism regarding the future of Canadian manufacturing interests, and in this connection the defeat of reciprocity was referred to time and time again as the best stimulus that the manufacturing interests of Canada could by any possible means have received.

In his annual review, the president, C. H. Rowley, emphasized the fact that intense national feeling had been displayed by Canadians in the recent elections, and his forecast of a splendid industrial and commercial future for the Dominion seemed to voice the feeling of everyone present. The past year has been a year of peace within the empire, industrial strikes in Canada have been few and far between, immigration has increased by leaps and bounds, the country has developed in every field of endeavor, the output of mine, field and forest being wonderfully increased. As a result, the people of the Dominion have been actively employed, and wages were never so good as now.

President Rowley's address was one of optimism throughout, and his comprehensive survey of the whole field of Canadian politics, industry and development brought forth the hearty applause of all the members present.

In every convention the opening day usually sees a rather slim attendance and there was no exception to this rule when the opening session commenced yesterday morning. About 150 members were in attendance when the president called the meeting to order, but the vacant chairs filled rapidly as the session progressed.

The prevailing rates for fire risks were favorably commented on by R. D. Fairbairn, chairman of the insurance committee. These rates are appreciably lower than in the years immediately following the great Toronto fire. The development of business in the northwest, as well as New Ontario and Quebec, where high rates were in force, had been the cause of a relatively high rate for the whole Dominion. Recent reductions on manufacturing risks were, therefore, greater than they appeared from the Government's official figures. It was to improvement in the risks that the lower rates were largely due, the members having shown ready response to the suggestions of the committee in this regard. In addition, the insurance companies were giving full recognition in cases where improvements had been made.

As regards the legality of the insurance associations, as alleged combines, the Parliamentary and insurance committees in pursuance of the resolution passed at the last annual convention, reported that nothing could be done at present. The result of their investigations had shown that the cases now before the Supreme Court must first be passed upon, before any action be taken. Regarding licensed and unlicensed insurance, the report gave returns of $179,860,576 carried in Canada by unlicensed companies; $1,815,289,605 carried by licensed companies, in one year, an indication that over 90 per cent. of the total was taken by licensed offices.

The report referred to the recent consolidation of the mutual companies, and recommended the re-election of G. M. Murray to the board of the Central Canada Co.

Suggestion was also made that the convention reaffirm its desire that the Provincial Governments should provide for the appointment of marshals to record and investigate the country's fire waste, and that this be communicated to the Conservation Commission.

The annual appropriation of $1,000 for the expenses of the department was asked for as usual. The adoption of this report was seconded by W. K. George, and carried by the association.

The assets of the association, according to the financial statement, are $31,917.37, and liabilities $12,211.39. The revenue for the year consisted of $35,099.87 from members' fees, $1,315.75 for interest, $5,950.36 from Industrial Canada, $2,921.34 from the Trade Index, and a surplus from the Western excursion $234.79, a total of $45,522.11. The expenses, including $15,000 to the Tariff Education Fund was $47,508.11. The estimated revenue receipts for this year are: Membership fees, $36,000; interest, $1,000; Industrial Canada, $5,000; total, $42,000.

The membership seemed about equally divided between a desire to increase the rates and a determination to keep the fees as they are at present.

EULOGIES OF TREATY.

Conference Delegates Praise Anglo-American Compact.

Toronto, Oct. 11.—"We hail with pleasure and profound gratitude, the deepening and growing of good-will and peace among the leading nations of Europe and America.

"The noble work of The Hague Conference, as promoted by the federal council of the Church of Christ in America, the Church of England and the Free Church Council in England, is already bearing fruit in this arbitration treaty, which agrees to submit questions of national honor to the proper tribunal for arbitration.

"We heartily endorse this signal advance in the interest alike of peace and universal brotherhood. We strongly urge the Christian nations represented in the Ecumenical Conference speedily to take necessary legislative action to consummate the arbitration treaty which has been signed by the representatives of the British Empire and the United States of America.

"By every proper means we will seek peace and promote it in His holy name, Who is the Prince of Peace."

Henry Haigh, John MacLaren, Earl Cranston, E. R. Hendrix, A. W. Wilson.

With a dignity befitting the great principles for which the Ecumenical Conference stands, the above resolution was presented and unanimously adopted at the afternoon session yesterday.

The chairman, Bishop E. R. Hendrix, D.D., of the Methodist Church South, took advantage of the early usages of Methodist conventions and moved the adoption of the resolution. In speaking on the resolution he praised President Taft and representatives of the British Empire for advocating and successfully carrying out a peace pact between the two nations which makes war between them impossible.

Ald. T. Swape, J.P., brought forth vigorous applause when he characterized the late King Edward as "The Peacemaker," and the act of President Taft in promoting a peace pact between the United States and England as "the most courageous" ever put forth by an official during the history of the world."

He said the war system had been and was still the most stubborn obstacle which the church had to face. Dr. Henry Hayes, in seconding the resolution, said he hailed with joy the fact that England and the United States of America had clasped hands in a peace pact making war impossible.

"I say impossible, because the two great nations agree to submit all questions of honor between themselves to arbitration, and any other nations will think twice before they challenge that compact."

The resolution was seconded by Sir Robert Perks on behalf of the laymen of England, and as a commercial man, during which he said the churches and the Christian world were entitled to much credit for the consummation of this long-worked-for peace pact, "but," he said, "let us not forget that two of the largest Jewish banking houses in the country gave the pact their sanction. And," he continued, "no war between nations can be conducted without the assistance of the financial institutions of the banking interests of the country."

Rev. George Elliott, D.D., came in with a large share of praise for the two Governments, saying other nations must of necessity follow their lead. "For Christian thought and action," he said, "is bound to eventually rule in world's things."

Royalists Have Two Columns.

Lisbon, Oct. 11.—The Royalists expect another column now advancing through the Minho Valley to create a diversion and lead to a division of the Government troops, which are now concentrating. The Monarchists keep their line of communication with Spain open and are able to receive recruits and supplies from sources which the Republicans cannot attack without a quarrel with Spain. The invaders are able to obtain plenty of food from the countryside, but few men join them.

Buried With Civic Honors.

Ottawa, Oct. 11.—With mounted constables leading, eight special pallbearers, representatives of the civic and his mill interest, and five hundred city corporation employes, including police and firemen, and 300 mill men marching four abreast, the funeral of Controller Davidson was held yesterday afternoon. The Governor-General's Foot Guards' band played.

Royalists Win a Fight.

Lisbon, Portugal, Oct. 11.—The Royalists entrenched near the Galician frontier were attacked by the Republican forces Monday. They responded with a hot fire from behind rocks and wooded heights, compelling the Government troops to retire. The Republican artillery was quite useless.

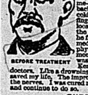
THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS



BEFORE TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:
"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE W. M. S.

The 21st annual convention of the Belleville District Women's Missoinary Society of the Methodist Church was held at Wallbridge church on Wednesday, October 11th, 1911, the morning session opening at ten o'clock.

The church was very attractive with flowers and red berries, and though it was dull the building was full to the doors.

Mrs. Denyes, District Organiser, occupied the chair, with Mrs. J. H. P. Young, of Belleville, with her on the platform. After the doxology and invocation, Ephesians iv. was read, followed by an anthem by the choir. Mrs. Mowatt, Belleville, was appointed Secretary, and Mrs. J. G. Sills, of Foxboro and Miss Gladys Ward, of Plainfield were appointed press reporters.

Then came roll call and reports from auxiliaries, which are always of interest, and showed generally an increase in membership and interest, many planning, if not already having done so, a campaign day on the last Wednesday of September. Several mentioned supporting either a girl or cot in a school or hospital.

Mrs. (Rev.) Sanderson sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," and this selectoin was much appreciated.

Mrs. Carruthers, representing the Presbyterian church and Miss Adams the Baptist, led in prayer and Bible reading, from Matthew 28, dwelling especially on "Be not afraid; fear not," words similar to these being found 70 times in the Bible. Pray for divine power to hasten the kingdom. The Rev. Mr. Cooke closed the morning session with the benediction.

Promptly at 1.30 the President opened the meeting with hymn 404—"We have heard the joyful sound," followed with prayer by Mrs. J. Phillips. The names of members who had been called to a higher service were read, and a couple of verses of "Give me the wings of faith to rise," were sang. Then came the reports of circles and bands, which were left over from the morning session. Albert College had a very bright report, 44 members supporting 3 girls in a boarding school, two old members having gone to the foreign field. After the close of the reports, Mrs. Massey, a former beloved President, was accorded an ovation on being called to the platform. Then Miss C. Lane gave a touching reading, describing the change a Germain maid wrought in an exact housekeeper's views regarding conventions, ladies' aids and delegates, owing to the influence the "Christ woman" in the person of the minister's wife, had on the cheery, practical German maid. Mrs. (Rev.) Cook sang with feeling, "Hark! the Voice of Jesus Calling." The praise service was one voicing the consecration of devoted women to a great cause, as one expressed it, "We don't do or give enough. What we do or give we must do now to be effective."

The question drawer was conducted by Mrs. Young, with the assistance of various others. Mrs. Massie gave the welcome news that two life members had joined the Society and that an income of $25,000 was needed this year owing to thirteen young ladies offering themselves for the work. We were to work as though all depended on us, and pray as though all depended on God. The collection was taken up and a grand total of $50.00 being the proceeds of the dinner and donation and collection, with one new annual member. Mrs. W. W. Chown, who was to have delivered an address, was not present, but Mrs. Hunter ably filled her place in a brilliant address on "What I saw, in Japan" illustrated with curios from that country. She was the first mother to visit her daughter who was a missionary there, but now in China. Mrs Hunter said there were no improvements in agriculture, and the streets of Tokio, where she was were very narrow, being only 6 feet in width. The streets had open drains with no sewers and the stores open on the street. The people in Japan wear wooden shoes and though they are a silent people, they make up for it with the clatter of their shoes on the walks. The Japanese people are great florists, and Mrs. Hunter told of an Iris garden she saw with purple and pink iris which the Japanese invented by mixing the white with colored fluid. She described a full course Japanese dinner she had the honor of attending. She described also, the school at Tokio with its 225 pupils who attend, the princess being one of its past members. So many have asked her: 'Are the missionaries doing any real good?' She told of the people who go out there to do business and do a great deal of harm by their evil conduct, as the Japanese say: 'They are Christians, arn't they?' One good result of the Tokio school is that the girls in it act as teachers in the 13 or 15 street schools where about 30 attend each one. Owing to the lateness of the hour Mrs. Hunter's intensely interesting address was cut short, and the Secretary's notes were read. Miss Munroe sent her regrets at not being able to be present. A letter, congratulating Mrs. Hunter on the marriage of her daughter, though they would feel her loss to them, was read, from the council of the W.M.S. in Japan. It was moved by Mrs. Young, of Belleville, that the kind invitation of the Shannonville Society to meet there next year be accepted. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Jos. Ward, of Plainfield, each delegate in her heart thanking the Wallbridge ladies for their kind hospitality and inspiration of the church, where so successful a convention was held.

IN OLD GRAND TRUNK DAYS

Mr. William Wainwright V. P., and Controller of Railways, Tells of Beginning of System

A busy man is Mr. William Wainwright, vice-president and comptroller of the Grand Trunk Railway, but occasionally he finds time to give a picture of early railway life in Montreal and the country generally.

"There had been originally the St. Lawrence and Champlain road, which was commenced long before the Grand Trunk, and was, in fact, the only bit of line in Canada at the time, I believe," said Mr. Wainwright. "This ran from Montreal to Lachine, and connected there at Caughnawaga, if I recollect right, when the passengers were taken to St. Johns on the way to the States.

Hon. Jas. Ferrier.

"That bit of line, which had the distinction of opening up the railway business in the Dominion, had among its sponsors the Hon. James Ferrier. When the Grand Trunk was organized it took over this piece of line, and incorporated it with its newly planned system, which was naturally slow in developing, as the country was young and the population small.

"It is sometimes said that the first manager of the Grand Trunk was Mr. Brydges. This is not correct. There was a succession of managers before Mr. Brydges took hold. There was Mr. Bidder first, who, when he came out, reduced wages by about 10 or 15 per cent.; then there was Mr. Reith, and after him Mr. Walter Shanley, the well-known civil engineer."

Managers Handicapped.

"The early managers were not given absolute power?"

"No, and that was the trouble. They were permitted no initiative by the board, which met in London. The early managers could not order a dozen lead pencils without consulting London, whereas Mr. Hays exerts plenary power on the spot, carrying out the large undertakings, adopting the far-seeing policy necessary for the exigency, and then asks the board in London to foot the bills.

Old-Time Rails.

"The system grew, too, though the old iron rails and the 5 ft. 6 guage, would now be laughed at. They were no laughing matter in the early sixties, for if you were travelling then to any extent, ten to one the train would leave the rails several times before you reached your destination.

Country Grew.

"The country was young; we had not got our population, as we have it now. It was little understood in the mother country; and, although farseeing men had faith in the ultimate development, that faith was not general.

"But when the Grand Trunk became solidly organized under Sir Edward Watkins, as present, with Mr. Brydges as general manager, as well as director, the face of things was changed. The work of extension began. Ontario was invaded. The main line was extended. Traffic grew. The road became a large factor in the development of the country. Population began to grow. The people began to appreciate the benefit of a system which was opening up the country and providing means for freight transportation.

"Mr. Brydges came from the Great Western to the Grand Trunk. He was an able man, but fettered by extraneous authority. Under his administration, however, the system grew and was greatly extended."

In the early days to which Mr. Wainwright referred the general manager of the Grand Trunk was inaccessible to the general public. Since then things are different.

JEWS HAD A TUMBLE.

Yesterday afternoon while a horse and waggon were passing rapidly along Pinnacle street, in the vicinity of Greenleaf's Garage, a front wheel became disconnected from the axle, causing a slump in that part of the vehicle, and sending the sons of Israel sprawling in the mud. Fortunately no one was injured.

A GASOLINE BLAZE.

At about 9 o'clock last evening an alarm of fire was sounded, but fortunately the service of the brigade was not required. It appears that some gasoline became ignited in a garage situated near the lower bridge, but by prompt action on the part of a young man named Boulter, who is connected with the establishment, the flames were smothered. Boulter had his right hand burned in his effort to put out the flames.

A QUIET WEDDING.

Last evening Mr. Rolla Logan, who is employed with the Steel Company of Canada, in this city, and Miss Lizzie Harris, also of this city, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed at the Tabernacle Church parsonage by the Rev. W. G. Clarke, B.A. The bridesmaid was Miss Jennie Symons, and the groomsman Mr. Norman Hall. After the ceremony a wedding supper was partaken of at the home of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Logan have a large circle of friends in the city who will wish for them a happy and prosperous journey through life.

DIED AT MILLBROOK.

A telegram received in the city this morning announced the death of Mr. John Bateson, which occurred at Millbrook last night. Deceased had been in failing health for some months and his demise was by no means unexpected. Mr. Bateson, who was about 30 years of age, was for some time a clerk in the Ritchie Company's store, and was a general favorite. He was of a genial disposition and obliging. Some months ago he was compelled through ill health to relinquish his position here. Of late he had been residing at Millbrook. Deceased was a member of the I.O.O.F. lodge. While in the city Mr. Bateson was an enthusiastic ball player, being identified with the Coleman Flats team. His demise is sincerely regretted. A widow and young son survive.

CARRIER PIGEON ESTRAY.

DRUNKS ASSESSED $5.

Before Magistrate Masson this morning Roy Graham and James Murray, two drunks, pleaded guilty to the charge preferred against them. In each case a fine of $5 was imposed.

DISMISSED WITH COSTS

Mr. McCarthy's appeal against the judgment given some time ago in his case against the Marsh & Henthorn Co., Ltd., was to-day heard at Toronto, and was dismissed with costs.

SLIPPED A WHEEL.

While ascending the Victoria Avenue hill this morning a local liquor house waggon dropped a rear wheel, causing the gear to become somwhat out of plumb. For about two hours a pile of sixteen cases of bottled beer in close proximity to St. Andrew's church created an interesting impression.

BAD BOYS' WORK.

A complaint has been made to the police that recently a number of windows have been broken in residences on Emily Street by boys who are evidently maliciously inclined. The matter is being investigated and if the boys' names are secured they will no doubt have to answer for their conduct.

SENTENCED FOR LIFE.

Peter Sherman Wagar, a farmer living in Camden Township, County of Lennox and Addington, was arraigned last Tuesday at Napanee Assize on a charge of rape, Hon. Mr. Justice Clute sentencing him for life. W. C. Mikel, K.C., was prosecutor for the Crown; E. Guss Porter, K.C., and W. G. Wilson acted for the prisoner.

C.P.R. LINE TO BELLEVILLE.

Information reached the city to-day that the C. P. R. have asked for tenders for the extending of their line from Perth to Belleville, taking in Parham Station. A New York telegram says: The Canadian Pacific Railway has come into the market for 25,000 tons additional of rails for early shipment. As the Dominion rail mills are overflowing and the rails are wanted for early shipment, the probability is that the contract will again go to Chicago mills, which have recently rolled 30,000 tons for Canada.

FIRE AT ROSSMORE.

At noon to-day a fire occurred in the village of Rossmore, Prince Edward county, resulting in the destruction of two residences. The flames originated in a frame house owned and occupeid by Mr. Marshall Gerow, and they could not be prevented from igniting Mr. Charles Clarke's house and adjoining buildings. Both buildings fell a prey to the devouring element. Considerable effects from both buildings were saved by neighbors who turned out to fight the fire as best they could. How the fire originated is not known. Both parties had insurance upon the buildings and contents.

A STEEL CURLING RINK.

A very enthusiastic meeting of curlers was held at Mr. Kerr's office last night. A subscription list to meet the expenses of erecting a steel rink and a club house was opened, and a respectable amount was raised. This undertaking, when complete, will be a credit to Belleville and deserves the hearty support of all curlers and others interested in seeing progressive and ornamental structures of this nature erected in our midst. This will, it is stated, be the first and only steel curling rink in the Dominion, and under these circumstances it is certainly an enterprise that all good citizens should support. The Intelligencer wishes it every success.

AMUSEMENTS

GRIFFIN'S OPERA HOUSE.

"The Arrival of Kitty" is a sparkling comedy, replete with merriment most wholesome and clean in every line. It is made up of a series of complications that are gradually worked out with ludicrous effects, and is further enlivened by pretty girls and original up-to-date musical numbers in every act. The fun centres in the arrival of Kitty Benders, a dashing vaudeville artist, at the fashionable Halcyon Hotel in the Catskill Mountains, the location of which enables the author of the comedy to work in many charming situations. Kitty will be at Griffin's Opera House, Friday, October 13. Kitty needs no introduction to the audiences of Belleville, as she has appeared here before and was highly praised and much appreciated by those who were fortunate enough to see her. Plan at Doyle's Drug Store to-day.

CURRENT COMMENT

A Borden Club has been formed in Laurier Ward, Montreal. Thus does time bring its changes.

One of the great evils that will be brought about by this Turko-Italian contest will be the revival of that long quiescent species the war correspondent.

Turkey bought three battleships of Germany at a marked-down sale, and yet the Kaiser is not giving much encouragement to the Porte in the present trouble.

Another dividend is to be paid by the Hudson Bay, of Cobalt, on October 14th, and it will be the usual 300 per cent., representing a disbursement of $23,283. This makes 18,700 per cent. paid by this company, or $1,451,307 in all.

The fire losses of Canada and the United States in September were $11,333,250, the smallest for the month in three years. The total for the nine months, however, is nearly $20,000,000 greater than for the same period of the last three years.

The Calgary Albertan points out that with the coming of Borden Canada will have had nine Premiers, and of these three from Nova Scotia. Macdonald, Mackenzie and Bowell were of Ontario; Abbott of Quebec; Thompson of Nova Scotia, Laurier of Quebec, and Borden of Nova Scotia. The nine have come from the three provinces and the other six provinces have not yet furnished a Premier.

The report of the Irish Intermediate Education Board for 1910 states that 13,092 scholars entered for examination; of these 8,711 were boys and 4,381 girls, the increase on the previous year's numbers being 4.3 per cent., in the case of boys and 6.8 for girls. Of those who entered 11,90 sat for the examinations, lasting ten days, and 6,394 passed. The percentage of those who passed was 53.7, being nearly two per cent. lower than last year.

La Vigie, of Quebec states that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has announced that when the time comes he will choose to sit for Quebec East and will give up the seat for Soulanges, for which he was also elected. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was declared elected for Quebec East after his opponent, as was declared by affidavit, had been paid $5,000 to sign a declaration withdrawing from the candidature.

The Borden Government asks no odds from its opponents, and we should be sorry for it if it did. They may prejudge it harshly, they may misrepresent it, they may nag it—but they can only hurt their own influence thereby, as long as the Government lives up to the standards of public virtue and to the policies laid down by Mr. Borden. An Opposition press may go on insisting that nothing good can come out of the Government but if the Government keeps giving accumulating practical proofs to the contrary, what boots the detraction? The people will accept the deeds of the Government, not the words of its unfair critics.—Mail and Empire.

The Woodstock Sentinel-Review one of the most reputable Liberal newspapers of the province, has the following sensible remarks concerning the new Cabinet: "We will all know more about the strength and the weakness of Mr. Borden's Cabinet a year from now than we do at present. Time is the great critic. The Cabinet contains some tested material; it contains a good deal that remains to be tested. It is only fair that opportunity should be afforded for a fair and thorough test. Every new Cabinet is an experiment. A man may have a brilliant reputation for individual efforts, and yet be a failure in team work; and on the other hand many a man has failed to make a reputation simply because he has lacked the opportunity. Patriotic citizens will hope for the best, comforting themselves with the assurance that Premier Borden's own character and energy are assets always to be counted upon."

ELECTIONS TO THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE ARE TO BE HELD IN DECEMBER

Sir James Whitney Announces Dissolution of Legislature.

At Cabinet Meeting the Ontario Government Decides to Save the Expense of Bye-Elections By Going at Once to the Country—Important Announcements to Be Made—General Shake Up In the Cabinet.

Toronto, Oct. 12.—Sir James Whitney has announced that in the near future the Ontario Legislative Assembly will dissolve and that a general election will be held during the early part of December. The exact date of dissolution has not yet been set, nor has the date of the elections.

The Cabinet Ministers held a long conference yesterday afternoon, and later the Premier handed out the following statement:

We have decided to dissolve the House in the near future, and I give this notice now, in order that there may be no suggestion that we desire to hurry the elections. The present Legislature has already existed longer than its predecessor and there are now ten vacant seats. The expense of bye-elections would be large—about $15,000—and this expense would have to be duplicated in less than a year did we not dissolve now.

There are several other very important reasons for our decision—reasons of vital importance to the province—which I shall lay before the public in the course of a week or ten days, or perhaps earlier.

Owing to the length of time necessary for the preparation of the voters' lists in unorganized districts, the polling cannot take place earlier than about the first or second week in December, and the issuing of the writs will be held over until the latest date possible, in order to facilitate the revision of the voters' lists in older Ontario.

I expect that the successor to Mr. Cochrane will be sworn in probably to-morrow.

As was forecasted, W. H. Hearst of the Soo will succeed Hon. Mr. Cochrane.

Many changes in the Cabinet are expected to follow. Hon. J. J. Foy, for some time has been slated for the bench. While the Laurier Government was in power this change was quite improbable, but now that the Conservatives are in control both at Ottawa and in the local House, the improbable has become not only possible, but most likely.

Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, has been mentioned for the office of Attorney-General, and being the man who comes next in seniority to the present Attorney-General, he will undoubtedly be given that portfolio.

The question arises who shall fill the office of Provincial Secretary should Hon. Mr. Hanna succeed Hon. Mr. Foy.

Two names have been mentioned for the office of Secretary. They are Hon. I. B. Lucas and T. W. McGarry. The whole matter, however, is only conjecture so far, and nothing definite will be known for some time.

Hon. A. J. Matheson, it is reported, will retire in the near future, owing to his failing health. The burden of the Provincial Treasurership is very heavy, and the colonel was forced to take a prolonged vacation during the past summer by reason of a general breakdown. It is hardly likely that he will be desirous of entering upon a campaign which will be followed by a long session.

Owing to Col. Matheson's long and excellent service in Government affairs he will probably be made a Senator, it is said: his many years of experience as Provincial Treasurer and in connection with other Government matters, point him out as a man who would make a strong member of the Senate.

Who the next Treasurer will be is not guessed at yet. The political prophets are silent regarding this portfolio.

GREAT MUSICAL TREAT AT THE TABERNACLE

A large audience gathered in the auditorium of the Tabernacle church last night and listened most attentively and with delight to a programme that was enchanting, especially so to lovers of music. The programme was provided by Gatty Sellars, the great English organist, composer, solo organist of the Queen's Hall, London, concert, and the Crystal Palace musical festival, and direct from the recent coronation of King George V. and Queen Mary. Mr. Short was prominent in the programme. He had been heralded as clever and entertaining, and he certainly came up to his high reputation. The "Church Triumphant" is one of his masterpieces and his rendition of it captivated the audience. This, the composer's most recent work, opens with a Choraleas, a theme representing the church. This is followed by a restless movement always increasing in passion, depicting the world in all gaiety and frivolity, and culminating in a trumpet fanfare as a note of victory. From afar, as though forgotten, is heard the church theme, pleading with the world to leave its sins behind. The world is loath to give up its pleasures, and reminiscences of its theme are heard in conjunction with that of the church. Its pleasures, however, are short-lived, for the church, steadliy increasing in power, rises supreme over its enemies. The climax is reached in the chorale calling for the full resources of the organ accompanied by the bells and a fanfare of trumpets proclaiming the dominant note of victory—the 'Church Triumphant." The other items on the programme were carried out harmoniously. It was an evening's entertainment which will be long remembered by those who were privileged to attend.

TAMPERING WITH SWITCHES

An investigation conducted by Superintendent A. J. Hills, of the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway into the Grafton accident on Monday evening has brought forth the startling intelligence that on more than one occasion construction train crews have found the switches at that point unlocked.

This points surely to one conclusion which is that someone not connected with the railway company has been meddling there. It would also seem to confirm the suspicions entertained by the officials of the C. N. O. at the time the derailment occurred that the apparatus had been tampered with a reasonably short time before the westbound train was due to pass that point.

A punishment terribly severe awaits the man who deliberately or otherwise interferes with the proper arrangement of such an essential piece of railway equipment. The Canadian Northern Ontario Railway would be doing no more than its duty in prosecuting such an occurrence to the limits of tis power. The mind hardly conceives of an intelligent person dastardly enough to trifle thus lightly with the well-being of the passengers on a railway train.

MOTHERS AND TEACHERS ON PRACTICAL PROBLEMS

That much has been accomplished by the Women's Institute is admitted and that more will be is evident from the extremely practical and interesting papers and discussions by practical women. At the meeting in the High School on Tuesday Mrs. J. Bell and Mrs. McFee, with Miss Mackay, principal of the Market School, as advisory member, were appointed to investigate the practicability of establishing a Day Nursery for the children of mothers who are occupied during the day in Belleville.

Full of good points was Mrs. D. V. Sinclair's paper on "Dressing School Girls for Health, Beauty and Economy." The health of girls in the critical age of the 'teens should be considered by adopting the clothing to the changing seasons, by insisting on suitable underwear, and well shod feet. Much ill health was due to wearing thin garments and stockings and low shoes suitable for July in October. A girl's love of beauty should be gratified by simple tasteful clothes adapted in color and style to the occasion.

The question of "Home work," as dealt with by Mrs. Armstrong and Miss Libby, B.A., proved so interesting that the discussion is to be continued at the next meeting. Mrs. Armstrong believed in a limited amount of homework as developing independent powers of thought. Too many social duties she thought the cause of overwork in students oftener than too much homework.

Miss Libby believed in "teaching more and scolding less." Many students, whose parents thoughtlessly allowed them to miss the beginning of the term or to attend irregularly, floundered hopelessly through the year in a vain effort to "catch up." Such of necessity had "too much homework" through no fault of the curriculum or the school.

Donning a felt hat doesn't necessarily indicate any lack of feeling for the melancholy straw.

NEW ROUTE FROM INDIA TO EGYPT

Great Britian May Shortly Have a Railroad Which Will Shorten Trip by Six Days

Arrangements have been made for furthering the project of a continuous and direct British railroad line from Egypt to the Indian frontier by way of Northern Arabia and Central Persia, and important developments may be expected at an early date.

The route has been well known for a long time to Anglo-Indian travellers and geographical experts to be the shortest and most direct line of access from the Mediterranean to the westernmost frontier stations of India, but other projected lines, traversing foreign spheres of influence, have monopolized public attention, and the practicability of securing a railroad line to India which shall be exclusively under British control has been thus thrust out of sight.

Another great advantage of the line referred to is that it will shorten the journey to India by six whole days, a saving far greater than could be obtained by any other conceivable route. It starts from the northern end of the Suez Canal at Port Said, and, running generally due east by way of the Gulf of Akaba, El Jauf, Basra, Shiraz, Kerman, Eastern Persia and Seistan, will close on to the present Indian railroad at Nushki. The entire length will be about 2,000 miles, while the sea route from Port Said to India is roughly 3,050 miles, a sufficient indication of the saving in mere mileage, to say nothing of the greater speed of the train as compared with the steamship.

The existing maps of Arabia and Persia, especially the latter, are fairly good enough for a general alignment of the trend of the railroad to be traced, but to enable a satisfactory survey for railroad purposes a detailed examination of the route from end to end is necessary, and this is being arranged. The general subject will be brought forward in an exhaustive paper to be read before the Royal United Service Institution in Whitehall.

A QUEEN'S GIFT

Wilhelmina and One of Her Little Subjects Make an [illegible]ange of Gloves

An interesting story of Queen Wilhelmina is going the rounds. The Queen is very fond of walking in out-of-the-way places round her capital, and during a recent promenade she encountered a little girl in whom she subsequently interested herself. The child conceived the idea of showing her gratitude in a tangible fashion. She thought the Queen would be pleased to receive a little present from her, and after considerable meditation sent to the palace a pair of gloves.

Queen Wilhelmina was much touched, and promptly returned the compliment by sending another pair of gloves to her young friend. By way of adding interest to the present her Majesty had filled the right one with bonbons and placed pieces of money in the left. Accompanying the present was a letter in which the Queen asked the little girl to inform her which glove gave her most pleasure.

The simple reply came as a surprise to her Majesty. "Dear Queen," wrote the little girl, "your beautiful present has only caused me trouble. I cannot tell you which of the gloves has given me the most pleasure, for my father took the left glove and my eldest sister the right one."

That same evening Queen Wilhelmina sent another pair of gloves, similarly filled, to her young protege. Her Majesty took care that the present was delivered by a court functionary, who saw to it that the gloves were not seized by others.

LLOYD-GEORGE FLED

An Amusing Adventure of the Chancellor With an Old Woman

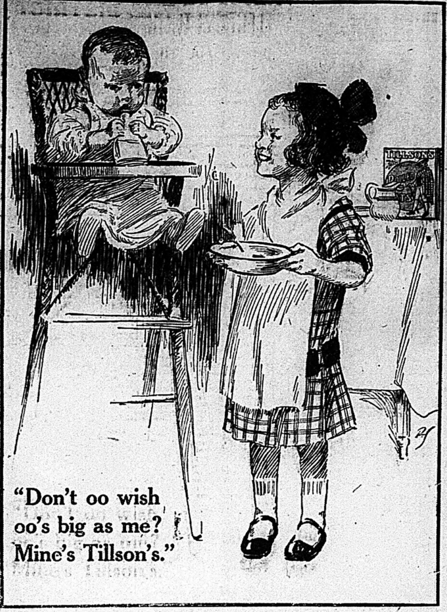
While staying at Criccieth, in Wales, Mr. Lloyd-George and a party, which included Mrs. George, Mr. and Mrs. Osterman, Sir Francis Edwards, M.P., and others, set out with the intention of having tea on the river bank, a mile from LLanystymdwy. They had just entered a field, and, having lighted a fire, were preparing to make tea, when there appeared on the scene the woman who leased the ground. At the sight of the little party of picknickers on her domain, she became quite indignant, remonstrating volubly, and ending by putting out the little camp fire.

The old woman's ire put the Chancellor and his friends to flight, the members of the company retreating by wading knee-deep through the stream. Approached by the chauffeur, who inquired whether she knew Mr. Lloyd-George, the angry dame retorted: "He might have been the King for all I care; I will have no trespassing on my field.'

SWIMMERS MADE SPEECHES

An Ingenious Method of Outwitting the Russian Police

One of the most remarkable political meetings on record is reported to have taken place at Riga, Russia. The Letts Socialists desired to hold a meeting, and the Riga police expressing an opposite view, the contest began, brains being pitted against determination. Wherever the Socialists made up their minds to pitch their camp the police checkmated them. At last one of the Socialists conceived a brilliant idea. He sent circulars to the members of his organization inviting them to take part in a swimming match. Of course the competitors were orators. They went into the water and the assemblage stood around. Then swimmer after swimmer delivered a speech and invited questions from those on land. The ingenious Socialists claim that the meeting was a great success.



TILLSON'S
"Don't oo wish oo's big as me? Mine's Tillson's."

The Haunted Chamber

"But you must not tell me you had no dances left for me," says Adrian, gayly. "Come, let me see your card." He looks at it and finds that it is indeed full. "I am an unfortunate man," he adds.

"I think," says Dora, with the prettiest hesitation, "if you are sure it would be an unkind thing to do, I could scratch out this name"—pointing to her partner's for the coming dance.

"I am not sure at all," responds Adrian, laughing. "I am positive it will be awfully unkind of you to deprive any fellow of your society; but be unkind, and scratch him out for my sake."

He speak slightly, but her heart beats high with hope.

"For your sake," she repeats softly, drawing her pencil across the name written on her programme and substituting his.

"But you will give more than this one dance. "Is there no one else you can condemn to misery out of all that list?"

"You are insatiable," she returns, blushing, and growing confused. "But you shall have it all your own way Here,"—giving him her card—"take what waltzes you will." She waltzes to perfection, and she knows it."

"Then this, and this, and this," says Adrian, striking out three names on her card, after which they move away together and mingle with the other dancers.

In the meantime, Florence growing fatigued, or disinclined to dance longer with Dynecourt, stops abruptly near the door of a conservatory, and, leaning against the framework, gazes with listless interest at the busy scene around.

"You are tired. Will you rest for awhile?" asks Arthur, politely; and, as she bends her head in cold consent, he leads her to a cushioned seat that it placed almost opposite the doorway, and from which the ballroom and what is passing within it are distinctly visible.

Sinking down amongst the blue satin cushions of the seat he has pointed out to her, Florence sighs softly and lets her thoughts run, half sadly, half gladly, upon her late interview with Sir Adrian. At least if he has guessed her secret, she knows now that he does not despise her. There was no trace of contempt in his gentleness, the tenderness of his manner. And how kindly he had told her of the intended change in his life. "Their paths would lie far asunder in the future," he had said, or something tantamount to that. He spoke, no doubt, of his coming marriage.

Then she begins to speculate dreamily upon the woman who would be his happy wife. She is still idly ruminating upon this point when her companion's voice brings her back to the present. She had so far forgotten his presence in her day-dreaming that his words come to her like a whisper from some other world, and occasion her an actual shock.

"Your thoughtlessness renders me sad," he is saying impressively. "It carries you to regions where I cannot follow you."

To this she makes no reply, regarding him only with a questioning glance that might well have daunted a better man. It only nerves him, however, to even bolder words.

"The journey your thoughts have taken—has it been a pleasant one?" he asks smiling.

"I have come here for rest, not for conversation." There is undisguised dislike in her tones. Still he is untouched by her scorn. He grows even more defiant, as though determined to let her see that even her avowed hatred cannot subdue him.

"If you only knew," he goes on, with slow meaning, regarding her as he speaks with critical admiration, "how surprisingly beautiful you look to-night, you would perhaps understand in a degree the power you possess over your fellow-creatures. In that attitude, with that slight touch of scorn upon your lips, you seem a meet partner for a monarch."

She laughs a low contemptuous laugh, that even makes his blood run hotly in his veins.

"And yet you have the boldness to offer yourself as an aspirant to my favor?" she says. "In truth, sir, you value yourself highly!"

"Love will find the way," he quotes quickly, though plainly disconcerted by her merriment. "And in time I trust I shall have my reward."

"In time, I trust you will," she returns, in a tone ipmossible to misconstrue.

At this point he deems it wise to change the subject; and as he halts rather lamely in his conversation, at a loss to find some topic that may be of interest to her or advance his cause, Sir Adrian and Dora pass by the door of the conservatory.

Sir Adrian is smiling at some little speech of Dora's, and Dora is looking up at him with a bright expression in her eyes that tells of the happiness she feels.

"Ah, I cannot help thinking Adrian is doing very wisely," observes Arthur Dynecourt, some evil genius at his elbow urging him to lie.

"Doing what?" asks his companion, roused suddenly into full life and interest.

"You pretend ignorance, no doubt"—smiling. "But one can see. Adrian's marriage with Mrs. Talbot has been talked about for some time amongst his intimates."

A clasp like ice seems to seize upon Miss Delmaine's heart as these words drop from his lips. She restrains her emotion bravely, but his lynx-eye reads her throug and through.

"They seem to be more together tonight than is usual with them," goes on Arthur, blandly. "Before you had honored the room with your presence he had danced twice with her, and now again. It is very marked, his attentions to-night."

As a matter of fact Adrian had not danced with Mrs. Talbot all the evening until now, but Florence, not having been present at the opening of the ball, is not in a position to refute this, as she well knows.

"If there were anything in her friendship with Sir Adrian, I feel sure Dora would tell me of it," she says slowly, and with difficulty.

"And she hasn't?" asks Arthur, with so much surprise and incredulity in his manner as goes far to convince her that there is some truth in his statement. "Well, well," he adds, one cannot blame her. She would doubtless be sure of his affectoin before speaking even to her dearest friend."

Florence winces and sinks back upon the seat as though unable to sustain an upright position any longer. Every word of his is as gall and wormwood to her, each sentence a reminder—a reproach. Only the other day this man now beside her had accused her of making sure of Sir Adrian's affection before she had any right to do so. Her proud spirit shrinks beneath the cruel taunt he hurls at her.

"You look unusually 'done up,'" he goes on, in a tone of assumed commiseration. "This evening has been too much for you. Acting a part at any time is extremely trying and laborious."

She shrinks still further from him. Acting a part! Is not all her life becoming one dreary drama, in which she acts a part from morning until night? Is there to be no rest for her? Oh, to escape from this man at any price! she rises to her feet.

"Our dance is almost at an end," she says; "and the heat is terrible. I can remain here no longer."

"You are ill," he exclaims eagerly, going to her side. He would have supported her, but by a gesture she repels him.

"If I am, it is you who have made me so," she retorts, with quick passion, for which she despsies herself an instant later.

"Nay, not I," he rejoins. "but what my words have unconsciously conveyed to you. Do not blame me. I thought you, as well as every one else here, knew of Adrian's sentiments with regard to Mrs. Talbot."

'A Weird Imagining

A correspondent at Chicago has forwarded to The Intelligencer the following, clipped from the Chicago Daily News of the 6th inst.:

> Probably the most peculiar lumbering operations in the world are being carried on in the Bay of Quinte, on the northern shore of Lake Ontario, forty miles from Oswego, N.Y., where powerful engines are hoisting valuable oak and walnut logs from the bottom of the bay. Some of them are fifty feet long and sound as the day they were felled, though many of these logs have been submerged for twenty-five years.
>
> Long ago the lake was surrounded by magnificent forests of oak, pine and black walnut, and when the logs were felled and run into the lake for shipment great numbers of the heaviest sank through their own weight or because they were covered with snow.
>
> Divers recently ascertained that the bottom of the bay was full of logs, and barges equipped with engines and grappling hooks are now hoisting them for commercial purposes. Hundreds of dollars' worth are raised daily.

"How about this?" asks the correspondent.

The only possible answer is that the story is simply the invention of some one with a vivid imagination and no knowledge of the locality.

No such operations, with or without "powerful engines," are now, or ever have been, going on in Lake Ontario, "forty miles from Oswego," or elsewhere on the Canadian side at least.

The idea of oak logs sinking under the weight of snow on them is creditable to the inventive powers of the writer, who evidently did not know that black walnut never grew on the shores of Lake Ontario, at least in the area referred to.

But, "'nuff sed."

The Block is Broken

Under the above heading L'Action, a French paper, published in Montreal, makes an interesting study of the results of the recent elections in all counties where French-Canadian electors have what might be termed the balance of power. In 1908, says L'Action, the Opposition took only eleven counties out of the sixty-five in the Province of Quebec. Of these, five were really English constituencies, so that the French-Canadian Oppositionists won only six out of sixty-five. Twelve constituencies in Ontario where French electors were plentiful all went Liberal. They were Prescott, Russell, Glengarry, West Algoma, West Kent, South Essex, South Renfrew, Ottawa, Nipissing, North Essex, Stormont and East Simcoe. Of the twelve counties in the Maritime Provinces where French influence is considerable, eleven went Liberal and one only Conservative. Summing up, L'Action finds that out of 89 constituencies, where a considerable portion of the electorate was French, only seven voted against the Government in 1908.

Comparing these results with the vote of 1911, it will be found that at least twenty purely French counties in Quebec elected opponents of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The Ontario twelve already cited elected seven Ministerialist and five Opposition. In the Maritime Provinces, of the twelve ridings where French-Canadians are a force to be reckoned with, nine supported the Government and three the Opposition. Again, summing up, it appears that twenty-eight counties of the eighty-nine considered voted with the Opposition. In conclusion the writer says that is not yet an absolute independence, but it is infinitely better than in 1908.

Fast Driving

The coroner's jury impaneled at Toronto in the case of Mrs. Salter, of Oshawa, who was killed in that city by being run over by an automobile driven by Roy L. Brintnell, returned the following verdict:

> "That Mrs. Elizabeth Salter, of Oshawa, came to her death on the 5th day of October from injuries received by being knocked down and run over at the corner of Yonge and Louisa Streets by an automobile driven by Roy Brintnell at a high rate of speed.
>
> "We would recommend that the city pass an ordinance compelling all persons owning automobiles to pass an examination and take out a license, and we also recommend that the police be given full authority to regulate traffic on the streets. We are under the impression that a term in jail would be preferable to a fine for fast and reckless driving."

The recommendations of the jury are excellent and are such as should be adopted by every municipality in the province. That with regard to the licensing of drivers is particularly pertinent to the present state of affairs, and it should provide that no one be licensed until after competence has been proven. In this city, as in other places, there are a number of reckless speeders, whose exuberance ought to be curbed by the strong arm of the law. Fortunately no serious accident has occurred here, although there have been many narrow escapes; but the dust nuisance caused by the "roadeaters" on some of the city streets has been almost intolerable. The City Council ought to take the necessary action, and that at once.

ROYAL WEDDING POSTPONED

Heir to Austria's Throne to Marry Princess Zita

The date of the wedding of the Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, the future heir-apparent of the Austro-Hungarian throne, and Princess Zita of Parma, which was originally fixed for October 4, the name-day of the Emperor, and postponed to the 23rd or 24th of October, has again been changed.

It is now stated that the marriage will not take place until the end of October. The Emperor will be present at the ceremony at the castle of the bride's family in Schmarzau.

It is on account of the fact that the repairs at Hetzendorf Castle, which will be the home of the couple after their marriage, have not been completed that the date of the wedding has been put back. The Emperor's wedding present to Princess Zita will be a diadem in brilliants, worth $18,000.

A FLY IN A SWIMMER'S NOSE

LONG BEACH, L. I., Oct. 10.—A fly almost caused the drowning of a young man here this afternoon. Imbedded in his nose it gave the victim such agony that he sank once and would have probably lost his life had friends not rescued him.

The youth was Horatio Southgate of 480 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn, a grandson of the late Bishop Southgate long prominent in Long Island ecclesiastical circles. The young man was swimming the Wreck Lead Channel, just back of Long Beach, when a large green fly from the meadow land buzzed over his head. Southgate thought nothing of the incident, spattering the water at the insect. It buzzed on persistently, however, and when the youth dived, waited for him to reappear.

The channel is forty feet wide where Southgate was swimming, due to the dredging being done for the filling in of the beach. The young man was about 100 yeards off shore when the fly settled on his head. Southgate made a slap at it and the insect was forced into his nose. The young man began to tread water and tried to get rid of the pest.

It burrowed deeper up his nostril, and soon, tired with the struggle, Southgate sank. A passing boat was hailed by friends of the young man, and when he came to the surface they succeeded in hauling him in. Once safely ashore the fly was quickly removed.

"DEI GRATIA" HAS GONE FROM COINS

"What has happed to the grace of God?" asked one man of another. The question was not irreverent. The questioner was talking about coins. In his hand he had one of the new Canadian 'cents.'

"The fact is that "Dei Gratia" seems to have disappeared from the Canadian coinage, although the new King George coins in England retain it. Samples of these show that there has been no departure from the long established custom of putting the name of God on the coinage. Why the dies sent out to the Canadian mint are different remains to be explained.

The King Edward coins bore the inscription, "Edward VII. Dei Gratia, Rex Imperator." The 1911 Canadian coins are stamped, "Georgius V. Rex, et Ind., Imp." that is to say, "George V., King and Emperor of India." There is no Dei Gratia, and "D.G.," which sometimes appeared on British coins are absent.

Anglo-Saxon countries long pointed the finger of scorn at France for omitting the name of God from her coinage. A few years ago Theodore Roosevelt ordered "In God we Trust" removed from the United States coins but Congress promptly ordered it back again. The alteration in Canadain coins seems to have occurred without attracting attention, but it is safe to predict an agitation for the replacing of Dei Gratia on the pieces which are to be minted here.

FURS ARE GARB FOR COMING WINTER

PARIS, Oct. 10.—Despit threatening weather a large crowd assembled at Longchamps to-day for the biggest Fall race, the Grand Prix Automne.

Apart from the sporting interest, which caused thousands of English people to cross the Channel, the occasion was remarkable for the annual display of feminine winter fashions. There is no doubt that furs will play a more important part this season than for several years. Even old habitues of the fashionable racecourse were to-day impressed by the spectacular display of magnificent furs, the aggregate value of which was roughly estimated at $3,000,000.

Throughout the paddock there was an unending procession of rich and heavy costumes, in which sable, sealskin, ermine, silver fox and black fox predominated. Complete costumes of furs were seen for the first time, consisting of separate coat and skirt. One was a magnificent gown of the thickest and softest ermine, the hem being trimmed with tails. One striking creation which attracted considerable attention, was a magnificent cloak, made of a combination of sealskin and chiffon, the latter inserted in such a way that the white silk and velvet brocade of the gown worn underneath were plainly visible.

White satin gowns were generally worn with black furs, white stockings, and black shoes. Black and white were the predominating colors, although here and there wide cloaks of colored ratine made a diversion. These cloaks, tailor-made, and all of the same stuff, were trimmed with costly furs, which contrasted strangely with the seeming roughness of the material.

Fur toques of ermine, sealskin, or fox were worn generally, mostly perfectly plain, sometimes trimmed with rich lace or an antique gold or a silver buckle.

Muffs, simple and elaborate, appear to be much bigger than last season, many of them made with huge pockets in front to replace the recticule. One was seen made of magnificent silver fox, with a big pocket, in which a small Pekinese dog nestled comfortably.

The race was a disappointment to the compartaively few Americans present, as their favorite, Combourg, owned by F. J. Gould, had given up the struggle long before the arrival of the popular favorite, Alcantara, which was also hopelessly beaten, the victory going to entirely French champions.

ILLITERATE SOLDIERS

All But One Per Cent of British Soldiers Can Read and Write

According to statistics recently published, the number of illiterate recruits in the French Army has attained the astounding total of 14,000. The German newspapers, on the other hand, point with pride to the fact that in the whole German Army they have only 46 illiterates; that is recruits who can neither read nor write.

Ten years ago the number of illiterates in the German Army was 218. Going back another decade, the number was 860. It is stated that the percentage of illiterates in the British Army—the last figures available being those for 1907—showed 1 per cent.; France, 3.5 per cent.; Austria, 22 per cent.; Italy, 31 per cent,; and Russia, 62 per cent.

McINTOSH BROS.

TWO POLICIES AS TO BUSINESS

(New York Sun.)

We printed a comparison of the market prices of twenty stocks, ten railroad and ten industrial, showing that the shrinkages in these securities alone has been about $886,000,000 since President Taft's message to Congress twenty months ago. A much larger loss would, of course, be shown if account were taken of the preferred stock and convertible bonds of these same corporations.

Were the statistics at hand it would be interesting to contrast with this appalling shrinkage in values the fate of standard stocks in other countries. It is, however, well recognized that despite the calamity of an unprecedented drought and more tangible possibilties of international war than have existed in a generation the industries and therefore the standard securities of England, France and Germany have during the same period enjoyed great prosperity.

A fairer contrast is, perhaps, suggested by our nearest neighbor, Canada, whose prosperity depends in so large a measure upon the same economic conditions with reference to labor, materials and seasonable temperature. Excepting the varying effects of beneficial or prejudicial governmental activity, little other reason can be suggested plausibly why the industries of Canada should prosper and those of the United States under ordinary conditions would justify an expectation of greater comparative prosperity in this favored land.

In a recent market circular letter signed by Canadian and American bankers, it is said:

"There is in Canada neither a public nor political sentiment inimical to corporate enterprise; there is no legislation passed, pending or proposed to act as a check on business, and there is no uncertainty as to what the future will bring in either respect. On the contrary, railroad and industrial growth is being fostered in every way, not only by actual loans of many millions from the Government, by provincial guarantee on bond issues and municipal gifts of land and money, but also by general legislation calculated to strengthen rather than restrict the growth and security of invested capital."

As this attitude of the Government toward business is precisely the opposite of that of the United States, it will be interesting to contrast with the shrinkage of value of the standard securities of the United States since January, 1910, the strikingly different results in Canada under a Government which regards as one of its legitimate ends the encouragement of business. The bankers continue:

"For the period from 1909 to 1911 a representative list of twenty-five stocks (in Canada) is shown to have an aggregate advance of 1,264 points, an average of 60½ points a share, and an appreciation in market value of about $200,000,000. In this list is included only the active stocks of wide market, and no account is taken of their many capital increases or of the closely held listed corporations in which there has been comparatively little public dealing but much appreciation."

Can it be questioned reasonably that the controlling cause of this great and lamentable disparity in results is due to the fact, at which succeeding generations will rub their eyes with amazement, that the United States from the year 1890 until a date which cannot now be foretold deliberately made war upon its own industries, prosecuted and indicted business men for combining their resources to secure more efficient results and endeavored to thwart and destroy the instinct of association upon which every nation has based its industrial growth?

Things don't always go like clock work for those who live on tick.

People who see themselves as others see them never believe what they see.

Most married people are in favor of an occasional peace conference.

Some public officials are unable to distinguish between a bribe and a present.

NATHESON MAY RESIGN

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—The rumor persists that Colonel Matheson, the Provincial Treasurer, is to resign his portfolio and retire from politics. Last winter his health suffered through the strain of work and he has spent much of this summer recruiting.

With a Provincial election at hand to be followed by a session of the Legislature, it is reported that he feels the strain will be too much for him.

SPECIAL DEMONSTRATION NOW

John Lewis & Co

ITALIAN ARMY LANDS

First Division Arrives at Tripoli Without Incident.

Feeling Is That Turkey Is Leaving No Stone Unturned to Involve the Powers In the War by Playing on Old Feuds—Troops Are Welcomed In Disputed City — Armistice Seems Near at Hand.

Rome, Oct. 12.—The first division of the army of occupation arrived at Tripoli at noon yesterday. The troops were landed safely without incident.

There is a feeling in official circles here that Turkey and her sympathizers, as well as those elements which are antagonistic to Italy, are doing everything possible to engender opposition among the Powers to Italy's plans, and it is believed that certain reports which have been circulated aim chiefly to play on Anglo-German antagonisms. With this object, it is supposed, the report has been spread broadcast that Germany, having planned to obtain Tobruk from Turkey, prior to the beginning of hostilities, will end by obtaining this important strategic point from Italy now as base for operations in the Mediterranean against British supremacy.

All these rumors and reports are officially denied by Italy. It is pointed out by Italian officials that Germany has never taken any step in such a direction in the past and has no intention to ask anything from Italy in the future, while it is also declared that Italy would not dream of being a cat'spaw to draw the chestnuts from the fire for Germany, notwithstanding the alliance.

In connection with this denial, it is stated that the entire situation remains unchanged; that none of the Powers oppose Italy's action and that they have no intention of intervening until Italian dominion in Tripoli is indisputable.

Troops Welcomed.

Tripoli, Oct. 12.—The fast transports bearing portion of the Italian expeditionary forces arrived here yesterday. They were escorted by warships and accompanied by the hospital ship Regina d'Italia. The disembarkation of troops began immediately, the greatest enthusiasm prevailing.

The batteries of the fleet all through the night shelled the surrounding country, which was swept by searchlights. Tripoli has nothing more to fear from Turkish attacks.

Striving For Armistice.

Berlin, Oct. 12.—The armistice between Italy and Turkey, for which German diplomacy has been striving for some time, it is believed here, has practically been concluded, although not yet announced as "official."

It is understood that the transportation of the Italian military expedition will not be interfered with, but that hostilities in all quarters [illegible] cease. This is considered in Be[illegible] as equivalent to ending of the [illegible] or at least the warlike movements, which now will be succeeded by negotiations looking to a settlement.

It is regarded as probable that as soon as the strong Italian army has once disembarked at Tripoli, even the young Turk irreconcilables will begin to recognize, as apparently the Ottoman Government already does, that there is no hope of withholding Tripoli from Italy. Then it will be possible for Turkey to enter into peace negotiations, with the prospect of reaching a less unsatisfactory conclusion than would result from a continuation of the conflict.

Holy War Threatened.

Rome, Oct. 12.—Reports from Tripoli yesterday state that the Arabs of the interior are circulating a report that the Great Mandi of the Sahara, having heard of Italian invasion, is gathering arms and men and especially trained horsemen and proclaiming a holy war, which is to be conducted relentlessly until the "infidels" are driven into the sea.

The Italian authorities have found evidence at Benghazi showing that the place was the centre for large importations of rifles for the Senussi and Wadai tribes. The guns were gradually distributed among the tribes of Central Africa.

Strict measures have now been adopted to close this last section of the African coast heretofore free to receive arms and supplies for the tribes of the interior.

Italy's King In Danger.

Rome, Oct. 12.—The Corriere d'Italia says that a patrol of carabineers Tuesday night encountered four men armed with guns in the woods around the castle of San Rossore, where the king is staying. Shots were exchanged. Three of the men escaped, but the fourth was caught. The men are said to be poachers, but the paper points out that they were not known in the neighborhood.

Burrell Must Travel Far.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—Yesterday's Journal says that Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, representing Yale-Cariboo, will have to do a lot of traveling before he becomes a Minister with the right to a seat. It is necessary for him to come to Ottawa to be sworn in, in order to vacate his seat. Then he will have to go west again to seek re-election.

Mortgage For One Dollar.

Welland, Oct. 12.—A mortgage for one dollar was received by Registrar Crow a few days ago and registered in the Welland Registry Office. This is the smallest mortgage that has ever passed through his hands.

The parties are residents of Toronto and the mortgage is for a piece of real estate here.

London May Have Boulevard.

London, Ont., Oct. 12.—A by-law will be submitted to the ratepayers to provide for funds to construct a five-mile river drive boulevard along the Thames to the city park at Springbank.

Attorney-General of Nova Scotia.

Halifax, Oct. 12.—Hon. O. T. Daniels of Annapolis was yesterday appointed Attorney-General of Nova Scotia in succession to Hon. A. K. MacLean, and was sworn in at noon.

Hon. Mr. Daniels was born in 1860 and was educated at Acadia University, where he graduated in arts. He was first elected to the Legislature in 1906.

It is said there will be no opposition to Mr. Daniel's re-election in Annapolis.

A Plucky Aviator.

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 12.—Though he had not recovered from a fall at St. Louis some weeks ago, in which both his legs were broken. Horace Kearney, an aviator of that city, attempted an exhibition flight here yesterday and fell again and was seriously injured. He walked with a crutch when he came upon the Indiana University campus to start his biplane. The machine rose fifty feet and then dropped into a brook.

SHERIDAN CONFESSES

He Says Ross Ford Forced the Fight on Him.

Youth Charged With Murder at Orillia Is Placed on Trial For His Life at Barrie and Confession Is Read In Court — Deceased Insisted on Fight and Was Beating Prisoner In Ditch When Stabbed.

Barrie, Oct. 12.—The opening of the trial yesterday morning before Sir John Boyd, of Arthur Sheridan of North Orillia, for the alleged murder of Ross Ford of the same town brought out a crowd that filled the large court rooms to the doors. Peter White, K.C., appeared as crown prosecutor, the prisoner being defender by T. C Robinette, K.C., and J. T. Mulcahy. An hour was spent in empannelling a jury. Ten were challenged by the defence and six by the crown.

Chief Reid of Orillia was the first witness called and told of finding the body of Ross Ford on the road near Geo. Duff's house after midnight on Aug. 9. There was a stab wound in the breast and beside the body was a large pool of blood. Later he noticed three cuts in the back of the coat behind the shoulder. There was no sign of any struggle on the roadway. He told of a confesion.

"Orillia. On Wednesday, the 9th day of August, 1911, I was in dancing at Duff's in North Orillia. Ross Ford sent Robert Thoburn into the house to tell me he wanted to see me. I went out to the gate. He said: 'What talk was going around?" I said I didn't know. He asked me to come down the road. He said that some fellow says that I am telling lies. I told him that I didn't know, that I never told lies about anybody. He said we would have to fight it out. I told him I did not want to fight. He said: 'I do not give a damn whether you do or not.' He struck me in the eye and knocked me in the ditch. I got up again and he hit me in the ribs; we clinched and he backed me over a root and we both fell. Then I asked him to let me up and I said: 'I do not want to fight.' He had his hand on my throat. 'I don't give a damn,' he said, 'I will kill you anyway.' I said, 'I do not know about that, Ross; let me up. I have a knife here.' I told him I would put the knife into him if he did not let me up.'

"He still held on. I pulled the knife. I then raised my hand with knife in it and struck him in the breast. I think I stabbed him in the breast first; I only stabbed him twice that I remember. He said then: 'Give me the knife.' I then rolled him over and I got up and he got up also and walked towards Duff's house. about twenty feet and he let a yell out of him and dropped. I went u and got Jim Cable to come down. He called to a crowd of men to come quickly and they came down, some of them.

"I fainted and lay down on the ground for half an hour. Then I got up and looked around and went up the road in a field of shooks and then went to the swamp and met a surveyor and he coaxed me to come back. He said the police were in here after me. It was an old Italian knife I had. The blade was three inches long. I got the Italian knife that I stabbed Ross Ford with down in the Italian swamp. After I stabbed Ford I put the knife under a rail by Duff's gate. I had a fight with Ford about a month ago over some whisky on the 12th of July. At William O'Connor's I had a quarrel with him.

(Signed) "Arthur Sheridan."

James Cable, one of those at the dance, told of Sheridan and Ford going down the road together at invitation of latter, seemingly on good terms. A few minutes later he saw a tussle and the men fell together without making any outcry. Then Sheridan ran toward witness and asked him to "Come quick; I have killed Ford."

George Anderson told much the same story.

Robert Thorburn, a lad of fifteen years of age and a brother of the young girls with whom Sheridan and Ford had been keeping company, corroborated the evidence given by previous witnesses, that he had been asked by Ford to call Sheridan out of the house.

Other witnesses corroborated these stories and the court adjourned.

Found Murdered.

Washington, D.C., Oct. 12.—Fred. Springman, formerly président and principal owner of one of the largest express transfer companies in Washington, was found murdered in a barn near his home in Maryland yesterday.

Harry W. Silbrook, a 21-year-old farm hand, was arrested.

Springman once had contracts for delivering and collecting mail in every section of the United States.

Big Electric Merger.

Brantford, Oct. 12.—It is reported here that negotiations are now in progress in New York for the merger of the Grand Valley and Brantford Street Railway lines into a big system of electric roads to extend from Toronto to Detroit, and it is said the deal will be consummated with a number of American capitalists.

G. T. R. Piers Have Sunk.

Winnipeg, Oct. 12.—Owing to contractors for the national transcontinental bridge over the Seine River, just east of here, not having gone deep enough for their piers, these have sunk several feet and will have to be taken down. This will mean some months' delay to the opening of the new road.

Blizzard In Montana.

Pocatello, Idaho, Oct. 12.—Southwestern Montana is in the grip of a terrific snow storm that has cut off Butte from communication with the outside world to-day.

CHARGED WITH DYNAMITING.

James B. and John J. McNamara Are Being Tried at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 12.—Yesterday began the fight of the State of California to hold James B. and John J. McNamara responsible for the death of nineteen men in the explosion in The Los Angeles Times' plant on Oct. 1, 1910.

A severance of the case against the McNamaras, both of whom were indicted five months ago on 21 counts for murder, has been the announced desire of the defence, and the prosecution awaited the formal request in court yesterday to that effect before disclosing which of the two brothers it had elected to try first.

When court opened, District Attorney Fredericks declared that should the defence exercise its privilege of having the brothers tried separately, he elected to begin by placing James B. McNamara in the prisoner's box.

James is the younger brother of the accused secretary of the structural iron workers, and is alleged to have been one of the men who bought the dynamite and participated directly in the deeds which led to the explosions.

Twelve veniremen were placed in the jury box out of the venire, which originally numbered 125, but which contained less than forty men when the proceedings started.

District Attorney Fredericks read the indictment to the veniremen, pointing out the prisoner and explaining the case briefly, "so that the veniremen might know in a general way what it was about should they be called upon to become trial jurors."

Lecompte Davis, for the defence, asked the usual questions concerning qualifications.

Court adjourned at 3.55 p.m., until 10 o'clock Friday morning, because of the legal holiday to-day.

Writs For Bye-Elections

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—Writs will be issued to-day for ten bye-elections in the constituencies represented by those members of the Borden Government, who were elected on Sept. 21, and have been assigned portfolios. They include Hon. Messrs. Borden, Monk, Doherty, Pelletier, Nantel, Foster, Reid, Crothers, Roche and Hughes. Nominations will be held on Oct. 25 and elections on Nov. 1 if there are to be contests. This much was decided upon at yesterday's Cabinet council, and to-day the order-in-council goes to the clerk of the crown in chancery.

Nothing his been determined as to the seats to be occupied by Messrs. Hazen, Cochrane, White and Rogers. The probability is that Mr. Hazen will take the St. John City and county seat, and that Dr. John Daniel will wait for the Senate. It is also pretty well understood that Hon. Robert Rogers will sit for a Manitoba constituency, and will not move into Saskatchewan. It is said that he has been offered the Winnipeg seat, now held by Alex. Haggart. There is a vacant Senatorship in Manitoba since the death of Senator Chevrier, and it might go to Mr. Haggart, although it has been regarded as a French appointment, and Hon. A. Lariviere, former member for Provencher, wants to get it.

Foreigners Are Safe.

Hankow, Oct. 12.—The foreign consuls at a conference yesterday, decided not to comply with the Chinese request that they employ foreign gunboats to prevent the revolutionaries from crossing the river to Hankow. The revolutionaries sent a circular out to the consuls asking that foreigners remain neutral and assuring them that they would not be harmed.

Yesterday the loyal troops fled across the river followed by the bullets of the insurgents.

A fugitive colonel of the Chinese army informed the correspondent of the Associated Press at Hankow that the entire provincial army at Hupeh with the exception of two or three men, mutinied.

The proclamation of the revolutionary committee threatened with decapitation anyone who assaulted a foreigner. The movement aims at the overthrow of the Manchus, the reigning dynasty.

Bid For Winnipeg Railway.

Winnipeg, Oct. 12.—R. J. Mackenzie is authority for the statement that local capitalists, including Messrs. Muir, Reece and Mather of the Manitoba Power Co., allied with New York capital, have made a bid of $300 a share for the purchase of the plant of the Winnipeg Street Railway Co. This is $50 a share more than what Sir William Mackenzie asked for the property from Winnipeg City, to whom he would have preferred to sell.

London Has Fever Scare.

London, Ont., Oct. 12.—Colon bacilli in two of the collecting ponds of the Springbank water supply caused the immediate cutting off of these ponds yesterday morning. London has had a typhoid scare, due to the existence of colon bacilli in the city drinking water, and to several deaths. Samples were forwarded to the provincial analyst at Toronto last week, and his report was received yesterday. The remaining sources are absolutely pure.

Murder Mystery Explained.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct .12.—When the police yesterday investigated the finding by Dr. Cook and Robert Murphy of a supposed unmarked grave in the woods near here, they found it was a hole in which campers had deposited refuse during the summer. The city was much agitated over locating supposed evidence of an infanticide.

More Idle Men Than Ever Before Is His Prediction.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 12.—"There will be more idle men this winter than ever before," predicted James J. Hill in discussing the condition of business over the country and particularly in the west.

"This is the reason," continued the chairman of the Great Northern Railroad, "our capacity for production along industrial lines has grown faster than our consumption along the same lines.

"Some years ago the farmer had to raise enough to feed himself and another man in the cities; now he must raise enough for himself, and for two other men, on account of the movement to industry rather than to farms.

"Business is sound," he affirmed, "but, no new enterprises are being started. The politicians and newspapers are to blame. There is too much political ghost dancing. The people are not given the facts. There is uncertainty as to the future on this account, rather than on account of the Supreme Court decisions."

AN ADMIRER OF CANADA SENDS HIS CONGRATULATIONS

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Sir,—My hearty congratulations to Canada on her escape from the deep laid scheme to entrap her, yclept reciprocity, but which would in reality have meant exploitation by the United States. It seems to me that one needs to be totally blind not to be able to see clearly through the whole thing. The U. S. was wary enough to just turn the picture upside down in offering Canada a market of 90 millions of people; her real object was to use Canada for the benefit of those 90 millions, had Canada been foolish enough to allow herself to be so used. It has been said that Canada and the Empire are at the parting of the ways. The originator of that statement had better be careful lest the shoe be on the other foot and that the dissatisfaction among the 90 millions is not tightening its grasp on the throats of the rulers of the United States, much to their discomfort. I do not think we need now, however, to bother any more about the doings of those who are willing to part with their country to benefit someone else, but let us be thankful that Canada still remains a part of the Empire, which fact to-day must fill every loyal Canadian with pride, and let us hope that the tempter shall never again try to induce her to part with her independence and pride for the purpose of gaining something without value, except as it exists in the desires of those who seek to use her to their own advantage.

SHE WANTED A DYNAMO

MONTCLAIR, N.J., Oct. 10.—Supt McArthur of the Montclair carhouse of the Public Service Railway was called on the telephone about noon to-day and a woman's voice asked:

"Is this the carhouse?"

On being answered in the affirmative, the voice said: "A great accident has happened."

"On which line?" asked the Superintendent.

"An aged woman has just stepped on a needle and it has broken in her foot. She is suffering great pain and wishes to know if she was conveyed to the carhouse in a cab if you would allow her to place her foot on a dynamo to draw the needle out."

McArthur thought the experiment would be dangerous and advised the calling of a physician.

LOST COMRADES OF FRANKLIN

Whatever may be said against it, there is certainly something very fascinating about the theory advanced by Mr. Stefansson, arctic explorer for the American Museum of Natural History, that the fair-haired, beard-wearing Eskimos he recently saw in Victoria Land are descendants of the survivors of Sir John Franklin's lost party. In his account of these strange people, published in Sunday's Times, Mr. Stefansson says:

"In the forties of the last century Franklin's expedition, with its full complement of men, was lost near the coast of Victoria Land. Some of these men are accounted for by journal entries of officers, who themselves later perished, and others by graves and unburied skeletons along the route toward Back's River, but many are yet unaccounted for."

Franklin's two ships, the Erebus and Terror, were shut in by ice in the fall of 1846 twelve miles north of King William's Land. Here the party remained all winter, and here, in June, 1847, Sir John died. Another year passed, and Capt. Crozier, now in command, seeing no immediate prospect of getting out with the ships, deserted them with 105 men. They started southward hoping to reach some outpost of the Hudson Bay Company or some shelter established by Sir John on previous expeditions to the arctic shoes. Not one of these men is known to have escaped, and though thirty-nine rescue parties in all were sent out to find them not nearly enough evidence were found to account for the deaths of all of them.

It is very pleasant to think that all of these gallant men did not perish miserably of starvation and cold, but found friendly Eskimos and, despairing of rescue, settled down to live out their lives among the kindly natives. This view of one of those ever-interesting mysteries of history is supported by the fact that among these people Mr. Stefansson found persons named with the names of white men. With the caution of the true scientist, Mr. Stefansson gives his views with no more confidence than that they explain the existence of a remarkable people. True theory or not, it is important and interest-

WOMEN AUTHORIZED TO PERFORM MARRIAGE

One of the bills which passed both Houses of the Alabama Legislature, and to which little publicity was ever given, was the measure giving women who hold the positions of chief clerk in the probate offices of the State the right to perform the duties of men holding that position.

This allows the women the privilege of performing the marriage ceremony and, while it is not known whether or not any of them have availed themselves of this prerogative, it is none the less theirs, and it is anticipated that a number of marriages will be performed during the present year by women. The Legislature gave them the right to perform this ceremony and it is safe to say they will not neglect the opportunity.

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND FOR FOUR DOLLARS

PARIS, Oct. 10.—The big prize amounting to 1,000,000 francs, or $200,000, of the lottery for charities has fallen to three persons of Marseilles who had jointly taken a ticket, the price of which is 20 francs. The lucky ones are M. Fartaroli, his sister, Mlle Candide Fartaroli, and Mlle. Bolloque, a vendor of church ornaments.

Mlle. Bolloque, who is a sister of a famous preacher, once went to see an ecclesiastic who dabbles in telepathy and who said to her. A piece of good fortune awaits you, Mademoiselle. One day, and this within two years, you will be rich. The money will not come from a legacy nor will you have earned it; but you must not ask me any questions, as I have told you everything that it is possible for me to communicate to you. Yes, you will be the possessor of a goodly fortune in a couple of years."

Bearing this prediction in mind, Mlle. Bolloque decided on buying a ticket for this lottery, and she induced Mlle. Fartaroli and her brother to join in this little speculation. Mr. Fartaroli, who is 38 years of age and a married man with a family, has not allowed his head to be turned by this piece of good luck. As for his sister and Mlle. Bolloque, people of Marseilles say that they have received several offers of marriage, to which as the motive is very transparent, it may safely be concluded that they will pay no heed.

Keep Fleet Ready.

Lisbon, via Frontier, Oct. 12.—The Government has recalled in an urgent command all warships that have been operating north, and the whole fleet is now anchored in the Tagus with steam up night and day ready to sail.

This is accepted as confirmation of the report that the Royalists have something armed afloat against which precaution must be taken.

The Monarchist adventure on land is regarded as lost. The Government forces are concentrated on three sides of the enemy, which is entrenched near the Spanish border. The loyal troops forbear to attack, as it is not quite certain whether the position actually occupied by the Royalists is Spanish or Portuguese. The frontier in that direction has never been clearly demarked, and if the spot should prove to belong to Spain, fighting in the vicinity might start a serious controversy

Double Murder?

Kingston, Oct. 12.—Although the penitentiary authorities say there is no truth in the report, Dennis Babcock, Sharbot Lake, is in the city endeavoring to probe a story to the effect that a prisoner in the penitentiary had confessed to a double murder, one of the victims being a son of Babcock. About eight years ago, Morris Babcock and a companion named James Martin, both young men living near Sharbot Lake, mysteriously disappeared, and as they were on a fishing trip it was believed they had been drowned. The story sent abroad was that a man named Bedore, serving a term for manslaughter, had confessed to double murder, stating that the bodies had been buried in a creek swamp. Babcock is having a lawyer take up the case.

AVOID RED MEAT AND ENJOY LONG LIFE

Dr. Lorand, of Carlsbad, has contributed to Paris Medical a summary of his conclusions on the warding off of old age, of which The New York Medical Journal says:

"In order to ward off old age we should pay particular attention to the healthy work of the glandular system, notably the thyroid, the suprarenals, and the pituitary. It is wise, therefore, to cut down the supply of red meat, once a day being often enough to indulge in that food, and to replace it with white meats, especially fish. Eggs, milk, cheese and vegetables form the best diet.

"A caution is given at this point, to the effect that a man accustomed to large quantities of red meat may miss it to such an extent as to bring about severe mental depression, itself a powerful cause of premature old age. Such a person may indulge in a moderate amount of red meat if he will only take care to avoid the portions rich in nucleins.

"For the young, on the other hand, such foods are excellent, as they provide the very important phosphorus, and are much superior to the vegetables supplying albumin, such as spinach and peas. Alcoholic drinks undoubtedly are prejudicial to continued youthfulness, but a mild claret, in moderation, is useful to the middle-aged. The immoderate use of tobacco is also a cause of precocious degeneration of heart and arteries.

"For many reasons marriage is counseled to those who would live long. To help the skin and kidneys baths, especially vapor baths, are excellent. Wool is advised for underwear in winter, a loose mesh cotton for summer. Black bread should replace the fine white bread of the well-to-do, the latter being rather a form of pastry than a real bread. Regular and sufficiently prolonged sleep is a precious aid to longevity, not easy to realize, alas! in the gay life of the large city, wherein, too, it is hard to secure the dark and quiet room that is a great help to slumber.

"A good heredity is of high importance to longevity, but obviously cannot be considered to enter into the possible prescriptions of the physician. The lucky inheritor of sound organs is able to disport himself as much as he pleases and to eat what he will, in defiance of all the rules to which less fortunate mortals must patiently submit."

GIRL INMURED IN A WARSAW PRISON

About two months ago Miss Malecka, a British subject and a pianist well known in London, was arrested in Warsaw by order of the secret police. No specific charge has been made against her, but she remains incarcerated in the Alexander Citadel. She had been living in Poland for some months before her arrest, and had occupied herself by giving music lessons. Why the police raided her lodgings, searched her boxes, read her letters and papers and conveyed to the citadel remains a mystery. She may not have been judicious in her choice of friends and it is possible the police, who know everything, found that she numbered revolutionists among her acquaintances.

The question was raised in Parliament a few days ago by Mr. Noel Buxton, who was informed by Mr. McKinnon Wood that if Miss Malecka is proved to be a British subject the consul will be given permission to visit her officially; he will be allowed to visit her privately if she is proved to a Russian subject. In the latter case the Foreign Office will be saved trouble, and the Russian authorities can, if they desire, send Miss Malecka to Siberia without trial.

As a matter of fact the question of Miss Malecka's nationality is simple. Her mother was an English woman and her father a Polish emigrant and a naturalized British subject, and has the right to expect such protection as the British Government can afford her.

According to the Russian law, Mr Malecka remaind a Russian subject in spite of naturalization in this country, an act in which the Russian Government refuses to acquiesce except in rare instances. Hence the Russian authorities assume that Miss Malecka is a Russian subject. They are apparently not aware that the marriage of her parent, according to Russian law, was null and void. The ceremony was performed in an Anglican church and Mr. Malecka was a Roman Catholic. Russian law requires that a Roman Catholic be married by a Roman Catholic priest. Miss Malecka, therefore, according to Russian law, takes her mother's nationality, and is a British subject.

Miss Malecka has lived almost all her life in England. She is an orphan and it is comparatively lately that she learned the Polish language out of reverence for her father's memory.

A soft answer may turn away wrath but sometimes it comes hard.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BAE BALL

NOT ONE NEW YORKER ON THE GIANTS' ROSTER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Whence hail the Giants? The fourteen star performers of New York's star baseball team—the men who are expected by the local enthusiasts to drive the world's championship pennant hard and fast to the flagpole at the Polo Grounds—were born in nine States, and came of many nationalities. Each of course is a veteran of the diamond, yet the average age of the players is but a trifle over 25 years, and their average term of service in New York uniform runs a few months over four years.

One looks in vain among the galaxy of stars for a native of New York City. But two, in fact, were born within the boundaries of the Empire State. Four of the other eight States have contributed two of their best baseball heroes to make a pennant-winning team: Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio and California. The remaining four find their birthplaces in Maryland, Wisconsin, Indiana and the District of Columbia.

Christy Mathewson, one of McGraw's star twirlers—the greatest of all, many say—is the veteran of the team, with ten years' service to his credit. He overtops the second man, Ames, by two years, while Wiltse and Devlin tie for third honors with seven years each. Meyers, the big Indian catcher and heavy hitter, and Murray have been but two years in continuous service with the Giants. Herzog rejoined the team this year, but McGraw bought him back in 1908, and exchanged him two years later for Becker, of the Boston team.

Fletcher has been two and a half years with the team, while Josh Devore, smallest and fastest player in the big league, joined the Giants last year, although he had been purchased in 1908. The two intervening seasons he spent with Utica and Newark.

Larry Doyle, captain of the National League leaders, is 24 years old. He was born in Caseyville, Ill., and has been four years with the Giants. Fletcher is 25 years old, was born in Collinsville, Ill.; Herzog, 24, is a native of Baltimore, Md.; Warren, Pa., contributes Ames to the Giants. He is 27 years old.

Wiltse hails from Hamilton, N.Y. He is 28. Merkle was born 23 years ago in Watertown, Wis. Devore, the youngest of the fourteen, was born in Murray City, O., less than 23 years ago.

Crandall, 23 is a native of Wadina Ind. Devlin, who with Mathewson claims seniority of age, is 31 years, was born in Washington, D.C.; Marquard, the $11,000 beauty, first saw the light in Cleveland, O. He is 23 Meyers, whose father is a full-blooded Indian, was born 28 years ago in Riverside, Cal. Matty was born in Factoryville, Pa. Snodgrass is a native son of California, his birthplace being Ventura, and his age 23 years.

Four of these players participated in the series of 1905, when the Giants last won the championship pennant They are Mathewson, Ames, Devlin and Wiltse. Mathewson is the only man on the team who was there when John McGraw took over the reins of management.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 11.—On more favorable advices from the Argentine on crop conditions, cables came weaker, and the prices bid for Manitoba spring wheat were 1½d per quarter lower; consequently, outside of a lot of a few loads of feed grades, little business was done. Notwithstanding this fact there was an increased demand for ocean grain room, and a fair amount of space was engaged to Glasgow and Avonmouth.

The local demand for oats is fairly good at firm prices. Malting barley is in demand at 95c per bushel, ex-store. Demand for flour is good for both export and local account. Millfeed is fairly active and strong. The trade in cheese, butter and eggs is fairly active. Potatoes have advanced, with sales of car lots at 97½c to $1 per bag. Dressed hogs were weak, and prices have declined 50c to 75c per 100 pounds.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 11.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock to-day were 1250 cattle, 1300 sheep and lambs, 2100 hogs and 400 calves.

A feature of the trade was the weaker feeling in the market for cattle, and prices since Monday show a decline of 25c per 100 pounds, which was attributed to the much larger supplies than was generally expected and the fact that a large percentage of the stock was only of medium quality. At the reduction the demand was fairly good from butchers and packers, and a good clearance was made. Choice steers sold at 5¾c; good at 5½c; fairly good at 5¼c; fair at 5c; common at 4½c to 4¾c, and inferior at 3¾c to 4¼c per pound. Cows brought from 3c to 4¼c, and bulls from 2¾c to 3¼c per pound.

The market for sheep and lambs was also weaker on account of the increased offerings, and prices for the former were 25c per 100 pounds lower, while the latter declined 25c to 50c. The demand was good and an active trade was done, with sales of lambs at 5c to 5¼c, and sheep at 3c to 3½c per pound. The trade in calves was fairly active at prices ranging from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

The weak feeling in the market for hogs continues, and prices have scored a further decline of 25c to 50c per 100 pounds, which is due to the very large supplies coming forward and the lower prices ruling in other markets. The demand from packers was fairly good, and sales of selected lots were made at $6 to $6.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars, and heavy weights at $5.75.

At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market the offerings of live stock to-day were 200 cattle, 650 sheep and lambs, [illegible] hogs and 125 calves. The trade in hogs was active at the decline in prices noted above, and sales of selected lots were made at $6 to $6.50 per 100 pounds.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 11.—Cattle—Receipts, 125 head; market firm; prime steers, $7 to $7.75; butcher grades, $3 to $7.

Calves—Receipts, 125 head; market active, steady; cull to choice, $5 to $10.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 6000 head; market slow, 15c to 25c lower; choice lambs, $6.40 to $6.50; cull to fair, $4.50 to $6.25; yearlings, $4.50 to $5; sheep, $2 to $4.25.

LORD ROSEBERRY'S BET.

How the Great English Politician Gave a Good Tip.

On one occasion Lord Roseberry was in a railway carriage on his way to a race meeting at Ayr. Opposite him sat a commercial traveller, who was rather inclined to be talkative. Seeing his lordship (whom, of course, he did not know) reading the Racing Calendar, he remarked:

"Suppose you are going to the Ayr meeting?"

"I am going as far as Ayr," replied his lordship.

"Pity young swells get fleeced by blacklegs. Some noblemen, I hear, drop fortunes on the Turf."

"Indeed!"

"Do a bit myself sometimes — about a tenner or a pony is my cut. Know anything good for to-day worth my while touching?"

"I am not a tipster."

"Beg pardon. Saw you reading the Racing Calendar, so thought you might know."

"Well," replied his lordship, "if I give you the straight tip will it be of service to you?"

"Depends if I fancy it."

"Put your tenner or pony on Lord Roseberry's Chevronel for the Welter Cup."

"Not for Joseph! I never back Lord Roseberry's horses. They say he's a regular chumpkin."

"Indeed! Perhaps they're right However, you asked me. I can only add that I heard Lord Roseberry himself tell what you term a chumpkin to back his horse."

"Depend upon it, if it was all right, he would not let you overhear his conversation. Mum would then be his game. Why, there's a lot in that race! I'll bet you a pony Lord Roseberry don't win it."

"Really! I am not accustomed to bet in railway carriages with strangers."

"There's my card. Fact is, you ain't game to bet."

"I think you'll lose your money, but as you challenge me let it be a bet. You'll see me in the stewards' enclosure at the course. I have no cards with me."

"Agreed! It's a bet. I bet you an even pony against Chevronel for the Welter Cup. But what's your name, young fellow?"

"Primrose. Sometimes I'm otherwise addressed."

"All right, young Primrose; pay and receive after the race."

The companions separated at the station. Chevronel won in a canter, and the commercial received the following morning a short note by a messenger from the stewards' stand: "Mr. Primrose (Lord Roseberry) would feel obliged by Mr. —— handing to his servant £25, which his lordship will have much pleasure in forwarding as a donation to the Commercial Travellers' Orphan Asylum."

The "bagman" paid his money, looking very crestfallen, and was heard to ejaculate, "Done! Who on earth would have dreamt that the good-looking, affable young fellow, whom I imagined was a chumpkin, was in fact none other than the Earl of Roseberry, giving me a good honest tip about his own horse, which I was fool enough to lose £25? Anyway, he's a regular trump, and he's right — I'm the chumpkin after all!"

15 YEARS A DYSPEPTIC

Forced to Live on Stale Bread and Porridge.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURED HIM

AVONDALE, N. B., October, 15th.

"I have been a great sufferer from Indigestion for fifteen years. I was forced to deny myself all such hearty foods as beans, meats, potatoes and could not drink tea or coffee. For the past two years, I lived on porridge, stale bread, etc. I had treatment from two doctors, and tried nearly every kind of medicine, but got worse.

"Finally I saw a testimonial of "Fruit-a-tives" and concluded to give them a trial. I took nearly four boxes of "Fruit-a-tives" and they have made me feel like a new man. I can eat all kinds of hearty foods without suffering, and am no longer constipated."

LEMUEL A. W. BROWN.

Many people look on "Fruit-a-tives" as a miraculous medicine. It has indeed performed what have seemed like miraculous cures in hundreds of cases of chronic Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Constipation and Biliousness.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fresh fruit juices and valuable tonics. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

ON A GRAIN OF WHEAT.

A Prayer Containing 386 Letters Inscribed and Four Figures.

Prayers have been written and engraved on many very small objects, but only one person ever has been patient and painstaking enough to inscribe a complete prayer on a grain of wheat. One day Sir Moses Montefiore, the great Jewish financier of England, received a small tin box in the mail. On the cover of the box was written, "A prayer for Moses Montefiore, by Bauch Mordecai, son of Zebi Hitsch Scheinemann, of Jerusalem." The box contained a single grain of wheat, on which was inscribd, in characters so small that they could only be read with the aid of a powerful microscope, the 386 Hebrew letters of the prayer, and the date of the year (Hebrew reckoning), 5645. Sir Moses kept the prayer in his desk until he died, and it is now preserved with religious care by one of his friends.

Canada's Post Office.

A Devonshire lady once sent to her son a pair of trousers by book post, which is, of course, cheaper than parcel post.

The postal officials wrote to her: "Clothes cannot be sent by book post. If you look in the 'Post Office Guide,' you will see under what conditions articles may be sent by book post."

After a few days the lady replied: "I have looked in the 'Post Office Guide' and find that articles which are open at both ends may be sent by book post. And if trousers are not open at both ends I should like to know what is."

How all the pleasures of Society pale before practising the art of making the truth appear a lie, which is called intrigue.

The agriculturist's idea of a lady is someone who has had nothing to do with farming all her life, just as his ideal gentleman is a retired shopkeeper.

ACTUAL STARVATION

FACTS ABOUT INDIGESTION AND ITS RELIEF THAT SHOULD INTEREST YOU.

Although Indigestion and Dyspepsia are so prevalent, most people do not thoroughly understand their cause and cure. There is no reason why most people should not eat anything they desire—if they will only chew it carefully and thoroughly. Many actually starve themselves into sickness through fear of eating every good-looking, good-smelling, and good-tasting food, because it does not agree with them.

The best thing to do is to fit yourself to digest any food.

We believe we can relieve dyspepsia We are so confident of this fact that we guarantee and promise to supply the medicine free of all cost to everyone who will use it, who is not perfectly satisfied with the results it produces. We exact no promises whatever. Surely nothing could be fairer. We are located right here and our reputation should be sufficient assurance of the genuineness of our offer.

We want every one troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia in any form to come to our store and buy a box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. Take them home and give them a reasonable trial according to the directions. Then, if not satisfied come to us and get your money back. A 25c. package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets furnishes 15 days' treatment. In ordinary cases this is sufficient to produce a cure. In more chronic cases, a longer treatment, of course, is necessary, and depends upon the severity of the trouble. For such cases we have two larger sizes, which we sell for 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can get Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

MISS CARBONNEAU'S FURS AND JEWELS VANISHED

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Two large claims against prominent firms for the loss of valuable property committed to them in 1904 for storage, were entered in the Supreme Court yesterday by John A. Marshall, who has bought up the causes of action of Belinda Carbonneau. Miss Carbonneau says that in 1904 she gave $11,500 worth of jewelry to Tiffany & Co. for safe keeping, and $6,400 worth of furs and wearing apparel to Revilion Freres for storage and that both houses negligently lost her property.

The jewelry enumerated by Miss Carbonneau consisted of a $7,000 diamond bow knot set with a large pearl, an $800 nugget belt of gold, made in Dawson City, a $1,000 gold mesh purse set with diamonds, emeralds and rubies; a $100 pioneer badge set with diamonds, two nugget rose leaves, valued at $100 and two nugget gold chains, worth $170.

The furs and wearing apparel alleged to have been lost consisted of a $6,000 sealskin lined Hudson Bay fur coat, a $200 sealskin lined coat, a robe of eagle feathers lined with lavender cloth, and an ermine stole. Miss Carbonneau demanded the return of her property in 1905, she says, but it could not be found. William M. Killen, attorney for Marshall, filed the lists in the County Clerk's office yesterday.

GOLDEN WEDDING FITLY CELEBRATED

Mr. and Mrs. W. Boulter, Fifty Years Married, Honored by their Sons and Daughters

(From the Picton Gazette.)

To celebrate the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Boulter, two of the county's longest residents and most prominent people, the children of the "happy couple" marked the unusual event by a big and happy gathering at "Claramount," the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Malcolm Young on Tuesday of this week.

In a long and prominent life, Wellington Boulter has become not only one of the best known men of Prince Edward, but widely known across the continent. As the pioneer canner of the canning industry in Canada, he has built the foudation stone of what is to-day one of Canada's biggest industries. His name will forever be identified with the name "Lion Brand"—a name he made and brought to the fore as the "canned goods worth while."

A self-made man, that may be well proud of his record, Mr. Boulter has led a life at all times active and foremost. He has made good in every sens of the word. In this the evening of his life with a help meet that has ever been a source of comfort, strength, and help, they look with deserved pride on a past that is good and forward to a future, bright and happy.

The celebration of Tuesday was happily reminiscent of the wedding a half a century ago. It was on October 10th, 1861, at Demorestville that Rev. R. C. Swinton married Helen Sprague, daughter of the late Stephen Sprague to Wellington Boulter. All their years have been spent on the homestead farm, "The Maples," at Demorestville, until 1910, when the farm was sold.

Tuesday's sun was pouring out a flood of golden sunshine, when at high noon the 'happy couple' drove up to the home of their daughter, Mrs. E. M. Young. Showers of rice from the assembled guests was the first inkling of the whole big surprise. There had been no hint to them of a celebration. All had been quietly planned by their daughter, Miss Nelly Boulter.

It was a happy surprise all round. "Claramount," whose artistic interior so readily lends itself to further charming decoration, was a bower of lovely flowers and autumnal colored leaves.

The hall, with its Queene Anne stair way, twined in sumach, vivid in cerise, and yellow, the library bright with autumnal leaves, was most attractive. Drawing rooms were done in golden yellow and green and white. Mantel was hung with long streamers of golden satin ribbon, while smilax draped the white pillars of the room.

Never was a more artistic table set for a wedding party. It was centered with a great silver basket filled with yellow chrysanthemums. This stood on an exquisite real lace centrepiece, over golden satin, and around were tiny silver vases holding lilies-of-the-valley. Waiting at the place of the "bride" was a beautiful bouquet of Killarney roses, lovely in their pinky fragrance.

All the details of the dinner were perfectly carried out in the "golden" idea from the merest decoration of the table to the golden and white sweet meats of the course. Mrs. MacDonald, of Redwood City, California, a sister of Mrs. Boulter, who was unable to be present, sent as a gift at the anniversary a basket of golden apricots, wonderfully delectable.

Miss Lillian Boulter, daughter of the 'happy couple,' who is at present studying music in Berlin, Germany, was the only one of the immediate family now living, who was unable to attend the anniversary dinner.

The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Young, Miss Bernice Young, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Boulter, Miss Kathryn and Leland, Miss Boulter, Mrs. F. E. N. Boulter; Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Boulter, Detroit, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. George Sprague, of Demorestville, uncle and aunt of the "bride,"; Mrs. Catherine German, and Mrs. Elvira Mills, Picton, aunts; Mrs. W. E. Sprague of Vancouver, B. C., sister-in-law; Mrs. W. R. Dempsey, of Ameliasburg, sister of Mrs. Boulter; Mr. and Mrs. S. Sargent, sister of Mrs. Boulter, of St. Ola; Mr. and Mrs. Albro Sprague and son of Trenton.

The immediate family had gifts to mark the important anniversary, but others had been asked not to send gifts. The presents included, from Mrs. F. E. N. Boulter, a kindly and thoughtful remembrance, from, Misses Nelly and Lillian, to their mother, a pearl brooch in early Victoria style and to their father a gold-headed cane engraved 1861-1911.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

WIMS & CO.'S BIG SALE.

Attention is called to the bargain sale advertised on page five of this issue. Especially low prices are the theme.

DRUNK WAS LIBERATED.

The only case before the Police Magistrate to-day was a drunk, Harry Murray, a stranger, pleading guilty to this offence. He was discharged.

CHARGE OF ASSAULT DISMISSED

George Perry was yesterday afternoon before Magistrate Masson on a charge of assaulting a man named James Davidson. The assault was alleged to have occurred a few evenings ago at the pump house in connection with the G. T. R. The result of the trial was that Perry was acquitted. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown and Mr. Carnew, appeared for the accused.

REPRESENATIVES CHOSEN.

At a regular meeting of the Belleville I.O.O.F. lodge held last evening the following members were selected to represent the lodge at the funeral of the late Mr. John Bateson, held at Millbrook this afternoon: Bros. L. Walmsley, C. Frost, D. Keith, J. Hick, J. Carter and Geo. Turner. The lodge also sent a floral tribute of three links.

HAD MONEY TO BURN.

Mr. Newton Allen, Postmaster at Marlbank, met with a rather serious loss the other evening. He was away during the afternoon and evening and one of the family took a roll of money $400, and stuck it in the waste paper basket for safe keeping, believeing that if burglars should nose around they would never think of looking there. Mr. Allan arrived home during the night. He was up bright and early however and cleaning up about the office, he dumped the contents of the wastepaper basket into the stove and touched a match. The result was that $400 in good bills went up in smoke.

FIRE AT SULPHIDE.

Sulphide was visited by an unwelcome guest on Wednesday of last week in the person of the fire fiend. The tenement house belong to Mr. Peter Labarge and occupied by the families of Mr. Wm. Moore and Mr. George Deline caught fire and was totally destroyed. Mr. Moore saved the down stairs portion of his household effects but the rest was consumed. Mr. Deline was more fortunate and saved the bulk of his. The fire originated up stairs; just how is not certain. A bucket brigade was formed and did splendid service. With hard work they saved the barn which was nearby.

ANOTHER NEW RECORD.

The 12 inch mill at the Steel Company's plant established a new record yesterday. The output was 82,000 lbs. The highest previous record in one day was about 78,000 lbs.

IT WAS NOT STOLEN.

It was reported to the police last evening that a gentleman's watch had been stolen from a house in the city. The timepiece was subsequently recovered, having been mislaid.

GRAY STILL ALIVE.

Mr. Walter Gray, of Elzevir, who was severely injured by his team running away, is still living. Drs. Harrison and Eagleson were called to attend the injured man. They took from the frontal bones a piece 1 1-4 inches wide and 2 1-2 inches long.

THE ROW WAS OVER.

Shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon the police answered a call to a boarding house near the G.T.R. station where some trouble occurred between the keeper of the house and some of the boarders. No arrests were made, all being quiet when the officer arrived.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Joseph Moses, an Assyrian, who resided at Sulphide, attempted on Wednesday to end his existence by hanging. He secured a rope and climbed a tree with the intention of getting a drop on himself, but he was espied by Said Masound, familiarly known as John Sides, who stoned him down out of the tree. Joseph, we are told, took to the woods. A search was instituted and after some time he was discovered and taken in hand by County Constable Christopher Akey, who brought him to Tweed. Moses was committed to Belleville jail to be examined as to his mental condition.

John English and E. Guss Porter for plaintiff; W. S. Herrington and J. L. Whiting for defendants.

NEITHER MASTS NOR FUNNELS

MONTREAL, Oct. 12—Probably the most interesting movement in marine circles this morning was the arrival of the steamer Toiler, a ship without big masts or funnels which ploughed her way across the Atlantic. The Toiler is an extraordinary craft, being propelled entirely by combustion oil engines. She is to be employed on the St. Lawrence and Canadian Lake service as a grain carrier, and will be the first ship ever driven entirely by oil to be employed in Canadian waters.

The Toiler is a first class grain carrier specially designed for that purpose, and the authorities expect great things of her. She did not use full speed while making the voyage across the Atlantic, being content to journey most of the time at half speed, and she therefore cannot be judged by her first trip.

The Toiler was designed and built by Messrs. Swan, Hunter and Wigham Richardson, Limited, the well-known shipbuilding firm of Wallsend-on-Tyne, England. Lately they turned their interest in the direction of our inland traffic, which led them to seek improvements. During their experiments for the improvement of vessels for inland trade they studied various types of engines, oil, gas and electric, and eventually the Toiler was designed to be driven by Diesel oil engines. She carries no coal, being propelled by two sets of two cycle reversible Diesel engines. With these engines there is greater space on the Toiler for her cargoes, and her engines are much lighter than the ordinary steam machinery that has been put to so much use on grain carriers.

Not only is the economy of this craft shown by the increased deadweight of cargo carried, the increased cubic capacity, and the low fuel consumption, but the staff required to look after the engines is less than that required to handle steam engines and boilers.

On arriving here she was turned over to Mr. Clarence I. De Sola, of this city, a director of Messrs. Swan, Hunter, and Wigham Richardson's business in this country.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The first intermediate gymnasium class was held last night. This class will meet every Tuesday and Thursday throughout the season. The seniors will have the floor Saturday night, and the business men are reminded that their first class will meet on Monday night next.

All the local athletes who are intending to take part in the sports tomorrow should hand in their names if possible to-night, and all should be on the grounds at two o'clock to-morrow afternoon. Those who are going to act as officials should make it a point to be on the grounds on time.

WAS WIDOWED TWICE IN FOURTEEN DAYS

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—By the death to-day of Adolph Krogh, 34 years old, a bridegroom of three days, at his newly furnished flat in West Ohio St., his bride of three days, who was Mrs. Lillian Doerbrandt, was made a widow for the second time within two weeks. Krogh killed himself by taking carbolic acid.

Krogh, who was employed by the Standard Writing Ink Co., was married to Mrs. Doerbrandt on Saturday afternoon at the Norwegian Methodist Church. She was the widow of Albert Doerbrandt, who died on Sept. 27.

While preparing breakfast this morning, Mrs. Krogh heard her husband groan. She hastened to his room and found him sitting on the bed with a vial in his hand that had contained carbolic acid. He fell to the floor and died before medical aid could be summoned.

Mrs. Krogh was separated from her first husband for six months previous to his death.

The authorities are making an investigation into the death of Krogh.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Arrival of Kitty" comes to the Griffin Opera House to-night, and from all accounts received in advance it is a corking good show, and will no doubt please the theatre goers of Belleville, as it has those of the many cities where it has played before. The book of the farce, as we remember it, was a bright little comedy, and it would be almost impossible to read the many bright lines without extracting a laugh from the most hardened theatre patron. The many funny situations in which the characters become entangled, are worked out in a most laughable manner, and the laughs are only interrupted by the interpolation of musical numbers, which are new and of the kind that meets with popular approval. Owing to the short time we have had to advertise "The Arrival of Kitty," special prices will prevail and everyone will have a chance to welcome the return of this bright, snappy comedy.

Reformers always expect their victims to show results.

CURRENT COMMENT

Portugal must have something doing if it is no more than guerilla warfare in the mountains. Life is very dull in that country.

There may not be much virtue in higher criticism, but neither is there virtue in treating it as heresy. Truth is peculiar in this, that the fiercer the light beating upon it, the better it thrives. If the higher criticism is fallacious, full discussion will reveal its defects.—Mail and Empire.

Because a colored man was refused accommodation at a Toronto hotel, an exchange speaks of the more liberal way in which colored people are treated in England. But, indeed, over there they carry it too far. They would not even let Bombardier Wells trounce Jack Johnson, the colored champion.—Toronto Star.

It is gratifying to learn that Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of the Interior, is to sit in the House of Commons for Winnipeg, as it is fitting that the holder of a position so important should represent the largest city in our Western territory. Should the Government appoint to the Senate Mr. Haggart, who is to resign in Mr. Rogers' favor, the appointment would be received with general approbation.

The farmers of Canad will be grateful to Premier Borden if he carries out his good roads policy, as he undoubtedly will. The railroads have hitherto been getting all the money given for opening up the country or making travel easier; but it is now the turn of the common highways to receive attention. They have been neglected too long.—Kingston Standard.

Of all the months, the Canadian October, in the opinion of many, is the most beautiful. Why the poet ever referred to October as the "melancholy days" is a literary mystery, only to be explained upon the supposition that he never visited Canada during its wonderful autumn. A country walk at the present time reveals a riot of amazing color such as the maple alone of all trees can offer. The brisk, sharp bracing air, carrying with it the flavor of the pines, puts body best in accord with mind to enjoy the beauty on every hand. The cold is sufficient to bring the color to the most anaemic cheek, yet it would not hurt a child. The man or woman who fails to visit the country and the woods during October misses something well worth while.—Ottawa Journal.

Le Canada, which in its way is the leading Liberal paper in the Montreal district, thinks that Mr. Monk is not a good representative of this province in the Conservative Cabinet, because he is of English origin through his father and Swiss by his mother, by mentality and tradition he is English and he was elected by a majority of the electors of English tongue in the constituency of Jacques Cartier. The really narrow Nationalists of Quebec are not the men who followed Mr. Bourassa's lead in objecting to grafters and the naval programme of the Laurier Government. The distinction belongs to the followers of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who from 1896 onward sought by all wicked methods to make and keep Quebec "solid" for the late Government, and by all wicked methods are now striving to restore th esolidity the recent election did much to destroy.—Montreal Gazette.

And many a man gets what he deserves when he gets it in the neck.

MEN WHO DON'T EXERCISE

SUFFER FROM INDIGESTION, HEADACHES, POOR APPETITE, SLEEPLESSNESS.

Nothing so Sure to "Set Up" a Man, Make Him Feel Brisk and Vigorous as Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Lack of exercise and overwork were the causes that combined to almost kill Samuel S. Stephens, Jr., one of the best known citizens in Woodstock.

In his convincing letter Mr. Stephens says:

"A year ago I returned home after a long trip, completely worn out. I was so badly affected by chronic biliousness, so much overcome by constant headaches, dizziness, that I despaired of ever getting well. I was always tired and languid, had no energy and spirit, found it difficult to sleep for more than five hours. My appetite was so fickle that I ate next to nothing, and in consequence lost weight and strength. I was pale and had dark rings under my eyes that made me look like a shadow.

"It was a blessing that I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. In one week I felt like a new man. The feeling of weight and nausea in my stomach disappeared. My eyes looked brighter, color grew better, and, best of all, I began to enjoy my meals. The dizziness, languor and feeling of depression passed away, and I regained my old-time vigor and spirits. To-day I am well—thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

For health, strength, comfort and good spirits there is no medicine like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Beware of substitutes, and don't let any dealer palm off some other pill on which he can make more money. 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

Afraid of Ghosts

Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It increases the vital power, cleanses the system of clogging impurities, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no weak or tainted spot in which to breed. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients printed on its outside wrapper. It is not a secret nostrum but a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION and with a record of 40 years of cures. Accept no substitute—there is nothing "just as good." Ask your neighbors.

Scarcity of Laborers.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—A great scarcity of laborers is reported by George Barlow, city surveyor. He said yesterday morning that he could find employment for 300 or 400 more easily. "I wanted fifty and and got thirteen to-day. One of my foremen who wanted a gang, only secured one man, and he practically a cripple."

Mr. Barlow attributes the shortage of laborers to the great number of young men who have learned trades in the past few years. "We are paying twenty cents an hour, that is $2.00 per day for ten hours' work, and I consider it good pay for unskilled men."

Kidnapper Gets Life Sentence.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Giuseppi Nicolasi and his brother, Carmello, were yesterday sentenced to life imprisonment after they had been found guilty by a jury of kidnapping five-year-old Angelo Marino on August 5. Mrs. Coleraga Nicolasi, wife of Carmello, was sentenced to seven years in prison for complicity.

The Haunted Chamber

This is too much for her. Drawing herself up to her full height, Florence cast a glance of anger and defiance in his direction, and sweeping past him in her most imperious fashion, appears no more that night.

It is an early party, all things considered, and Dora Talbot, going to her room about two o'clock, stops before Florence's door and gently knocks thereon.

"Come in," calls Florence, gently.

"I have just stopped for a moment to express the hope that you are not ill, dearest," says smooth-tongued Dora, advancing toward her. "How early you left us! I shouldn't have known how early only that Mr. Dynecourt told me. Are you sure you are not ill?"

"Not in the least; only a little fatigued," replied Florence, calmly.

"Ah, no wonder, with your exertions before the dancing commenced, and your unqualified success! You reigned over everybody, darling. Nobody could hope even to divide the honors of the evening with you. Your acting was simply superb."

"Thank you," says Florence, who is not in bed, but is sitting in a chair drawn near the window, through which the moonbeams are flinging their pale rays. She is clad in a clinging white dressing-gown that makes her beauty saint-like, and has all her long hair falling loosely round her shoulders.

"What a charming evening it has been!" exclaims Dora ecstatically, clasping her hands, and leaning her arms on the back of a chair. "I hardly know when I have felt so thoroughly happy." Florence shudders visibly. "You enjoyed yourself, of course?" continues Dora. "Everybody raved about you. You made at least a dozen conquests. One, or half a one"—with a careful hesitation in her manner intended to impress the listener—"is as much as poor little insignificant me can expect."

Florence looks at her questioningly.

"I think one really honest lover is worth a dozen others," she says, her voice trembling. "Do you mean me to understand, Dora, that you have gained one to-night?"

Florence's whole soul seems to hang on her cousin's answer. Dora simpers, and tries to blush, but in reality grows a shade paler. She is playing for a high stake, and fears to risk a throw lest it be ventured too soon.

"Oh, you must not ask too much!" she replies, shaking her blonde head. "A lover—no! How can you be so absurd. And yet I think—I hope—"

"I see!" interrupts Florence, sadly. "Well, I will be as discreet as you wish; but at least, if what I imagine be true, I can congratulate you with all my heart, because I know—I know you will be happy."

Going over to Mrs. Talbot she lays her arms around her neck and kisses her softly. As she does so, a tear falls from her eyes upon Dora's cheek. There is so much sweetness and abandonment of self in this action that Dora for a moment is touched by it. She puts up her hand, and, wiping away the tear from her cheek as though it burns her, says lightly:

"But indeed, my dearest Flo, you must not imagine anything. All is vague. I myself hardly know what it is to which I am alluding. 'Trifles light as air,' float through my brain, and gladden me in spite of my common sense, which whispers that they may mean nothing. Do not build castles for me that may have their existence only in Espagne."

"They seem very bright castles," observes Florence, wistfully.

"A bad omen. 'All that's bright must fade,' sings the poet. And now to speak of yourself. You enjoyed yourself?"

"Of course"—mechanically.

"Ah, yes; I was glad to see you had made it up with poor Arthur Dynecourt!"

"How?" demands Florence, turning upon her quickly.

"I saw you dancing with him, dearest. I was with Sir Adrian at the time, and from something he said, I think he would be rather pleased if you could bring yourself to reward poor Arthur's loving devotion."

"Sir Adrian said that? He discussed me with you?"

"Just in passing, you understand. He told me, too, that you were somewhat unhappy in the early part of the evening, and that he had to stay a considerable time with you to restore you to calmness. He is always so kind; dear Adrian."

"He spoke of that?" demands Florence, in a tone of anguish. If he had made her emotion a subject of common talk with Mrs. Talbot, all indeed is at an end between them, even that sweet visionary offer of friendship he had made her. No; she could not submit to be talked about by him, and the woman he loves! Oh, the bitter pang it costs her to say these words to herself. That he now loves Dora seems to her mind to be beyond dispute. Is she not his confidante, the one in whom he chooses to repose all his secret thoughts and surmises?

Dora regards her cousin keenly. Florence's evident agitation makes her fear that there was more in that tete-a-tete with Sir Adrian than she had at first imagined.

"Yes; why should he not speak of it?" Dora goes on coldly. "I think by his manner your want of self-control shocked him. You should have a greater command over yourself. It is not good form to betray one's feelings to every chance passer-by. Yes; I think Sir Adrian was both surprised and astonished."

"There was nothing to cause him either surprise or astonishment," says Florence, haughtily; "and I could well have wished him out of the way!"

"Perhaps I misunderstood him," rejoins Dora, artfully. "But certainly he spoke to me of being unpleasantly delayed by—by impossible people—those were his very words; and really, altogether—I may be wrong—I believed he alluded to ou. Of course, I would not follow the matter up, besause, as I like Sir Adrian, I could not listen to him speaking lightly of you!"

"Of me—you forget yourself, Dora," cries Florence, with pale lips, but head erect. "Speaking lightly of me!" she repeats.

"Young men are often careless in their language," explains Dora, hurriedly, feeling that she had gone too far. "He meant nothing unkind, you may be sure!"

"I am quite sure"—firmly.

"Then, no harm is done"—smiling brightly. "And now, good-night, dearest, and go to bed instead of sitting there looking like a ghost in those mystical moonbeams."

"Good-night," says Florence, icily.

There is something about her that causes Mrs. Talbot to feel almost afraid to approach and kiss her as usual.

"Want of rest will spoil your lovely eyes," adds the widow, airily; "and your complexion, faultless as it always is, will not be up to the mark tomorrow. So sleep, foolish child, and gather roses from your slumbers."

So saying, she kisses her hand gaily to the unresponsive Florence, and trips lightly from the room.

Cost Motorist $1,000.

Toronto, Oct. 13.—A fine of $1,000 was imposed in the sessions yesterday, being sentence day in that court, and an intimation that the judicial mind of the bench is becoming alive to the necessity of taking noticeable action to stem the tide of reckless motor car driving in the city. It was imposed by Judge Winchester upon Alexander Tracey, who, while intoxicated, ran his powerful car into a crowd of people at Roncesvalles avenue and Queen street on Labor Day, injuring seven of them.

"Will any of that fine go to those injured?" asked Acting Crown Attorney Monahan.

"No," replied the judge; "he is liable to those people in civil actions. This money goes to the court."

Big Fellow Meets Tragic Death.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—John Phair, aged 46, an Ottawa bridge inspector, was instantly killed 150 miles below Quebec city. He was on what is known as a gasoline speeder, on a bridge, when it collided with a train. He was a man of exceptionally fine physique, being 6 feet 4 inches in height, and weighing 275 pounds. He leaves a widow and several children here.

Elections In New Brunswick?

St. John, N.B., Oct. 13.—Hon. J. D. Hazen, the new Minister of Marine of Canada, is home from Ottawa, and will tend Governor Tweedie his resignation as New Brunswick's Premier.

Hon. J. K. Fleming, or Hon. W. C. H. Grimmer, will be his successor. It is also likely to be determined at once whether or not the new Premier will make an immediate appeal to the people.

The last election was held in 1908, when the Conservatives turned out the Liberal Administration, the results showing: Conservatives, 31; Liberals, 10; Independents, 5.

AFTER FORTY YEARS

CAMDEN, S. C., WOMAN RECOVERS FROM STOMACH TROUBLE.

No one who is not well nourished can be good-natured. That is why dyspeptics are always irritable.

But stomach trouble can be cured in nearly all cases, even after years of suffering. Mrs. Sarah C. Ammons, Camden, S. C., says "I suffered from nervous dyspepsia for forty years and feared I should never get over it. It kept me in misery all the time. I was terribly run-down, could not sleep—thought my health was ruined.

"Last spring I began taking Vinol and it has no equal. I soon began to improve and now I am a well woman again for the first time in forty years. My appetite is good, I sleep well and have no stomach trouble at all. These are plain facts."

Take our word for it, when you are weak and run down, cannot eat or sleep, Vinol is what you need for it will build you up and make you strong. We guarantee Vinol to please—your money back if it does not.—Red Cross Drug Store, J. S. McKeown Belleville.

Can't Find Murdered Man.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—Felix Drouin, charged with the murder by shooting of an unknown man at his home in Ponsonby, Que., was arrested yesterday and is being brought to Hull. The arrest was effected by Sheriff Wright of Hill and Detectives McCaskill and Brousseau of Montreal.

A strange point about the case is that the body of the supposed victim has not been found and is thought to have been hidden.

The shooting took place Monday night, and while Drouin maintains he only fired into the air, three witnesses swore in obtaining the warrant that they saw the man fall, after which Drouin carried off the body. The place is isolated.

International Bank License.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—It now looks as if the International Bank of Canada would open its doors for business on Tuesday morning next. Rodolphe Forget, M.P., the president, stated last evening that it was expected that the long-delayed license would be granted on Monday. It is understood that Hon. W. S. Fielding has left a memorandum in the department giving the reasons for his persisting refusal in granting the license.

Driven From Their Homes.

San Bernardino, Cal., Oct. 13.—According to special despatches received here from Needles, the Colorado River has risen to its highest point of the year and has cut its way through the big dyke on the Arizona side.

Thousands of acres of reclaimed lands are flooded and the settlers are said to be abandoning their homes.

Fame and fortune await the artist who can paint a portrait of a woman to look as she thinks she looks.

By the time a man knows anything worth telling he is usually old enough to keep his mouth shut.

Kept Healthy By
Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Over fifty years ago people began to find out the effectiveness of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills in correcting constipation and toning up the system.

Since then the popularity of this reliable old family medicine has grown steadily, and the increase in sales during the past year was the greatest in the whole half century.

As long as livers get sluggish, bowels constipated or kidneys inactive, just so long will cure these conditions and banish their distressing effects for those who are wise enough to use them.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Sick headaches, coated tongues, indigestion, biliousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism and similar disorders are almost invariably caused by impurities which should be removed from the system by the bowels, the kidneys and the pores of the skin. By toning up these organs so that they can do their work properly, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure, or prevent altogether, a large proportion of the common everyday ailments which keep so many people miserable.

Hydro-Electric Power

The Ontario Government is now prepared to go ahead and extend the Hydro-Electric lines to rural districts. Hon. Adam Beck, chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission, states that the Government will erect high-voltage lines of 13,000 and 2,200 volts through the country districts and that the townships can then extend the power to the farmers and all people living in rural districts. There will then be no justifiable reason why townships and incorporated and police villages should not avail themselves of the opportunity of procuring electricity at cost for all household and farm purposes.

This move on the part of the Government at the instance of Mr. Beck and the Hydro-Electric Commission, is in the right direction, comments the Farmers' Advocate, and will make electric power possible on thousands upon thousands of farms throughout the province. Many districts will now be able to be served which heretofore could not handle the power, owing to the largeness of the outlay the municipality would have been obliged to make. This extension makes it feasible now for any municipality to get the power and a wide distribution of it throughout the country is looked for. The Farmers' Advocate further says:—

> It is needless to say more than has already been said about the possibilities of this hydro-electric energy on the farm. It can be used in so many different operations that its scope is practically unlimited. In the household it can be used for lighting, heating, cooking, ironing, washing, churning and several other household tasks. In the outbuildings, besides lighting, its use is very wide, pumping, milking, separating, sawing, chopping, and grinding, cutting feed, filling silos, threshing and many other branches of farm work which require power, being efficiently accomplished by its use. There is no other power which is equally efficient; and while the cost may seem a little high, yet, when considering that it can be used for such a variety of purposes, whereas the use of other power is more limited, the comparative cost is very materially lowered. Enthusiasts look forward to the time which we hope will be in the comparatively near future, when electric power will be used on the great majority of Ontario farms that can be reached by it and when our country highways will be lighted at night by this light. This latter point Mr. Beck considers practical because at night the power is not required for farm or household purposes, and could be used for lighting purposes by having a large lamp placed on the gate post of each farm. This latter may take time, but electric power will, we hope, soon be a reality on the farms throughout Ontario.

The Cause of the Turnover

The Montreal Witness was so solicitous of obtaining reasons for the Grit landslide on the 21st of September last that it asked for short letters of 100 words on the subject. Here is one from a Liberal; whether The Witness relish it or not, it has some good points in it, hence we reproduce it:

> To the Editor of the Witness:—
>
> Sir,—Your "symposium," as you editorially term it in issue of last evening, is a disgrace to journalism in a country like ours, made up of two peoples having a different religion, but who nevertheless live in perfect harmony with each other, save when bigots like yourself endeavor to stir up strife. Laurier is admired by every Canadian. His charm of manners, his ability as an orator, his magnetism as a leader is recognized all over Canada, and his religion had nothing to do whatever with the turnover, unless you count the few narrow-minded people like yourself, that you are inviting to say this was the cause that made the preponderating vote. Rant as you like, it was the Fielding-Paterson reciprocity deal, as the people viewed it, and that only, which accounted for the milk in the cocoanut.
>
> FORTY YEARS A SUBSCRIBER.
>
> Montreal, Oct. 5, 1911.

And here is another, which is very much to the point:

> To the Editor of The Witness:—
>
> Sir,—You invite opinions as to,—"Why the Turnover?" Because the United States for years have belittled Canada, and we took the opportunity to resent it. Because everyone is prospering in Canada, and a change is not wanted. Because deep down in our hearts we love our British connection, and we fear the result of closer trade relations with our Southern neighbors. Because we want a Protestant Premier in Canada, the same as England wants a Protestant King. ONTARIO.

General Election for Ontario

The announcement which was made by Sir James Whitney that a general election for the Ontario Legislature will be held early in December will not occasion much surprise in the public mind.

While it is not, in a general sense, desirable that a second political struggle should be entered upon so soon after the long and exciting campaign in which the country may be said to have been engaged from early in February last up to the 21st of September, yet the circumstances of the case are entirely exceptional, and, in our opinion, Sir James Whitney's determination in the premises is a wise one.

The fact that ten seats in the Legislature are vacant—nine of these by the resignation of the sitting members for the purpose of contesting elections to the Dominion Parliament, and the tenth by the retirement of a Provincial Minister in order to accept a highly responsible position in the Federal Cabinet—would alone constitute a valid reason for the holding of a general election. But when it is further considered that the term of the Legislature has but one more year to run and that a saving of some $15,000 will be effected by holding the general election now instead of a year hence, the conclusion that the course which the Provincial Cabinet has decided to pursue is the best possible in the interest of all concerned must be reached by every person whose judgment is not warped by political prejudice. In this, as in all their administrative acts, Sir James Whitney and his colleagues have shown that they have the courage to do what they deem to be right.

BYE-ELECTIONS LATER.

November 1 Proves, on Enquiry, To Be All Saints' Day.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—It looks like John Stanfield of Colchester, N.S., to succeed Hon. G. H. Perley as chief Conservative whip. Mr. Stanfield was assistant whip in the last Parliament and made a great success of the job.

Ottawa last night is a capital without a Government. The three branches of Parliament are all absent. Extraordinary preparations are being made to extend a fitting popular welcome to the royal Governor-General and his consort when they arrive on Saturday. The city is already ablaze with bunting and steps have been taken to hide the ugliness attendant upon the building of the Chateau Laurier and the new station.

Premier Borden announces that on account of November 1, the day fixed for polling in the bye-elections, being All Saints' Day and therefore a public holiday in the Province of Quebec, nominations and polling would be a little later. No date was fixed upon, but it is not expected to be more than two or three days later than previously arranged. Announcement will be made immediately the Cabinet returns from Quebec on Saturday.

In the meantime some progress has been made in locating the seatless Ministers. Hon. Robert Rogers is to have Alex. Haggart's seat in Winnipeg. George Gordon is likely to make way for Hon. Frank Cochrane in Nipissing and Hon. W. T. White stands a chance of getting East Middlesex, if a Senatorship can be found for Peter Elson.

SHERIDAN GETS LIFE

Orillia Youth Narrowly Escapes the Death Penalty.

Young Man Who Stabbed Ross Ford In a Fight Which Latter Provoked Pleads Guilty to Manslaughter After Jury Disagrees—Eleven Jurors Stood For a Verdict of Wilful Murder—Discrepanices In Evidence.

Barrie, Oct. 13.—Arthur Sheridan, who has been on trial for his life here for the stabbing of Ross Ford, near Orillia, last August, was yesterday sentenced to life imprisonment.

The jury after being out three hours and 20 minutes, returned and reported that they had been unable to reach a verdict.

Asked by the court if they were given a little more time to deliberate, did they think, they would be able to reach a verdict, James Findlay, the foreman, said that there might be a possibility. His lordship then ordered refreshments served to the men in their rooms, and they were asked to retire again.

One hour later they came in and reported that they had agreed to disagree, 11 standing for a verdict of willful murder and one for manslaughter.

The court then informed the jury that counsel for the defence, with the consent of the crown, had agreed to withdraw the plea of not guilty to the charge of murder, and would plead guilty to manslaughter.

After complimenting the jury on the way they had handled the case, his lordship said he was sure they would be satisfied with the sentence he would impose and that the ends of justice would be just as well met.

He then sentenced Arthur Sheridan to imprisonment for the rest of his natural life.

The prisoner, while hearing the verdict, retained the composure which has characterized him throughout the trial. His broter, who was standing near, seemed to show disappointment at the change of plea.

Evidence given by Drs. Kelly and Carson, who made post-mortem examinations of the body of Ford showed there were three wounds, one on the lower part of the back, one on the shoulder and the fatal one in the chest. Dr. Carson said the bent blade of the knife could have been caused by the force used in inflicting the wound.

The prisoner took the stand in his own defence at the morning session and, while he owned to the stabbing, contended that it was in self-defence. His testimony was substantially the same as that brought out yesterday in the confession made to the constable who arrested him.

Robert Thorburn said that on the night of the dance Ford had a pair of steel knuckles and said he was going to the dance, and if anyone said anything to him he would split the devil's mouth open.

T. C. Robinette, K.C., counsel for defence, made an eloquent, thoughtful and spirited appeal to the jury. He dealt on the comparative natures of his client and the murdered man. His client was quiet and inoffensive. Ford pugnacious and boasting. Apparently Ford sought the quarrel and his client tried to avoid it. There was no motive apparent for such a crime, admittedly no jealousy between the men, who were courting two sisters. It was the murdered man who called Sheridan out from the dance. Sheridan made no effort to conceal the knife, which was one he used in ordinary ways and there was no evidence of premeditation to murder anyone.

His lordship in instructing the jury, took a very decisive stand favoring the crown's case. He read the prisoner's written statement and compared it with his cross-examination, picking out discrepancies.

Cardinal Gibbons' Jubilee.

Baltimore, Oct. 13.—Archbishops, bishops, priests and laymen of national prominence, who are members of the Catholic Church, will gather in Baltimore next Sunday to attend the elaborate religious celebration of the dual jubilee of Cardinal Gibbons, marking the 50th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood and the 25th year of his cardinalate.

Mgr. Falconio, the papal delegate, will represent the Pope and bestow the pontiff's blessing.

Canada will be represented at the ceremonies by Archbishop Bruchesi, while the Archbishop of Mexico will come in person as the representative of his country and the other Latin-American countries.

Many of the visiting churchmen will remain and participate in the first national congress of the Holy Name societies of the United States, Canada and Mexico, which will be held on Monday and Tuesday.

Collision Near Drumbo.

Woodstock, Ont., Oct. 13.—Early yesterday morning the village of Drumbo was thrown into excitement by a report that the C.P.R. express from the west was on fire, near the station, and that the passengers were in danger. All rushed to the scene of the accident, 500 yards from the depot, where the flyer from Detroit had crashed into the caboose of a standing freight. No one was injured, but the escape of the freight conductor and brakeman, who were in the caboose, was miraculous. The caboose and one freight car were burned.

It is alleged that the conductor sent a brakeman to the rear to flag the express, and that he is missing. It is thought he fell asleep while waiting, and missed the flyer.

What ought not to be done, do not think of doing it.

The lie of an action is greater than the lie of a word.

SECOND CORPS LANDS

Italians Will Proceed at Once Against the Turks.

Land Expedition Under Gen. Caneva Will Proceed at Once Against the Defences of the Enemy Not Far From the City of Tripoli—Cholera Has Broken Out In Captured Town—Proclamation Is Issued.

Tripoli, Oct. 13.—Gen. Caneva, commander-in-chief of the Italian expedition, has decided to act quickly, and it is believed that the troops under him will march immediately against the positions occupied by the Turks. A reconnissance of the desert yesterday disclosed the central body of the Turkish troops with field guns not far from the city.

Nineteen more Italian transports, escorted by warships and carrying the second division of troops, arrived yesterday morning. The men were hastily landed. This division is 15,000 strong, and there are now 22,000 Italian soldiers on the coast of Tripoli for its defence ian occupation joyfully, but some of the warships remain in the harbor in readiness for emergencies. Troops were landed yesterday also at Benghazi, Derna, Tobruk and Bomba.

Although the utmost precautions have been taken looking to the perfecting of sanitary arrangements, cholera has broken out, and it is reported that four deaths have occurred.

Gen. Caneva has addressed a proclamation to the inhabitants, assuring them that they have not been enslaved by Italy. On the contrary, they have been liberated from the yoke under which they have been laboring for years. They will be ruled by their own chiefs under the patronage of the King of Italy. The religious and civil laws will be respected and taxes will be reduced or abolished.

The proclamation concludes by announcing that Italy desires that Tripoli shall remain the land of Islam, under the protection of Italy.

A part of the force landed yesterday will be sent to occupy Benghaze and Derna, Bomba and Tobruk. Smaller garrisons will be established at Marsa, Susa, Tokra, Medina, Lebda, Hissa, Mesurata and a few other points.

No Armistice.

Rome, via frontier, Oct. 13.—That an armistice has been arranged between Italy and Turkey, as reported from Berlin, is strenuously denied by the Italian Government.

A despatch from Trpioli to The Giornale d'Italia says that the Turkish Government, being unable to communicate directly with Munhir Pasha, commander of the former Turkish garrison at Tripoli, has telegraphed to the Turkish consuls at Tunis and Malta to instruct him to resist as long as possible.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Sudden Death.

Canfield, Ont., Oct. 13.—William Thornton, a retired farmer, who lived alone close to the village, died very suddenly at noon Wednesday. He walked to the field to inform a man who was plowing of a severe pain in his chest, returned to the house, where he was found lifeless half an hour later. Heart failure is supposed to be the cause.

NOW HON. WILLIAM.

Hearst Is Sworn In as Minister of Lands and Mines

Toronto, Oct. 13.—Hon. William Hearst, K.C., now holds the portfolio of Lands, Forests and Mines in the Ontario Cabinet as successor to Hon. Frank Cochrane, who has gone to the Borden Cabinet at Ottawa. Mr. Hearst was sworn in yesterday by Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

With the exception of Hon. J. J. Foy, who was out of town, all the members of the Provincial Cabinet were present, as well as George H. Gooderham, M.P.P., South Toronto, and Rance Howitt, M.P.P., of South Wellington.

Congratulations were extended to Hon. Mr. Hearst by his fellow-members of the Cabinet, after which the new Minister went to his office in the Department of Lands, Forests and Mines, where he made himself acquainted with his office staff.

HON. W. H. HEARST, K.C.

William Howard Hearst was born on a farm in Arran Township, in the County of Bruce, on Feb. 15, 1863, and is therefore 48 years of age. After attending the Collegiate Institute at Collingwood, he took up the study of law with the late Judge Masson of Owen Sound. On being called to the Bar Mr. Hearst began practice in Sault Ste. Marie, and has resided there ever since. He represents his home constituency in the Legislature, to which he was first elected a member in 1905.

ONLY STARTING.

Chinese Revolutionists Aim to Establish a Republic.

Hankow, Oct. 13.—The revolution which has been hanging over China for months past, and of which the rising in the Province of Sze-Chuen was only a small part, has begun in earnest. It is a concerted movement to take the empire and declare a republic. The noted exiled revolutionist, Dr. Sun Yet Sen, leader of the anti-Manchu party, if the plans do not miscarry, is to be elected president.

The revolutionaries have captured Wu-Chang, the native section of Hankow and Han-Yang, all adjoining cities in Hu-Peh Province. Chang-Sha, capital of Hunan, is reported to have risen in revolt, and Nanking, capital of the Province of Kiang-Su, is on the verge of a rising, several public buildings having been destroyed.

Troops Are Sent.

Peking, Oct. 13.—An imperial edict issued yesterday ordered the immediate despatch of two divisions of troops to the disaffected provinces. At the same time orders have been issued for the assembling in the Yang-tse-Kiang of a fleet of warships which are to unite with the land forces against the rebels. According to the official report at least ten thousand, and possibly fifteen thousand troops have mutinied in the Province of Hu-Peh alone. It is said that they captured thirty modern guns at Wu-Chang. There is an unconfirmed report that the revolutionists occupied Chang-Sha on Oct. 1.

Extraordinary precautions have been taken in Peking to prevent a rising, and large bodies of troops are guarding the palace.

Pelletier Unopposed.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—Hon. S. N. Parent, ex-chairman of the Transcontinental Railway Commission, who was here yesterday, stated that he was not going to run against Hon. L. P. Pelletier in Quebec County, and he was going to use whatever influence he had to prevent opposition to any of the new Ministers. This, of course, puts a quietus to the story that Sir Charles Fitzpatrick would resign and contest Quebec County with the Postmaster-General.

It is better to be nobly remembered than nobly born.

Oldest Oddfellow Dead.

St. Catharines, Oct. 13.—Samuel G. Dolson, for 41 years city assessor, passed away yesterday morning after a brief illness brought on by age. He had attained his 85th year. He was educated and spent his entire life in St. Catharines, figuring prominently in the construction of most of the larger buildings, either as contractor or architect. He was a prominent member of the Masonic and Oddfellow orders, being at the time of his death the oldest Oddfellow in all Canada, having been initiated in Union Lodge in this city on January 12, 1852, and held membership continuously ever since. He served as grand secretary in 1858 and nine years as Ontario grand master.

The deceased built the public arches in the city used at the time of the visit of the late King Edward as Prince of Wales in 1861. He was also the builder of the court house, Masonic Temple, Oddfellows' building, four churches and six schools. He served in the council and was deputy reeve in the old days. Besides being assessor he was a member of the local Board of Health for years. When the Government expropriated Queen Victoria Park, Niagara Falls, some years ago, he acted as valuator.

Many Messages to the Duke.

Ottawa, Oct. 12.—The following wireless message from the steamer Empress of Ireland has been received:

"The Duke of Connaught is receiving messages of welcome from every station and vessel passed. He received a greeting from Earl Grey, stating that the new Ministry was sworn in, and welcoming him to Canada. Connaught has already Marconied about twenty replies to the messages of courtesy.

"The duchess made a tour of the ship yesterday afternoon, visiting all classes aboard. The duke has already made a similar tour, and has had a cordial reception everywhere. Fine weather continues, and the Empress of Ireland is assuming a festive air. The steamer arrived at Rimouski about ten yesterday morning."

OPEN SORE BAFFLES DOCTORS.

Morriscy's No. 4 Eczema Ointment Healed Like Magic.

Nauwigewauk, N.B., Oct. 3, 1910

"I can gladly recommend dear Dr. Morriscy's Eczema Ointment because it cured me of a sore which I had on my ear for over 8 years. I did everything to have it cured, and had the most skillful doctors treating it, but it would not heal up. I went under treatment with Father Morriscy's Ointment, and in a short while it was cured. That was 3 years ago, and I am sure the cure is permanent. When I think how quickly No. 4 Eczema Ointment cured me it seems wonderful indeed, because you know I doctored with several skilled physicians who could not help me. You surely must have a big demand for this wonderful Salve. My only regret is that I did not use it at first, as it would have saved me over 8 years of pain, to say nothing of an unsightly ear and expensive doctor bills."

John Ryan.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morriscy prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

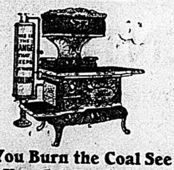
The Least Fuel, The Most Satisfaction



When You Burn the Coal See That You Get the Value

It requires no argument to prove that the range you can use every part of, at the same time, is the range that will give you the full return for the fuel you burn. On the

HAPPY THOUGHT

Range you can use the oven and the top of the stove at the same time. While ironing you can have a batch of biscuits in the oven, and when baking you can prepare dinner without cooling the oven. This is the only way to keep down fuel bills and the only true range economy. The Patent Damper regulates the heat so that it can be used on any part of the range or on all the range.

Everywhere the H[illegible] Thought, by its many labor-saving devices, is lig[illegible]ing the work of the housekeepers. Its efficiency is [illegible] result of the care taken to construct it and it amply justifies anything said in its favor by those who have used it.

BULGARIA'S MOVEMENTS ARE CAUSING ANXIETY

BERLIN, Oct. 11.—The attitude of Bulgaria towards the Turks in the present trouble is causing great anxiety here. There is no doubt that Bulgaria is hastily massing troops on the Turkish frontier and that the Porte is making counter moves. Consequently, the German Foreign Office has instructed Count Marschall von Bieberstein, the Ambassador of this country at Constantinople, to make serious remonstrances to the Porte, pointing out the danger of concentrating troops at this juncture on the Bulgarian frontier. The German Government has also requested Bulgaria to stop all war preparations in view of the present difficult position of the Turkish Government.

A WILD STEER CREATED HAVOC

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—A wild steer cavorted along Broadway to-day and bowled over a score of pedestrians and upset seevral vehicles before it finally dropped dead with no less than sixty bullet holes in its tough hide. The animal escaped while being driven down the gangway from a car that had brought it from the stockyards in Chicago.

Broadway was filled with men and women going to work when the steer, shaking its big horns and bellowing with rage and fright, ran from 50th Street to 33rd Street. Six policemen were in hot pursuit emptying their pistols as they ran, but none of the bullets seemed to stop the animal. Then it ran on to the sidewalk in the middle of a crowd and fell dead.

Although at least twenty persons were upset by the animal in its wild career, nobody received anything worse than bruises. On its way, the steer paused to enter the car barns of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, where it butted over five motormen and forced the other employees to seek safety inside their cars. At 49th Street a baker's wagon got in the way and in a jiffy the street was littered with fresh-baked rolls and bread. At 42nd Street the animal banged into a milk wagon and the milk and cream, destined for several hundred breakfasts, flooded the pavement. By this time several hundred volunteers had joined the police in their pursuit and pistols popped incessantly. The bullet that finally brought the animal down struck it in the head.

HE KISSED HER FIRST AND THEN EXPLAINED

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 12.—While standing at the desk of the Lankershim Hotel, Mrs. Harry J. Carlisle, wife of a Philadelphia investment broker, who was with her at the time, was approached by a non-commissioned naval officer who threw his arms about her and kissed her.

The husband started toward the officer to avenge a supposed insult, while the four or five brother naval officers attempted to pull him out of the way and apologized to Mrs. Carlisle.

Mrs. Carlisle, alarmed at first, surveyed the intruder as he was pulled away, then, uttering a cry, she ran toward him exclaiming "Brother Dick!" Thrusting herself in between the irate husband and the officer, she clasped his hand and began to weep. It was several minutes before explanations were offered.

"That was my wayward brother, who ran away from home five years ago, and who had been given up by the family as lost," said Mrs. Carlisle. "He went into the navy to make a name for himself, and intended to wait for his discharge in another year before returning home."

TURKISH TROOPS SHOT TOO HIGH

LONDON, Oct. 11.—Bennett Burleigh telegraphs from Tripoli to-day that he has visited the outposts, the scene of yesterday morning's fighting.

It seems probable that the affair was the outcome of combined efforts on the part of the Turks to destroy the machinery of the water supply of Tripoli at the pumping station at Boumeliana Springs. The Italian marines occupied a good position in a trench dug in low grounds. The Turks numbered about 500. They had three field guns. The marines opened fire on the enemy when they were about 300 yards distant. The Turkish reply was ineffective, as it was too high. The Italians assert that they did not lose a man. There were three Turks killed, and one wounded man was found, though there was evidence that other wonded had been carried off by their comrades. The Turkish soldiers were regulars, and they threw away much impedimenta as they made their retreat.

The Italian troops are now holding the whole line of outposts, and have even advanced in certain directions. The Italians claim that the military situation in Tripoli is now absolutely secure, and the population of Tripoli is said to rejoice at the prospect of a change of Government. Prominent Tyrks declare that they are quite sure that Tripoli will soon be placed under the protection of Italy and the fighting therefore practically ended.

PAINS OF RHEUMATISM

ARE ENDED BY ZAM-BUK.

When you have any deep-seated pain in the joints, the back, the wrists or anywhere, place a liberal supply of Zam-Buk on the fingers or on the palm of the hand and rub it in. The penetrating power of this "embrocation-balm" is very great. It kills pain and removes stiffness.

Mrs. Frances Wyatt, of 25 Guy Avenue, Montreal, says: "I have found Zam-Buk most soothing and valuable in a very bad case of rheumatism, and also for stiffness of joints and muscles. I suffered long and acutely from rheumatism, and tried one liniment after another in vain. I also took medicines internally, but it remained for Zam-Buk to effect a cure. I began applying this balm when I felt the aches and pains of rheumatism coming on, or felt any of the stiffness. The result was truly wonderful. Zam-Buk seemed to penetrate to the very seat of the pains driving them completely out, and I am now quite cured."

If rubbed on to the chest and between the shoulders in case of cold, Zam-Buk will give speedy relief.

Apart from its use as an embrocation, Zam-Buk is a cure for eczema, rashes, ringworm, cold sores, ulcers, abscesses, chapped hands, piles, varicose veins, cuts, burns, bruises, etc. All druggists and stores at 50c., or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful imitations.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BASE BALL

NATIONAL LEAGUE SEASON IS CLOSED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The pennant struggle in the National League was definitely decided ten days ago, but the official close of the championship season did not occur until to-day. Three games were played on the season's final day, the pennant-winning New York team dropping a double-header to Brooklyn, and the Chicago team, the runners-up, losing to Cincinnati. The positions of the eight clubs remain as they were when the battle for the flag was decided, the added days of play effecting no changes in the relative standing.

"It was a great season," said Thomas J. Lynch, President of the league, as he interrupted for a moment to-night his work as a member of the National Commission preparing for the world's series and talked briefly of the senior major organization's record during the past year.

It was baseball opinion here to-night that the agitation for an earlier closing of the season hereafter had hardly been helped by the fine weather that featured Columbus Day, now a legal holiday in this State, and the fact that a big and paying crowd witnessed the New York-Broolyn double-header. President Ebbets, of the Brooklyn club, has been one of the chief sponsors for a season lengthened out to include the Columbus Day holiday.

DUKE REACHES QUEBEC

His Royal Highness Stays Aboard Ship Over Night.

Group of Canadians Await Liner at Wharf and Go Aboard to Have Audience With New Governor-General—Messages of Congratulation Sent From All Over Canada — Premier Borden and Cabinet Hold Reception

Quebec, Oct. 13.—The Duke of Connaught is here.

Quietly, without firing of guns or blowing of whistles, the Empress of Ireland at six o'clock last night rounded the buoy in the channel and proceeded to dock at her wharf. It was a small crowd that waited to greet the boat which carried Canada's new Governor-General. The announcement which had been made in the afternoon papers, to the effect that the duke would not disembark until Friday morning, had kept the curious mob from gathering about the gates.

Those who did come were subjected to a careful scrutiny by police placed on the wharf for the purpose of keeping out only those who had business inside the enclosure.

At the foot of the gang-plank waited the small, silk-hatted, frock-coated group who were to be the first to greet H.R.H. on his arrival at Quebec. The group consisted of Thomas Mulvey, Under Secretary of State; Col. Sherwood, Dominion commissioner of police; Capt. Malcolm, Col. Sladen and the A.D.C. of the duke, who had come on ahead to prepare for his arrival. As soon as the way was cleared they went aboard. In the large saloon above, the Duke of Connaught, the Duchess of Connaught and the duke's staff were waiting.

As the visitors entered the duke greeted them with a hearty smile and a handshake all around. The meeting was most informal, and a stranger would never have suspected that the genial, white-moustached gentleman talking so affably was the duke of royal blood and Governor-General of Canada.

When Col. Sherwood was introduced to him as the Dominion commissioner of police, he at once was interested and asked the colonel many questions as to exactly what the position meant, and the general policing system of Canada.

Several messages were brought to him during the half hour following his arrival, and several were despatched to different parts of Canada, replying to the congratulations which he had received. Col. Lowther, military secretary to His Royal Highness, was a very busy man. He was not too busy, however, to give a short audience to the newspaper men who had come aboard.

"No," he said, when asked if the duke would say a word of greeting to the Canadian people, through the newspaper men present, "royalty never gives interviews."

He was quite willing, however, to talk about the trip across. "We had only one bad day," he said. "Otherwise the trip was delightful." The duke and duchess showed the keenest interest in everything on the boat. The duke examined the third-class section on Sunday and was given a rousing cheer by the passengers there, who had been notified of his coming. On Wednesday the duchess made a tour of the ship. They were both very affable and chatted freely with the passengers throughout the voyage.

"The duke received messages of congratulation from almost every ship that passed; I think there were 17 in all. Coming up the river he had a message from Lieutenant-Governor Gibson of Ontario, and Col. MacNaughton of Cobourg. Incidentally, I have just wired Col. MacNaughton that the duke bears with him the order of C.V.O. for him, in recognition of his services in connection with the trip of the artillery team to England recently."

The duke invited Sir Charles and Lady Fitzpatrick, Col. Sherwood, Col. Sladen and one or two others to dinner with him on board ship.

At 11 o'clock Premier Borden arrived in Quebec with the members of the Cabinet. They went to the Chateau Frontenac, where an impromptu reception was held in the lobby.

Everything is in readiness for the swearing in and reception yesterday. The city is in gala attire, the stores, the stations, the wharves, being covered with bunting. The City Hall has been especially decorated with colored lights, and altogether the ancient capital has an appearance worthy of the momentous occasion.

There was a well-defined rumor that Earl Grey had dined with the Duke of Connaught on board the Empress of Britain. The statement of the secretary was that, according to etiquette and custom, the two Governor-Generals are not supposed to be on colonial territory at the same time. This rule was not broken. It is claimed that until the Duke of Connaught leaves the steamer and puts foot on land, he is still theoretically at sea, and to avoid criticism, however, the visit was made as secret as possible.

GROWS HAIR ON BALD HEADS

BALD-HEADED PEOPLE MAY GET A NEW CHANCE IN LIFE.

In these days when youth is the moving factor in business, when a man makes his mark at thirty-five and is ready to retire at forty-five, when business house pension the man we call "middle-aged" rather than allow his lagging influence to intrude upon the commercial rush, a bald head is almost fatal to any man's hopes. The following must therefore prove interesting to people who are losing their hair who are bald.

Resorcin is the latest and most effective germ killer discovered by science, and in connection with Beta Napthol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which destroys the germs which rob the hair of its nutriment, and also creates a clean, healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the development of new germs.

Pilocarpin is a well-known agent for restoring the hair to its natural color, where the loss of color has been due to a disease of the scalp. Yet it is not a coloring matter or a dye.

This combination of curatives mixed with alcohol as a stimulant perfects a most effective remedy for hair and scalp troubles.

The famous Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is chiefly composed of Resorcin, Beta Napthol, and Pilocarpin. It helps to make the scalp healthy, to nourish the hair, to stimulate the follicles. Where the head is already bare, it enters the follicles, revitalizes the roots, supplies nourishment, and stimulates a new growth.

We want you to try a few bottles of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic, on our personal guarantee that the trial will not cost you a penny if it does not give you absolute satisfaction. That's proof of our faith in this remedy and it should indisputably demonstrate that we know what we are talking about when we say that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will grow hair on bald heads, except, of course, where baldness has been of such long duration that the roots of the hair are entirely dead, the follicles closed and grown over, and the scalp is glazed.

Remember, we are basing our statements upon what has already been accomplished by the use of Rexall "93" Hair Tonic, and we have the right to assume that what it has done to hundreds of others it will do for you. In any event your cannot lose anything by giving it a trial, on our liberal gurantee. Remember, you can get Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store.—J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

System in Salesmanship.

"Young man," says the automobile manufacturer to the new salesman who has astonished the organization by the rapid-fire sales he has made in the two months of his employment, "I must congratulate you on our work."

"Thank you, sir," replies the new salesman modestly.

"I know we build the best auto in the market," says the manufacturer, "but even at that I cannot understand how you can sell ten times as many machines as the very best men we have had prior to you. How do you do it?"

"Well, sir," explains the new salesman, the light of honest pride in his eyes, "I always ask the customer to take a ride in one of our machines as the first move toward getting acquainted with its riding qualities. Of course he accepts the invitation. I then take him out on the boulevard and get arrested and fined for fast turning. After that there is no argument."

WIRE TAPPERS CLEAN UP $50,000

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Racing men learned to-day of a genuine wire tapping scheme which is reported to have been successfully operated in New York yesterday with a loss to pool room operators of more than $50,000. The scheme was manipulated, it is said, by tapping a telegraph wire from the Louisville grounds. According to the story the men interested laid heavy bets in all the poolrooms in the city on a horse named Rudolfo. Care was taken to select a horse that sold at short odds so as to distract any suspicion. When the report came into the various pool rooms it was found that Rudolfo had won. All the tickets were cashed in due time and the winners departed with large sums.

It was two hours later when the pool-room men learned that Rudolfo had finished eighth. Investigation showed that the wire had been tapped.

AFTER WOMEN CARD SHARPS IN NEW YORK

Managers of progressive euchre tournaments given in Brooklyn by various churches, benevolent societies and charitable organizations are disturbed over stories to the effect that organized bands of women card sharps are attending these affairs and capturing many of the best prizes offered.

These women are said not only to be clever players, but unscrupulous in their methods. If they find that they cannot win by fair means they resort to cheating, it is said, two or three of them working together.

At most of the public euchres held in Brooklyn the chief prizes range in value of $25 to $50. Sometimes the first prizes are worth as high as $100 each. What the sharpers do with the prizes they carry off is not known. It is supposed, however, that they sell many of them, and manage in the course of a season to realize quite a pretty penny. The committee who manage the euchres have heard of the operations of these women and are on the watch for them.

A TURKISH ROBIN HOOD AND HIS BOLD BAND OF OUTLAWS

How Tchakirdji, Brigand Chief of Smyrna, Defies New Turkey—A Bandit by Heredity—Lives by Blackmail and Plunder—Kind to the Poor, and Pays Double for Purchases

Among the many picturesque, if inconvenient institutions of Turkey, that modern mediæval state, Tchakirdji, the brigand chief of Smyrna, is not the last romantic. A few miles away in the mountains behind one of the chief cities of the empire he lives with his band of freebooters, and leads in the twentieth century a life that corresponds in close detail to that followed by Robin Hood.

A few weks ago for instance, he appeared in the market place of the village of Gureli, in the province of Smyrna, accompanied by eight men.

Going to the house of the head man he ordered that the inhabitants—there are only some fifty families in the village—should be assembled. With fear and trembling the order was obeyed. Standing, contemptuously with his little group of followers in the midst of the crowd, Tchakirdji intimated that the first business of the evening would be the provision of supper for himself and his men. The elders explained with deep obeisance that the resources of the village were so low that nothing but the most meagre provisions were available.

Tchakirdji consented to waive the supper. He would now, he said, proceed to the main object of his visit. He gave a sign to his men and in a few moments the heads of ten of the leading inhabitants were rolling on their own market place amid the wailing of their fellow townsmen.

"I am fairly sure," exclaimed Tchakirdji in the brief address with which he closed the proceedings, "that it was through the denunciations of one of you that my comrade Siman Mohmet, was surrounded and killed by the soldiers near here some months ago. I have now avenged him and I hope that this may serve as a lesson to any one who may be tempted to betray me or my companions. I will kill informers without pity, and, if neccessary, the innocent shall pay for the guilty."

With this the brigand and his friends withdrew, and except for a futile expedition of a company of soldiers into the mountains after him, which returned with nothing but marching to its credit, this has been the end of the affair.

The other evening I met at dinner a Turkish Government official who has met Tchakirdji. "I was carrying out a Government survey in the mountains behind Smyrna," he said. "As I sat in my tent one evening a young man came in, saluted me, sat down, took the cigarette I offered him and began to talk. I thought he was some local notable paying me a call. He was about thirty, tall, with a frank open expression and a straightforward bearing, and he spoke like an educated mna. He stayed about ten minutes and when he had gone my servant came to me and said: "Do you know who that was, Effendi?" It was Tchakirdji, who has killed in the last twelve years, 700 men."

Tchakirdji is a bandit by heredity. He succeeded his father who was killed in an encounter with the troops. The peasants of the Smyrna village both fear and love him. His vengeance upon those who under the influence of the tortures or the bribes of Government officials, aid the expeditions sent after him with information is ample and inevitable. On the other hand he never robs the poor, he pays double for all provisions that he buys, and his gifts are sometimes almost princely. Only last year [illegible]orts credit him with having sent to a beautiful but dowerless girl whose [illegible] prevented her from marriage, a dot of $1,000.

Tchakirdji lives by blackmail varied with plunder. Last year he took $35,000 in specie from the Government mail in the Smyrna village, but his more usual resource is to write, courteously enough to local personages of means, requesting the dispatch to places of rendezvous in the mountains of sums varying from $500 to $2,500.

He uses the same method, too, to interest his patron in works of public utility. A village bridge badly required repair. Tchakirdji pointed out by letter to a wealthy Turk of the neighborhood that the benefit of an entirely new bridge could be conferred on the locality at a cost of about $5,000. Three times this message was repeated without effect. Then one evening as the rich man was gathered with the rest of the village in the mosque at the time of prayer. Tchakirdji with about a dozen armed men appeared at the door. Leaning his rifle against the wall he took off his shoes and joined the kneeling throng in their silent prostrations. When his prayer was finished Tchakirdji walked quietly over to the rich man, who had not seen him enter the mosque, and touched him gently on the arm. The man started up, but Tchakirdji nodded his head toward the little escort waiting outside the door, and in a few moments the tardy public benefactor was on horseback on the way to an unknown destination in the mountains.

He returned thinner in a few weeks' time when his friends had sent $10,000 in gold to a secluded meeting place. Then at last began the reconstruction of the ruined bridge. A gang of workmen appeared under the direction of a young Greek. The latter was at once arrested as an accomplice of Tchakirdji. He denied all knowledge of the brigand. He was a young master builder; he had received written instructions, with a remittance of money, to carry out this work. It was his first big job, and he had asked no questions.

The young Greek was shut up in an insanitary jail at Thera as a measure of precaution, and the work on the bridge was stopped. Three days afterward there was an alarm of fire at a village three miles from Thera, and half the garrison was sent off there to put it out. Hardly had they gone when there came another call for fire at a village five miles away on the other side. The rest of the troops hurried off to the scene of the second alarm.

Then into the empty town dashed Tchakirdji and his men. They slew the few sentries that were left, carried off the Governor and the commander of the garrison together with the imprisoned Greek, and were on their way to the mountains before the weary troops got back to Thera from their false alarms. The negotiations that arranged for the release of the captured prisoners, arranged also for the completion of the bridge.
